SHERDEL IS WILD IN FIRST INNING

Passes Give New York First Run and Sharp Batting Attack in Sixth Clinches Game, 2 to 1.

BY ALAN J. GOULD.

New York, October 2.—(AP)—The southpaw wizardry of Willowy Herb Pennock and the punch in the big bats of burly Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig today carried the New York Yankees to triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals in the opening skirmish of the 1926 battle for the world's baseball championship.

A crowd of close to 62,000, falling just short of record proportions, but nevertheless forming a spectacular background to the conflict in the Yankee stadium, saw victory perch on the banner of the American league champions by the narrow margin of 2 to 1.

Fought out on a hazy battleground, occasionally moistened by light showers, it was a close and tensely waged struggle from start to finish, even if it failed to reach particularly thrilling heights.

It was a convincing victory for the Yankees, nevertheless, for they outsteadied, outgeneraled and outplayed the first team that St. Louis ever has sent in quest of baseball's premier crown.

Pennock's Feat.

Pennock, twirling with cool and baffling skill, held the slugging National league champions to three hits altogether, allowing not the semblance of a safe hit over a seven-inning stretch from the first to the ninth frames.

Registering his third triumph in world's series competition, Pennock gave a masterful exhibition, yielding his only run in the first inning on a double by Douthit and a scratch single by Bottomley, then mowing down the Cardinals with machinelike regularity until the eighth when the Yankee ace pulled himself together after a brief spell of wildness.

Willie Sherdel, portside star of the Cardinal staff, matched his slow ball against Pennock's cross fire, but contributed to his own downfall by an erratic start in the first inning, while Yankee bats got to him for the winning run in the sixth. He gave way in the eighth to Jess Haines after being replaced at bat by a pinch hitter.

Babe Leads Attack.

Babe Ruth led the sortie that gave the Yankees their winning run in the sixth inning and brought about the downfall of Sherdel. Singling sharply through third base, the Babe advanced on Bob Meusel's neatly placed sacrifice bunt and raced home on Lou Gehrig's rousing single to right field.

When Lazzeri followed with another single, it looked as though the Yankees were about to stage one of their

Assistance of U. S. In European Plans For Peace Is Urged

Stresemann Quotes From Speech of Coolidge in Support of Efforts at Reconciliation.

"WAR GUILT" TALK OF POINCARE HIT

German Brands as 'Myth' Assertion His Country Alone Caused Great World Conflict.

BY ERIC KEYSER.
United News Staff Correspondent.

Cologne, Germany, October 2.—With an olive branch in one hand and an unconcealed brick in the other, Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany, approached the subject of German relations with France today in one of the most interesting speeches on this subject which has been made since the attempt began to bury the old war differences.

Addressing a meeting of the folks party, Stresemann declared that the Franco-German reconciliation now in progress was the keystone of European pacification and besought the collaboration of the United States in furthering this program, even to the point of quoting from a speech by President Coolidge in support of his policy.

But with a vigor which was far from conciliatory, Stresemann let loose an attack upon President Poincare of France for the latter's recent revival of the contention that Germany alone was guilty of starting the war.

Germany, Stresemann said, was ready to submit to an impartial court of arbitration the question of responsibility for the war. He referred to Poincare's utterances as a "painful aftermath to our policy of pacification." He said the world was too well-informed to lend credence to the "myth" that Germany alone caused the war and asserted that "mankind is entitled to know the truth."

Sees American Support.

In the more friendly side of his speech, Stresemann affirmed his belief that his recent conference with Foreign Minister Briand, of France, at Thoiry, in which the two foreign ministers reached a tentative political-economic agreement, coincided with American policy and was assured of American support. He referred to a speech delivered by President Coolidge in June, 1925, in which the president urged that the peoples of the old world conclude mutual security agreements based on the principle of arbitration.

"I believe," Stresemann added, "that the words of the American president apply to reconciliation in Europe and that the policy of Thoiry merits the world's approval."

Stresemann emphasized that the scheme for Franco-German raprochement required the participation of foreign nations and the reparations authorities.

"I expect the Thoiry policy to find

$2,000,000 ART EXHIBIT FEATURES MUSEUM OPENING

Leaders in Art Circles of Southern Cities Coming to Atlanta for Exposition.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Leaders in art circles in all parts of the south are coming to Atlanta to attend the dinner at the Biltmore hotel on Saturday evening, October 16, and the formal opening of the new High Museum of Art on Peachtree street, the following days. Many have already written asking about arrangements and the names of all prominent people in art circles in Charleston, New Orleans, Nashville, Memphis, Birmingham, Macon and other cities in the southeast are included in the list of formal invitations to the banquet which are to be mailed on Tuesday, next. All of these cities have art associations of their own and an invitation will be sent to each association, inviting any officers or members who wish to attend the Atlanta opening to come.

In addition to these out-of-town guests there will be a score or more of the most famous American artists here for the dinner and opening. The new museum is to be opened with a two-week exhibition by the Grand Central Art Galleries of New York, an organization which has at its command practically all the best works of all the greatest living American painters and sculptors. Word from New York declares that the officers of the galleries have gathered together a collection of paintings and sculpture for the Atlanta showing, which will surpass in interest and value any previous collection of modern American art. It is conservatively valued at $2,000,000 and will be insured in that amount before leaving the specially packed express cars for this city.

The dinner on Saturday, October 16, will be in honor of Mrs. J. M. High, the generous donor of the property which has been converted into the new Atlanta museum, and to meet and welcome the distinguished artists who will be here, as well as the officials

HOWELL LIFE PLEA DENIED BY WALKER

Slayer of Bibb County Deputy Goes to Electric Chair on November 19.

John Howell, sentenced to death for the slaying of Henry Green, Bibb county deputy sheriff, Saturday was denied executive clemency by Governor Walker, although the governor granted a respite from October 5 until Friday, November 19.

Setting out that Howell has lived a life in defiance of law, and that every legal right has been accorded him in his fight for life, Governor Walker declared in the denial of clemency there were no grounds for sparing Howell's life and that he must die for the slaying.

In order that Howell may prepare for death, Governor Walker attached an order to the denial of clemency stating that the date of the execution of the sentence shall be postponed from October 5 until Friday, November 19, when Howell shall legally be put to death by electrocution at the state prison farm at Milledgeville.

The condemned man, sentenced for the slaying of the Bibb county deputy sheriff in May, 1924, is lodged in the county jail at Macon. In addition to Judge J. A. Mathews, who pre-

MACHINE POLITICS ISSUE IN RUNOVER, ASSERTS HARDMAN

Dr. Hardman Urges Voters To 'Stand by Cause and Right Will Triumph' In Last Statement.

REVIEWS ISSUES AS RACE CLOSES

Commerce Candidate 'Deplores Personalities' and Says He Has Not 'Deceived Georgians.'

Declaring that as the gubernatorial campaign draws to a close he can "say in good conscience" that he has not deceived voters of Georgia, Dr. L. G. Hardman Saturday issued an appeal to Georgians to "stand by the cause" and right will triumph."

Dr. Hardman's statement, in which he summed up issues of the campaign and declared that "machine politics" was the outstanding issue, was in the nature of a final appeal to voters for support in the run-over primary next Wednesday. He urged voters to go to the polls and "be not misled because a new day is dawning in Georgia."

Referring to charges and bitterness in the campaign, Dr. Hardman said he "regretted that personalities should have been injected" and hoped that voters would not be "misled" regarding the "demerits and deserts" of candidates.

Dr. Hardman's statement follows:

"My campaign for the governorship is now entering upon its final stage, and I can say in good conscience that I have not attempted to decieve the people of Georgia in a single fact. My private life and public service is an open book, and I invite every man in Georgia to read it. There is not a page that I would conceal. I confess with a feeling akin to sadness that my accomplishments for the public good have fallen short of my earnest endeavors.

"And, as both customary and legitimate, I have turned the light of publicity upon the public acts of my opponent in order that you may judge us according to our demerits and deserts. Further than this I have not gone. It has not been necessary, and neither would it have been charitable, to resort to wholesale abuse. Such tactics would only have confused the issue without serving any useful purpose.

One Issue in Race.

"As I see it, and have often told you, there is but one issue in this campaign, and all the mud and dust in Mr. Holder's roads can not obscure it. There is but one question for the voters to answer at the polls. Shall the business of the whole people be turned over to a man who has proven recreant to every trust, has proven himself incompetent after years of experience, and has proven himself indifferent to the public good while he sought to build a political machine for his own aggrandizement?

"I have no concern with the private life of John Holder. He may delve into mine to his heart's content. But when he offers himself as a candidate for the biggest job in the state of Georgia, his record in the job he now

SUCCESS AT POLLS SEEN WEDNESDAY BY HOLDER FORCES

Holder Counties Carried in First Primary Held and Others Added, Statement Reads.

VOTERS AROUSED SAYS HAMILTON

'Sweeping Victory' Claimed for Jefferson Man in Run-Over Election on October 6.

"John N. Holder, the leading candidate for governor in the first primary, will win a splendid victory in the run-over race with Dr. Lamartine G Hardman, next Wednesday," according to a statement issued Saturday by Thomas J. Hamilton, campaign manager for John N. Holder.

"Mr. Holder's popular plurality of 5,000 votes over Dr. Hardman, George H. Carswell and J. O. Wood in the primary of September 8, will be increased by many thousand and he will enter the state convention with a tremendous majority of the county unit votes.

'Confidence in Mr. Holder's nomination is based on political sentiment in the several counties of Georgia, as reflected in the first primary, considered in the light of developments during the past two weeks.

"Jackson county, which claims the distinction of being the hope of both Mr. Holder and Dr. Hardman, is indicative of the situation throughout the state. In the primary of September 8 the people of Jackson county rallied in such numbers to the support of Mr. Holder that he defeated Dr. Hardman by a majority of 189.

Jackson Claimed.

"A careful canvass of Jackson county, on the eve of the run-off, convincingly foreshadows a substantial increase in Mr. Holder's popular majority and conversely indicates a shrinkage in Dr. Hardman's popular vote. In a word, Dr. Holder's lead of 189 votes in the first primary among the people who know the candidates best will be swelled to upwards of 500 votes next Wednesday.

"The situation in Jackson county helps in part to explain conditions throughout the state of which it is typical; that is to say, the overwhelming indorsement of Mr. Holder as against Dr. Hardman by the people among whom they have lived has been a tremendous factor in the campaign that will come to a climax next Wednesday with Mr. Holder's nomination for governor.

"The tabulated returns of the first primary help to eliminate conjecture and speculation as to the result in the run-over. They reveal that, besides polling a popular plurality over Dr. Hardman and his allies on September 8, Mr. Holder was either the first or second choice of the voters in 134 counties. In most of the counties in which he ran second, he was only a

AIMEE TO PICTURE SELF AS MARTYR IN SERMON TODAY

Illustrated Talk Will Portray Part of Martyrdom in Development of Christianity.

BY DAN CAMPBELL.
United News Staff Correspondent.

Los Angeles, October 2.—Prayers and a renewed attack on "the persecution of the devil" will occupy the evangelist, Aimee Semple McPherson, over the week-end.

"The devil," according to the famous Bible teacher who is having her preliminary hearing on charges of conspiring against justice, is District Attorney Asa Keyes, who has put her through a turbulent week in court by introducing testimony intended to show that her kidnaping story was only a blind for a love tryst with her radio operator, Kenneth Ormiston.

Plans Counter Attack.

The hearing will be resumed Monday, but during the recess over Sunday the evangelist has planned a strong counter attack.

At her magnificent Angelus temple Sunday, Mrs. McPherson will lead special prayer services and will give a picture sermon, tending to prove that she is being persecuted like "the martyrs of old."

The picture sermon, she announced today, would portray the part martyrdom had in the development of Christianity.

Starting with the nailing of Jesus to the cross, the announced picture sermon will trace persecution down to the burning of Joan d'Arc.

"I will show how the cradle of every great religious movement was rocked by dastardly persecution and diabolic opposition and slander," Mrs. McPherson declared today.

She compared her persecution with all of the famous persecutions of history including the beheading of John the Baptist and the torture of Christians by Nero.

"But I will win," she said. "Prayer will give me force to battle the forces which are pitting their strength against me."

The charges of conspiring against justice were brought against the evangelist as an outgrowth of the kidnaping story she told following her mysterious disappearance from Ocean Park last summer and her later reappearance on the desert near Agua Prieta, Mexico.

Others involved in the conspiracy case, along with Mrs. McPherson and Ormiston, are Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, the evangelist's mother; Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman Sellaff and "John Doe" Martin.

PARK SURVEY ROW LOOMS IN COUNCIL

Alderman Ford To Attack Employment of National Expert on Playgrounds by Parks Committee.

A councilmanic fight over the continued employment of an expert surveyor of the Playground and Recreation Asociation of America, is slated for Monday, it was announced Saturday, when Alderman Charles M. Ford, of the tenth ward, stated he will lead the attack on further employment of T. S. Settles, nationally-known expert.

Mr. Ford declared that while he has no personal feeling in the matter, he is inherently opposed to the employment of experts and will seek to have council instruct the parks committee, headed by John A. White, to discontinue the services of Mr. Settles.

This is sure to precipitate a battle, with Mr. Ford arraigned against Mr. White and other members of the parks committee, it was stated Saturday.

Services Important.

"The services of this association and of Mr. Settles are of the utmost importance in making the year-round recreational program of the Atlanta playgrounds successful," Mr. White said. "The committee and the super-

Dickman Reported To Have Made Affidavit Money Was Paid to Him by Henry Carpender.

BRIBE WAS GIVEN TO LEAVE STATE

Warrant Issued for Detective — Five Victories Won by Prosecution in Court Saturday.

New York, October 2.—(AP)—The New York Times will say tomorrow it learns authoritatively that Henry L. Dickman, former New Jersey state trooper, has made an affidavit averring he was paid $2,500 by Henry De La Bruyere Carpender to drop his inquiry of the Hall-Mills murder case early in 1923. Carpender is one of the four persons indicted for the murder of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

The affidavit, The Times will say, was obtained by the state from Dickman at Governor's Island last Wednesday after he had been brought from California, where he was an army prisoner.

Carpender is a cousin of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, widow of Dr. Hall.

She and her brothers, Harry and Willie Stevens, are also under indictment.

Dickman is said to have conducted a lone investigation of the murder mystery during the fall of 1922 and the spring of 1923. He has told present investigators that he thought he had solved the mystery. The Times will say, he asserts in his affidavit he laid his findings before F. D. Davis, Middlesex county detective, but that David received his disclosure with skepticism.

FIVE VICTORIES WON BY PROSECUTION.

Somerville, N. J., October 2.—(AP)—At a hearing marked by the dramatic defeat of defense lawyers on five important counts, Supreme Court Justice Parker today set November 30 for the beginning of the trial of four persons charged with the murders of Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, widow, and her brothers, Henry and Willie Stevens, will be tried at one time.

Henry Carpender, their cousin, will be tried seperately, later.

A struck jury, one composed of men or women selected on the basis of unbiased fairness and mental balance, will be picked for the trials.

In addition to its defeat in opposition to these three points, the defense was denied two applications. Justice Parker refused them permission to examine the grand jury minutes taken in 1922 after the first investigation and denied the application for a view of Dr. Hall's calling card, which, according to the state, was marked by the finger prints of Willie Stevens and another person, yet unnamed. The card was found at the feet of the slain rector.

Soon after the proceedings a warrant, charging "accessory after the fact," was issued for the arrest of Felix Di Martini, of New York, a private detective employed by Mrs. Hall early in the investigation.

TINNEY, COMEDIAN, IS SERIOUSLY ILL FROM BREAKDOWN

Detroit, October 2.—(AP)—Frank Tinney, noted comedian whose matrimonial troubles have attracted nation-wide attention, is in a serious condition here suffering from a nervous breakdown, as well as injuries sustained in a fall.

Tinney was unable to complete his part last night in Earl Carroll's Vanities in which he was appearing here, and was ordered to bed by his physician. Later he was to be removed to a hospital.

Dr. Leo Dretska, Tinney's physician, said the comedian had a pulse of 120 tonight and was suffering from a nervous disorder. He fell while alighting from a taxicab in Syracuse last week and fractured two ribs which is adding to the complications.

Joe Cook, a co-star in the show with Tinney, said the latter had been in ill health for some time and had been continuing his work against the advice of friends.

DECLARES MAILING LISTS BEING USED BY POLITICIANS

Governor Informs State Treasurer He Will Not Honor Warrants Pending Investigation.

'FLAGRANT ABUSE' HIT BY GOVERNOR

Letter to Treasurer Says Lists of Bulletin Are Used for 'Private Political Purposes.'

Charging that mailing machinery of the Market Bulletin, publication of the state bureau of markets and a subsidiary of the state department of agriculture, together with a mailing list compiled at great expense for exclusive use by the state is being used for private political purposes, Governor Clifford Walker Saturday served notice that he will honor no more warrants for expenses of the Market Bulletin.

The chief executive in a letter to State Treasurer William J. Speer declared he took this step because "there can be no doubt" of the use for political purposes of the state agricultural department, an allusion to recent charges that John N. Holder, candidate for governor, is mailing campaign letters throughout the state bearing address slips of the state Market Bulletin, which is under control of J. J. Brown, commissioner of agriculture who was recently defeated by Eugene Talmadge, of McRae.

"I will approve no more warrants covering expenses of the Market Bulletin," Governor Walker wrote State Treasurer Speer," until I am satisfied as to just how much of the expenditure involved is to be properly charged to the public service.

Politics Charged.

"I am sending you this notice as the result of the evident use for political purposes of the mailing list of the Market Bureau Bulletin, this list aggregating, as I am advised, 70,000 names compiled and printed at a great cost to the state. There can be no possible doubt of the use of this mailing list this week for political purposes. The entire list has evidently been used for political purposes, the addresses being clipped from the printed roll and placed on the envelopes instead of on the Market Bulletin, for which the list was prepared. This is a flagrant abuse of the function of the agricultural department."

The governor promised a "careful investigation" of the situation and instructed the state treasurer to hold up all warrants pending its outcome.

Commissioner Brown, of the agricultural department, could not be reached at his office for a statement in connection with the governor's charge that the state list was being used for private political purposes. Mr. Brown is in direct charge of the

Time To Call The Doctor

One man said to another: "When my wife isn't able to get to a bargain sale she calls the doctor."

Probably he thought he was saying something funny, but he wasn't. His wife was undoubtedly one of those women who have to figure very close to make her allowance cover the necessary expenditures of the household.

Consequently when she saw a bargain announcement in which she could save money—and she wasn't physically able to get there, well, she was sick enough to need a doctor.

Suppose you take time to read the advertisements in this issue of The Constitution. You'll find splendid bargains in everything, and you will be interested in many of the offerings. Remember——

Insult To King Is Seen In Wells' New Novel

"WILLIAM CLISSOLD" STIRRING ENGLAND

London, October 2.—(AP)—In the opinion of one reviewer, a public insult has been flung at King George in H. G. Wells' three volume installment plan novel, "William Clissold," the second section of which was published yesterday. Other reviewers are astonished at what are called the "impertinances" of Wells' character in dealing with the living great and near-great of the present day.

"A worthy, conscientious and entirely unmeaning and uninteresting son of plump old Edward VII," is Clissold's characterization of the British monarch.

Clissold remarks on "parading attention to the immense passings and comings of our intrinsically, insignificant royal personalities, the mocking of traffic, filling newspapers and delaying business and legislation."

"When they went in public procession," he adds, "to thank God of earth and heaven for an averted illness or a fresh addition to their respectable family, or to open something or come back from somewhere abroad, whither they had expensively and ridiculously and emptily gone. I found the closed streets and oafish spectators incredibly exasperating."

Clissold's brother, Dickon, is equally devastating with England's prominent personalities.

"Wherever there is a foreground there also will be the Countess of Oxford and Asquith," he says. Lord Balfour is referred to as that "damned Madonna lily; he grows wherever he is planted." Lloyd George is "clever as six foxes;" Lord Riddell "laughs at his peerage;" Beave-brooke is "brainy but impish."

Gordon Selfridge, the merchant prince of London, a former American, is one of the few men receiving praise.

From the outset, Wells has insisted that he is not responsible for the views of the characters in this novel, and that persons who cannot keep from associating his characters' views with their own should not read the book. Nevertheless some of the reviewers insist that Wells is using the novel to air his opinions about everything and everybody.

EDMONDS DEFENDS FLORIDA OFFICIALS

Baltimore, October 2.—(Special.)—Richard H. Edmonds, editor of The Manufacturers Record, today wired the Red Cross headquarters at Washington the following statement in defense of Florida:

"Reports sent out by the Red Cross that the work of your organization in Florida has been hampered by statements from real estate people and others to the effect that the disaster is less than reported and that your agents have been hampered in their work on this account is absolutely contrary to every statement that I have received from Florida. I have been in constant touch by wire since the day after the storm with Governor Martin, with officials of Miami, Fort Lauderdale and other place in the hurricane region and with commercial organizations of practically every town in the state of Florida, and with many of our subscribers in every part of the state. I also receive nearly every paper published in Florida and have had my own representative, an exceedingly careful and conservative member of our staff, constantly traveling night and day throughout the stricken region, and I have not received a single word to indicate that people in the hurricane district as well as in other parts of the state have not fully realized the magnitude of distuster and the loss of life and of property therefrom.

"Amazed at Statement."

"I am inexpressibly amazed at statements which appear in morning papers as from the Red Cross. I have seen no statement of any kind anywhere more thoroughly unjustified than the one in which it is said 'the poor people who suffered are regarded as of less consequence than the hotel and tourist business of Florida. It is a slander which in justice to the people of Florida I am compelled to call by that name, unpleasant as it may be. In all my experience in studying human history I have never seen a more superb effort on the part of people in a stricken region or of people in the rest of the state in meeting an emergency and in fully realizing the supreme importance of looking after the poor. Never have I seen more superb heroism on the part of people anywhere in any part of the world in risking their lives to save these people and to succor the poor and helpless.

"I am in receipt of a 3,000 word telegram this morning from our representative, who has been in and out of the stricken region since just after the storm, having caught a train on two hours' notice from Baltimore for Florida. His telegram reviewing the situation, following previous telegrams on the subject, gives boundless credit to the way in which the people of Miami and adjacent towns have measured up to the situation in helping poor and suffering. Referring to amazing work that has been done following the horrible nightmare of disaster, he says this has been accomplished by exercise of indomitable spirit, translating courage and determination into enthusiastic work, by practice of unselfishness by each individual, by cooperation of all and by practical help from outside world in various ways.

"An interesting sidelight, he says, was the action of many department stores and of merchants, without waiting for insurance adjustments, in taking goods from their windows, partly damaged by water but still serviceable, and turning them over without cost to relief organizations for the benefit and comfort of sufferers. They cared not that these goods in the aggregate might run high in value as salvage. Their fellow citizens, fellow humans, were suffering and in want and not a single nickle or penny was counted. That indeed, he says, has been the spirit of Florida from end to end and that is the spirit that in the end will bring heavy returns in dollars as well as in morale.

Free Building Material.

"A few days ago the same correspondent wired me, and I will back his ability to judge against that of anyone else, that in every case where people, whose houses had been injured, had no credit account with building supply material companies, they were told to take whatever they needed and pay for it or not in future as they might be able, but that no charge would be entered on the books against them.

"I am thus protesting with all possible vigor against what I regard as an absolutely unjust charge against the people of Florida. The local people are doing all in their power to help the poor and suffering. They are not counting the cost, but with a heroism that I have never seen equalled and an energy that as never been surpassed they have turned to the work of rebuilding and reconstruction and in that respect are doing marvels that have never been equaled in my experience in studying American disasters for the last forty or fifty years.

"Returning to the charge in your telegram to Mr. Pinkney, of Richmond, that 'the poor people who suffered are regarded as of less consequence than the hotel and tourist business in Florida.' I want to repeat that that is a slander against as fine a body of people as are to be found in the world. In Miami and adjacent towns there is as great religious spirit as anywhere else in America and nowhere I believe are people more liberal in building and maintenance of churches. The charge that poor people are regarded as of less importance than hotel and tourist business is a charge against the very religious life of communities whose people have sacrificed time and money and risked their lives to care for the poor people.

"I have been such an admirer of the work of Red Cross that I am profoundly grieved that statements so unjustified have been put forth against the people of Florida. My information about conditions there is as complete as it is possible for your organization or any other to have and I unhesitatingly deny the charge that has been made.

"There is pressing need for great work on part of Red Cross in Florida. Every effort of your organization should be put forth to secure money needed and that is a very much greater sum than you have yet indicated. Thousands of lives will be saved and infinite suffering and distress alleviated if people of this country will rally to the Red Cross as fully as they should do in this emergency and in keeping with what people of Florida are doing to help themselves."

ALLEGED BURGLARS AND "FENCE" HELD

Three alleged burglars, negroes, said to be implicated in the recent robbery of the Fulton Grocery company at 126 Decatur street were held to the grand jury under bonds of $3,000 each Saturday afternoon in recorder's court. C. D. Nichols, 60, a merchant, of 101 East Ellis street, was held to the grand jury under a bond of $1,000 under a charge of receiving stolen goods after the negroes are said to have testified against him.

The round-up of the alleged burglars followed investigation by City Detectives Oscar D. Evans and Pat Campbell, who made the arrests. Nichols denied buying the stolen goods, it was said.

DONEHOO SPEAKS FOR DR. HARDMAN

Dalton, Ga., October 2.—(Special.) Standing on the bed of a truck that had been provided by a local business man Paul Donehoo, chairman of the Fulton County Hardman club, spoke to an open air crowd of several hundred men and women here this afternoon.

Mr. Donehoo spoke for approximately one hour and was given close attention by the people who stood on the sidewalk and the postoffice lawn to hear him.

His address was devoted mainly to Mr. Holder's record as a public official. He declared that "the most convincing evidence of all, of Mr. Holder's inability to manage public affairs in a businesslike way and on a business basis lies in the fact that he had to defer indefinitely the letting of a large batch of highway contracts because upon looking into things he finds that he has only money enough to pay 18 cents on the dollar on contracts that have already been let."

Mr. Donehoo denied that bonds is the paramount issue or any issue at all, because, he said, both candidates profess to be against bonds. "Dr. Hardman always has been against bonds, and now Mr. Holder says he, too, is against bonds, so why discuss that—why try to make it an issue in this campaign. If you are against wife-beating and I am against wife-beating and we're both running for the same office—especially if it is an office that has nothing whatsoever to do with domestic relations—what's the use in either of us trying to make wife-beating an issue?

"The real issue," said Mr. Donehoo, "is this: Does Georgia want a practical, progressive, constructive, businesslike administration of her affairs, or does she want an administration predicated upon patronage?"

"Mr. Holder," he said, "instead of discussing the real issue, or of trying to prove his own fitness for governor, insists upon harping about questions bearing upon political patronage, showing that to his mind public service means distributing public jobs among the officeholder's friends. Dr. Hardman, on the other hand, never has asked Mr. Holder who he would appoint to this job or that in the event of his election. He probably has not thought about that, his mind throughout his life having been trained for business and service. Mr. Donehoo was introduced by Oliver R. Harden, prominent Dalton attorney and business man, who predicted that Whitfield county "will go for Dr. Hardman next Wednesday by the biggest majority it ever gave a candidate for any office."

COURT TURNS DOWN DOHENY PETITION

Washington, October 2.—(AP)—Brushing aside the contentions of E. L. Doheny, Harry F. Sinclair and Albert B. Fall, the court of appeals of the District of Columbia today declined to upset the conspiracy indictments returned against them here in connection with the naval oil leases.

The action cleared the way for a trial of the case, unless the defendants can obtain a review of the action by the supreme court of the United States. Civil suits growing out of the lease of the oil lands are already in the higher court.

In rendering its oral opinion, the court of appeals declined to heed the plea of defense attorneys that a law enacted at the last session of congress, depriving the court of appeals of the power to allow special appeals in criminal cases as unconstitutional. This act was sponsored by Senator Walsh, democrat, of Montanta, prosecutor of the senate's inquiry into the oil cases. The Montana senator had complained that the cases were being unduly delayed by legal maneuvers.

The conspiracy indictments were upheld several months ago by Justice Stafford, of the supreme court of the District of Columbia. The court of appeals allowed a special appeal, and in rendering its opinion today dismissing this appeal, it announced that it was acting in accordance with the Walsh act.

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

Field Secretary Jesse O. Thomas left the city Friday night for Jacksonville, Miami and Tampa, Fla. He expects to return to the city the middle of the week and will leave October 10 for Dallas, Texas, for 10 days. He is scheduled to be in New York October 22-28, and in Norfolk November 1-15. The Community Chest and the citizens of Norfolk were so pleased with the manner in which he conducted the Community Chest campaign last year that he has been engaged to conduct the campaign there this year.

The negro exhibits in connection with the Southeastern Fair association promise this year to be most representative. The opportunity for displaying our wares has been enlarged. For the first time we are to have a building instead of an inadequate tent and we are to be in a more elevated position, geographically. Through the officials of the Atlanta Charity, Educational and Recreational association and the executive officers of the Southeastern Fair association plans are being worked out which provide for noonday programs of music and one brief address in the negro building each day. While these addresses are not to be more than 15 minutes in length, the type of speakers selected promises to make this educational and entertainment feature of the fair unique. A large number of counties are expected to have exhibits and a great many more articles are expected to come in from each county. Prizes are to be awarded for the best exhibits, including the different types of produce and handwork. A special day for school children, including students of the private institutions of learning, has been inaugurated. A supervisory committee of the Atlanta Charity, Educational and Recreational association has been appointed to give some supervision to the negro building and activities, as may be necessary to make the most favorable impression and offer the greatest safeguard to all concerned. The attendance this year ought to exceed the attendance of previous years.

The colored division of the Community Chest with Dr. W. F. Boddie, chairman, is perfecting its organization for the most successful campaign in the history of the chest. A partial list of committees' chairmen follow:

Dr. W. F. Boddie, general chairman; Mrs. L. L. Craig, vice chairman; Rev. L. A. Pinkston, general secretary; C. L. Harper, assistant secretary; A. C. Thayer, keeper of records.

Big gifts committee: S. W. Walker, chairman; C. W. Green, assistant chairman; Kemper Harrell, second assistant chairman.

Schools committee: Agnes Jones, chairman; C. L. Harper, assistant chairman.

Publicity committee: B. J. Davis, chairman; Jesse O. Thomas, assistant chairman.

Individual gifts committee: T. J. Ferguson, chairman; Rev. S. M. Johnson, assistant chairman.

Speakers' bureau: J. C. Arnold, chairman.

Ward organization: W. A. Bell, chairman; H. R. Butler, assistant chairman.

WOMEN IN APPEAL TO CREATE HABITS FOR CLEANER CITY

Parent-Teacher organizations, men's and women's clubs, societies and individuals have been appealed to by Mrs. J. R. Little, chairman of the civic committee of the Atlanta Woman's club, and her co-committee members, in an effort to create a universal sentiment for neatness and order and to clean up Atlanta.

Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, has carried the drive to children of the Atlanta schools through radio addresses, and every effort to make the campaign effective has been brought into play by the women who began the work in conjunction with the sanitary committee of council and the city health department.

A total of 48 presidents of Parent-Teacher associations; 101 presidents of clubs and societies, and another 115 men's organizations or individuals have been appealed to. In this manner the women hope to create the sentiment which will clean rubbish, weeds and other unsightly and unhealthy articles from Atlanta.

New Orleans Jurist To Address Members Of Lawyers' Club

At the monthly meeting of the Lawyers' club of Atlanta, which will be held Friday, October 8, 1926, the club will be addressed by Judge Rufus E. Foster, of New Orleans, who comes to Atlanta as a member of the United States circuit court of appeals for the fifth judicial circuit.

The fifth judicial circuit court, which has jurisdiction over the southeastern states, is composed of Judges Richard W. Walker, of Huntsville, Ala.; Nathan P. Bryan, of Jacksonville, and Rufus E. Foster, of New Orleans, and will convene in Atlanta on Monday, October 4, for its fall term, and probably will remain in session for two weeks.

Judge Foster has been a member of the New Orleans bar since his graduation from Tulane law school in 1895. Before his elevation to the bench as United States judge of the eastern district of New Orleans, he was assistant United States attorney from 1895 to 1898, when he entered the army during the Spanish-American war as a lieutenant of Louisiana volunteer infantry.

Later Judge Foster was appointed adjutant general on the staff of Brigadier General W. W. Gordon, commanding the first division of the seventh army corps, during which time Judge Foster visited Atlanta and formed many acquaintances. Later, in 1908, Judge Foster was appointed United States attorney in New Orleans, and served with distinction until February 2, 1909, when he was appointed United States judge for the eastern district of Louisiana, which office he has since filled with distinction and honor.

In addition to Judge Foster the entertainment committee, under the leadership of Ernest C. Bell, John B. McCallum, Harry McCowen, Clifford E. Thomas, Wallace W. Lyons, will be able to present to the members the Masonic quartet, composed of J. Elmer Slider, W. Howard Davis, R. E. Dale and H. A. Dale, under the leadership of Paul M. Hubbard.

And then Grandma Danced

"WE were quite alarmed about mother. She wouldn't eat, was terribly constipated, bilious, and seemed to be fading fast. We thought it due entirely to her 86 years of age. But a neighbor brought over a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and it was really remarkable how she picked right up, and now she can even dance around with her grandchildren. Now we are never without Syrup Pepsin in the house." (Name and address furnished upon request.)

Regulates Bowels of Old Folks

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is so palatable, sets so well in the stomach, works so easily, so gently, so kindly with old folks as to accomplish its purpose without gripe, pain or other distress. For biliousness, sour stomach, coated tongue, constipation, and the lassitude, whether of children, parents or those in the evening of life, Syrup Pepsin is recommended everywhere. It is sold by all druggists.

For a free trial bottle send name and address to Pepsin Syrup Company, Monticello, Illinois.

3,000 Hear J. O. Wood Flay 'Brown and Holder Machine'

Winder, Ga., October 2.—(Special.) This county seat town Saturday was the scene of one of the largest political rallies ever held in Barrow county, when J. O. Wood, prominent Georgia solon, spoke to an audience, estimated at 3,000, who filled the courthouse to capacity and overflowed onto the lawn.

Mr. Wood, who was a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor in the first primary, spoke in the interest of Dr. Hardman, who is opposed to J. N. Holder, in the run-over primary, October 6.

The audience, which cheered and shouted at various attacks made by Mr. Wood against Holder, came from Jackson, Gwinnett, Clarke and Barrow counties.

Fights Machine.

Prefacing his speech with the statement that he was appearing in the interest of a business administration for Georgia against machine rule, Mr. Wood declared that his only interest in the campaign is to see the defeat of the Holder-Brown combine. He stated that the only agreement he has ever had with Dr. Hardman, consists solely of an understanding on his part that Dr. Hardman stands for the same things in the administration of the state government that he does. He said he has reached this agreement through a knowledge of Dr. Hardman's record only and that he would support him or any other candidate who stands for the same things he does until the last vestige of machine rule disappears from the state.

His speech in part follows:

"I want to explain to you people at the very outset of this talk my position in giving my wholehearted support to Dr. Hardman in this race for governor. I have only one vote unless I can exercise a little influence with my wife. And I can state right here and now that she, like myself, is heart and soul behind Dr. Hardman. If I can get you or other people of Georgia to vote for my former opponent in the first primary I shall consider that I am doing a service to the sovereign state of Georgia.

"In regard to the political and official record of the man that is opposing Hardman in this race I want to say that every assertion he has made in his campaign of villification has been proven feise or he has had to retract it. The Holder forces have used every dodge and trick known to political craft, even to digging down into the grave of one of Georgia's most illustrious sons to violate and desecrate it. I do not claim, as many have done, to have inherited the mantle of the late Senator Tom Watson. I do regard him as one of the greatest statesmen of the south, and I not only revere him, but I resent the scurrilous attacks this man Holder has made on his memory.

"Mr. Holder has had much to say about conditions at Harmony Grove mill. I am talking to neighbors now who know his statements in regard to this matter to be untrue and I want to ask you why he has all at once become so concerned about laboring conditions, when it is a common sight to see negroes joy riding on state highway trucks past fields where white Georgia boys and girls are laboring in cotton fields. Why doesn't he explain that?

No Agreement.

"Holder has charged that there has been an agreement between me and Dr. Hardman. I admit it. There has. I understood from Dr. Hardman, not through personal conversation, but from his campaign speeches and his record and from life-long neighbors who can bear testimony to his integrity, that if elected he would give Georgia an honest business administration. That's the understanding I have with him. I believe in him and am going to vote for him and do everything in my power to aid his election as the next governor of this great state.

"If there is any person in the whole state of Georgia who does not know and understand my position in this race and all the issues in it then all my trips and speeches have been in vain. I have labored and sought to make it plain that I am fighting the Holder-Brown machine. I will continue to fight it until every last vestige of that monstrous vehicle of graft and corruption has disappeared. I want to tell you good people right now that machine rule is and always has been the one and only issue in this race. It is not bonds and it is not anything else under the sun except gang rule which shall and must be stamped out of existence in Georgia.

"If you or any one else want to know my position on bonds which Holder has sought, in a vain attempt to throw a smoke screen over the real issue in the race, to make an issue, I will tell it to you. You do not have to depend on what I say here on bonds. You can go to my record on the floor of the house of representatives and learn that I have always and consistently fought bonds. And in this race I am supporting a man whose own record is and always has been against saddling the taxpayers of the state with unnecessary bonds.

"Mr. Holder has seen fit to attack me personally. I deny him the right as a candidate to attack any Hardman supporter, which I am, and would equally be against Dr. Hardman attacking any Holder supporter personally. He has no more right to attack me personally than he has any other person private citizen who is going to vote for Dr. Hardman.

"In appearing for Dr. Hardman in opposition to such a pusillanimous politician I feel very much like a person who is forced to fight a skunk with cologne water. I have confined my charges to Holder's public record. But he, in his effort to make this a campaign of mud slinging, has referred to me in a public speech as a paid scavenger. I deny ever receiving any pay or promise of pay for fighting a ring I believe menaces the people of Georgia. I don't know what he means by 'scavenger' but I do know that his public record, when discussing it, nauseates me.

Bond Issue Failed.

"Mr. Holder has tried to make bonds an issue and failed. He has tried to link Dr. Hardman with machine rule and failed. He has tried every means known to him to fake an issue. His last effort was on the bank situation and when he said that if elected he would fire Bennett it was disclosed by the state banking department that there was an agreement to reappoint Bennett. I charge that his act in this instance is the basest ingratitude. He allowed his nine managers, including Tom Hardwick, to persuade him that he could get more votes by kicking Bennett than he could by playing square with him.

"I charge that Tom Hardwick's interest in Holder's campaign was and is to build a machine on which he might run against Senator Harris and I have proved it through Holder's own remarks."

SOUTH CAROLINA BANKERS TO MEET TO HELP FARMERS

Columbia, S. C., October 2.—(AP)—An extraordinary session of the South Carolina Bankers' association today was called to meet in Columbia next Thursday to consider possible means of assisting farmers suffering from the low price of cotton by G. W. Duvall, of Cheraw, president. The meeting is to be held in the statehouse, beginning at 11 a. m.

CANDLER GARAGE PLAN PLEASES MOTORISTS

Motorists of Atlanta, as well as automobile travelers passing through the city constantly, have the opportunity of parking cars in one of the most up-to-date garages in the country, the Candler building garage, located at the corner of Ivy and Houston streets.

The first floor entrance is Ivy street; the second floor entrance is Houston street; the third floor entrance is the alley between Peachtree and Ivy streets, while the fourth floor is reached by ample ramp space from either entrance.

The service pits, located on the first floor, allow washing, polishing, lubricating, etc., to be done in record time, as the car does not have to be moved when once placed. Only experienced men are employed in all phases of the service department.

The auto laundry service is up to the minute. By means of water at high pressure, blowout guns and kerosene guns, four cars are thoroughly cleaned in 30 minutes.

Storage space allotted for each individual car is more than ample. Space has been planned on such a generous scale throughout the Candler building garage, and the entrance driveways so well arranged, with the building filled to capacity, it is possible to drive cars in and out without the least congestion.

The go and come as you please day storage feature appeals to shoppers, matinee crowds, etc.

The operators of the Candler Building garage, Atlanta Garages, Inc., also operate the Lullwater garage, 117 West Peachtree street.

FABRIC PRINTING EXHIBIT PLANNED BY HIGH COMPANY

Starting next Tuesday, October 5, and continuing through the entire week, the J. M. High company has arranged for a demonstration of the actual printing of hand blocked fabrics and cretonnes. A demonstration of this kind is almost impossible to be had, except in the large eastern cities. It was only at great expense and by a special arrangement with the Manchester Hand Prints corporation, of New York, that the J. M. High company succeeded in obtaining it for Atlanta, officials say.

An artist direct from the hand printing plant in New York will be in charge of the demonstration and will explain each detail of the process as it is actually done. He will also give information and instruction on home decoration and the use of draperies.

An Open Letter From Dr. L. G. Hardman To the People of Georgia

TO THE PEOPLE OF GEORGIA.

The run-off primary for the nomination for Governor takes place next Wednesday, October 6. I make final appeal to my fellow citizens to impress upon them the importance of the vote, and to urge every man and woman in Georgia who stands for a clean-cut, business-like administration of the affairs of the state to be on the alert and to express their conviction at the ballot box on Wednesday.

I have no fear of the result, if there is anything like a full vote. With anything like the vote of the first primary I will sweep the state with a record-breaking majority, for never before in the history of Georgia has public sentiment been so crystallized in its determination to bring an end to the abomination of machine-control of the affairs of the people of this state. The only danger lies in over-confidence, as the result of which many of those who believe as I do might carelessly refrain from voting on the ground that victory is assured.

Let them remember that the trained old guard of the political army machine is ever at its post. The minions of this machine, on duty in every county in the state, are back at their positions after the overwhelming defeat administered to them by the masses of the people in the primary contest in September which overthrew one of the heads of this machine in the defeat of J. J. Brown, long commissioner of agriculture, and in the election of Eugene Talmadge in one of the most decisive victories ever won in Georgia.

Works Two Hours a Month—Draws $1,200 Per Year.

This machine, with brazen extravagance, loaded upon the taxpayers of this state four times as many fertilizer and oil inspectors as it takes to serve all of the other southern states put together. The people paid the bills, and it was no unusual thing to find men drawing salaries of $1,200 a year for two hours' work a month.

The other head of this diabolical machine is John N. Holder, my opponent for governor, who ran second to me in the last primary. He was running hand in glove with the Brown machine, standing for all the things it stood for, and making common cause in the campaign that resulted in the defeat of one of the political bosses controlling this hydra-headed monster, and making the other a minority candidate, thus forcing a second primary for governor.

A Great Principle Involving the Progress of Georgia is at Stake

Complete victory will not be won until both heads of this monster machine are severed. The people know this and the only question is whether they will take time to express their conviction at the ballot box.

I stand for a business administration of the affairs of Georgia. I have made no pledge of any kind to any man for any office, and my only pledge now is to the people of Georgia that if elected I will make merit the first consideration and appoint to office only those who are competent to render the best service without regard to political consideration.

Bank Deposits Must Be Protected

Weeks ago I declared that if elected I would demand a complete reorganization of the state banking department and the enactment of laws that would throw every possible guarantee around all bank deposits. Several days after my announcement to that effect Mr. Holder followed me on the same line notwithstanding the fact that he made open overtures to the superintendent of the banking department pledging his reappointment in consideration of his support.

A little more than two years ago my opponent, Mr. Holder, was leading the state campaign for a $70,000,000 highway state bond issue, making an official report to the legislature as chairman of the highway board that this was the only way for Georgia to keep abreast of her sister states in road building. Not until members of the legislature made it clear that they would consider no such proposition under the present complexion of the state highway board, did Mr. Holder change his mind on this subject. He led the fight for the $70,000,000 bond issue until he was put on notice that the people would not trust such an issue to his administration, when he suddenly wheeled about, reversed his position, and brazenly assumed an attitude of leadership of the very contention of which he had been the most bitter opponent.

No Georgia Tax Should Be Increased.

Mr. Holder advocated before the extra legislative session in February, 1926, a five-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax—the highest in America. This would mean another million and a half dollars a year to be paid by Georgians to be squandered in highway extravagance. I unalterably oppose any increase in gasoline, or any other taxes.

I pledge to the people of Georgia that if elected I will demand a reorganization not only of the state banking department but of the state highway board. I will put men in charge who can be depended upon to give the state a safe, sane and business-like administration of this department, and who will not waste the people's money as is now being done in administrative extravagance.

In the official report of State Auditor Slate to the last general assembly official figures are given to show that in one congessional district alone in Georgia this department spent for "overhead" administrative purposes alone about ten times as much as was spent on actual road building construction, most of this going to political pap-suckers and "overhead" officials who had been "knighted" on the people's payroll as rewards to be paid for past or future political service.

This extravagance, paralleled more or less all through the state, is one of the blackest records of its history.

There will be no more of this extravagance if I am elected governor.

I refrain from a discussion of the unjust and uncalled for personal attacks that have been made against me by Mr. Holder. Realizing the desperation of his situation, he is driven to extreme measures and, like a drowning man grasping at a straw, he hesitates at nothing to save himself.

As to my personal character and my reputation as a successful business man, if the long record of a lifetime spent in Georgia is not sufficient answer to such aspersions, nothing that I could say would strengthen the conviction of the public as to my personal fitness, my integrity, or my qualification as a business man.

The issue is clean-cut and simple. If the people of this state want to get rid of the gigantic political machine which, like the "Old Man of the Sea," has straddled the shoulders of the state for all these years, retarding prosperity and helping itself out of the public treasury by the employment of a vast army of trained political experts to serve the machine and not the people—then their only possible course is to vote for the man who stands against such an administrative policy and who pledges his heart, soul and his best patriotic endeavor to put the state on a basis of sound business administration.

If they want to continue as they are now proceeding, Mr. Holder is the man for them.

If they want a change—if they want to redeem the state from the thralldom of cheap, petty politics—if they want to see our common schools and our colleges strengthened by adequate support—if they want to know that the millions of money handled by the Highway department goes into actual construction rather than in being wasted in "overhead' 'for the support of the political sinecures—then it is as clear as the noonday sun that the business men's candidate should have their support.

If elected I will concentrate all that is in me to the best service for the people of my state. I ask their support to that end. If I lose, the people lose—if I win, they triumph—not in my success personally, but in the victory of a great principle on which the very welfare of the state depends.

DR. L. G. HARDMAN

Commerce, Ga., October 2, 1926.

J. N. Holder Is Hysterical, Carswell Says in Speech

Americus, Ga., October 2.—(Special.)—George H. Carswell spoke to a large crowd here this afternoon at the court house in the interest of the candidacy of Dr. L. G. Hardman for governor.

Mr. Carswell stated at the outset of his speech that he wished to again brand as absolutely false the statements which have been made by John N. Holder repeatedly, that he, Carswell, had entered into a trade with Dr. Hardman. Mr. Carswell said he stated to Dr. Hardman that there was no job, office, position or appointment within the gift of Dr. Hardman when elected governor, that he wanted; that his only interest in this fight is to help finish the job by defeating and forever wiping out the last remaining vestige of the Brown-Holder machine; that Mr. Holder has been trying to get away from his connection with the Brown-Holder machine by creating various and sundry machines out of thin air.

Mr. Holder has made the fatal mistake of allowing his anger and chagrin to run away with his judgment. He appears to be in the last stages of hysteria, and is biting and snapping at everybody in his path. He is denouncing everybody in public life in Georgia today who does not happen to be supporting John N. Holder for governor. No state official is free from attack by him.

"It is charged that the present governor has a powerful machine and is using it to help defeat him. This is but a smoke screen to hide from the gaze of the enraged populace of Georgia his efforts to reconstruct the Brown-Holder machine. How very silly and ridiculous his charges about a so-called Governor Walker machine appear is even more striking when one considers that out of the hundreds of appointments made by Governor Walker during the three years he has been in office, Mr. Holder can only name three men who belong to this machine, and one of these, namely, T. R. Bennett, superintendent of banks, was not originally appointed by Governor Walker, but by former Governor Hugh H. Dorsey.

Acted Reluctantly.

"Speaking of cleaning out departments, how can Mr. Holder expect the people of Georgia to believe he is going to clean out anything, when after being notified and furnished written proof in the early part of December 1924, that a certain employe of the state highway department was stealing money from the state of Georgia by padding payrolls, he refused to do anything about it, or even to bring it to the attention of the highway board until nearly two months later, when he was threatened with exposure by an Atlanta paper if he did not do something at once to protect the interests of the people of Georgia.

"Mr. Holder has never answered this charge. I say to you that the people of Georgia have infinitely more sense than Mr. Holder gives them credit for having, when he goes around over the state telling about how he will clean out various departments and discharge various state employes, when according to his good friend, Honest Sam Slate, there is more waste, inefficiency and mismanagement in the highway department over which Mr. Holder had presided for four years, and of which he is the whole cheese, than in all of the other departments of the state of Georgia combined.

"If you do not believe this, my friends, read the published audit of the highway department of Sam Slate, the state auditor.

"Mr. Holder sets himself up as a paragon of righteousness and virtue and says to the people all over the state of Georgia that the safety of our great commonwealth is dependent solely upon his own efforts. He has set up a straw man on which he has put a sign 'Bonds.' He then proceeds to put on a very grotesque battle between himself and this straw man, and would have the people of Georgia believe that he is battling to save Georgia from being overwhelmed with debt secured by a mortgage on every acre of land, every cow, every pig and chicken in Georgia.

"Georgia is not threatened with a bond issue, and does not need any self-constituted and hypocritical defender like John Holder to save the state. Nothing in the world is safer than is Georgia from a bond issue for paved roads or any other purpose. Georgia will have bonds only when there is auniversal demand for bonds on the part of an overwhelming majority of the people of Georgia, and John Holder, if he were elected governor, could neither put a bond issue over the people of Georgia, nor save Georgia from a bond issue if the people demand it.

Smoke Screen Charged.

"John Holder is wiggling and squirming, evading, putting down smoke screens and fighting terrific battles with straw men to divert the attention of the people from his own record. I guess you have heard the tale of the 'widow's blanket,' and the 'poor cow of the one-horse tenant.' Mr. Holder is merely dragging out the widow's blanket as a smoke screen for his own political record and he desires you to chase the cow down a blind alley, while he runs over you with his political machine. The real cow in this case is the state of Georgia and John Holder and his political henchmen have caused this cow to go dry.

"Over in Greenville, Ga., last Friday I am informed he openly stated that he not only wanted but was eager for the opportunity to meet me in joint debate and answer the charges which I have made against him. The star reporter of The Atlanta Journal was too clever to put this statement by Mr. Holder in his report of Mr. Holder's speech in the Journal. 'Whispering John' thought he could get by with this, and could fool the people of Meriwether county by not having it brought out in the Atlanta Journal so it would not come to my attention and his hand would not be called upon it.

"Upon reaching Atlanta this week I was informed of his statement at Greenville, and immediately dispatched a telegram to Mr. Holder with a copy to his headquarters, stating that I was not only ready but would be delighted to meet him on the stump, face to face at any time or place named by him, and make the charges against him again, and give him an opportunity to answer them face to face. I knew what his answer would be, and sure enough, he came back and said that I am not a candidate for governor, and, therefore, he cannot meet me. But I say to you again, my friends, that until John Holder does answer the charges I have made against him, and to which the pepole of Georgia are entitled to an answer, he has no right to ask the people of Georgia to vote for him on next Wednesday.

"The morale of the state highway department of Georgia is all shot to pieces now, and if you do not believe it, ask Judge Stanley Bennet, John Phillips or Warren Neal. From a road building machine it has been converted by John Holder into a political machine, which is a menace to the state of Georgia.

State Lost Money.

"Another question I would like to have John Holder answer before next Wednesday, and that is why he took $21,000 of money belonging to the state of Georgia out of the state treasury and deposited it in a private banking institution in Union county, a bank not chartered by the state, not under the supervision of the banking department, and which money he put there without interest, for the sole purpose of exacting a promise that Union would be carried for him on September 8. Union county went for him, all right, but the private bank has since 'busted,' and it looks as though the state of Georgia is out just exactly $21,000 in order that Union county might go for Mr. Holder for governor.

"John Holder has promised everything and everybody in the state of Georgia and has traded with everybody in the state of Georgia that he could trade with, in order to be governor of Georgia. He knows that he cannot fulfill these promises, and the members of the highway board know it.

"I am reliably informed that only a few days ago through his brother-in-law he made repeated efforts to trade with Tom Bennett, and the state banking department, and promised unconditionally to reappoint Tom Bennett for another period of six years, if Bennett and the banking department would support him for governor.

"I urge you, my friends, to vote for a man next Wednesday who makes no trades and few promises, and no promises he is not ready, able and willing to fulfill.

"In all my experience I have never known as bitter a campaign to be conducted by any man for the high office of governor as Mr. Holder is conducting.

Legislation Throttled.

"My friends, in this election there is involved an infinitely more serious question than the personality of Mr. Holder or the personality of Dr. Hardman. It is a fight to restore the government of Georgia to the people whence it originated and where it belongs. Georgia has been throttled and hog-tied in the legislative branch of our government for a number of years by the political power of the Brown-Holder machine. It has been impossible for the past few years to get any measure through the general assembly of Georgia, no matter how necessary or desirable, without the approval of John Holder and J. J. Brown.

"I love my state, and without reward or the hope thereof, I am helping in every way I possibly can, to carry on this fight until victory shall come and the inherent power of the people of our great state shall be restored to them by an overwhelming victory on October 6."

Mr. Carswell was followed by John I. Kelly, of Lawrenceville, who spoke in the interest of John N. Holder. He vigorously attacked what he termed the "Walker machine," declaring that Governor Walker had become the political enemy of Holder because Holder had supported Tom Hardwick for governor against Walker.

He charged that pro-bond forces in Georgia are supporting Hardman and criticised Dr. Hardman for opening his meetings with prayer.

The meeting was one of the most enthusiastic held in Americus during the campaign.

GEORGIA CASES SET BEFORE SUPREME COURT

Washington, October 2.—(Special.) The supreme court is expected to hear arguments in two Georgia cases next week, the first week of its fall session. The first cases on the regular dockets are appeals by Wade Johnson and Jarrett Benford, of Milledgeville, who were sentenced to death on conviction for rape of an aged woman, whom they were charged with attacking on their way home from Macon to Milledgeville.

The other case is an appeal by E. H. Edenfield, who was convicted for violation of the Volstead act.

Exchange Club To Hear Lectures on Great Georgians

Dr. L. O. Bricker, president of the Exchange club, of Atlanta, has arranged a program to be presented during the next several months, on alternate Tuesday's at the luncheon meetings of the Exchange club at the Atlanta Athletic club.

The story of 12 great Georgians, who have had to do with the founding, the building, the defense, the political, educational and religious development and progress of Georgia will be told by 12 Georgians of the present day.

The program begins next Tuesday with an address on General James Oglethorpe, by Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe university.

Dr. Bricker announces that any citizen of Atlanta who wishes to hear any of these addresses may secure an invitation from any member of the Exchange club.

Following is the program and the speakers:

General James Oglethorpe, by Dr. Thornwell Jacobs.

William H. Crawford, by Dr. Lucian Lamar Knight.

Robert Tooms, by Governor John M. Slaton.

Dr. Crawford W. Long, by Dr. Joseph Jacobs.

Benjamin H. Hill, by Senator Hoke Smith.

Alexander H. Stephens, by Dr. Garnett W. Quillian.

Henry W. Grady, by Honorable Clark Howell.

Bishop George E. Pierce, by Bishop Warren A. Candler.

General John B. Gordon, by Dr. Carter Helm Jones.

Sidney Lanier, by John T. Boifeuillet.

Joseph Le Conte, by Dr. Cary Breckenridge Wilmer.

Joel Chandler Harris, by Forrest Adair.

The Exchange club is one of the important service clubs of the city, enrolling in its active membership leading representatives of the commercial and professional life of Atlanta.

HUNTSVILLE INVITES CONFEDERATE VETS

Huntsville, Ala., October 2.—(Special.)—The Huntsville Chamber of Commerce, the Rotary club and other civic organizations have wired invitations to the Alabama division of Confederate veterans now holding their annual convention in Florence to meet here next year.

The building will be erected at the held in Huntsville in 1922, was one of the largest ever held in the state.

MORTGAGE GUARANTEE BUSINESS INCREASES

Reporting a steady increase in business the Mortgage Guarantee company of America, with main offices in Atlanta, gives concrete evidence of the regard in which this section of the country is held by investors generally.

"Our entire anticipated output of guaranteed first mortgage certificates," stated H. C. Williams, president, "up to January 1, already is sold and there is no slackening in the demand. These certificates have as their foundation loans on residence property in the principal cities of this part of the country, so a demand for them is evidence per se of faith in the south."

According to Mr. Williams, the Mortgage Guarantee Company of America recorded one sale of $600,000 last Wednesday to a bank in a large eastern city.

"The president of this big bank came to Atlanta," said Mr. Williams, "and made a first hand investigation. The subsequent investment in our certificates indicates his findings."

The company is headed by H. C. Williams, well-known in financial circles in New York and the south. Joseph A. McCord, formerly chairman of the board of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, is chairman of the company's board of directors.

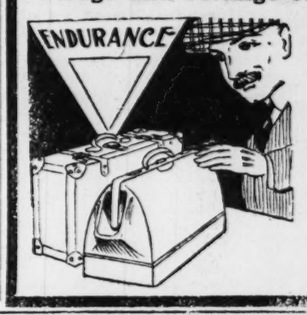

At the last meeting of directors four more prominent Georgia bankers were added to the company's advisory board, which already includes 10 well-known bankers from all parts of the state. New members of the advisory board are: James R. Atwater, vice president, homaston Banking company; Dr. J. T. Culpepper, vice president Bank of Thomasville; Dr. E. P. Ross, president Bank of Valdosta, and C. J. Smith, cashier Manufacturers National bank, Newnan.

The personal, first-hand knowledge which members of the advisory board have of their respective communities is of inestimable value in determining the company's loan policies in these various sections, according to Mr. Williams.

GASOLINE PAN-AM MOTOR OILS

Better Gasoline

and something more!

When you buy at a Pan-Am pump, you are dealing with a man of known business integrity. And you get the sort of interested service that makes you want to come back.

THROUGHOUT the South, motorists have been quick to appreciate the unvarying high quality of Pan-Am gasoline and motor oils.

But there are other reasons, too, why thousands are turning to Pan-Am.

Every Pan-Am dealer is a man whom you can trust in all his business transactions... so proved by rigid investigation. He is always a man highly recommended to us by his neighbors. A man whose record for clean business is life-long.

We are also careful to see that you are served by men who know the worth of thoughtful courtesy . . . and the value of a smile.

Stop at a Pan-Am pump the next time you need gasoline . . . at home or over in a neighboring state . . . it will cost you no more than the doubtful kind.

When you leave a Pan-Am station you will know why thousands of motorists look for the cream-colored pumps.

TWENTY BANKS OPEN FOLLOWING COLLAPSE

Twenty Georgia banks with resources of $4,421,000 have been reorganized and permitted to resume business by the state banking department, it was announced Saturday. There are eleven others, members of the chain, with assets of $2,600,000 which will be reorganized and permitted to resume business within the next fifteen or 30 days, officials said in referring to the effect of the chain-bank collapse in the state.

Included in the 85 banks which closed was the Georgia state system with a parent bank in Atlanta and 20 branches. This was a bank with 20 "windows" which is was impossible to reorganize as the "Georgia State bank," it was explained. In order that these banks might be reorganized in the various communities in which they are located, a plan of separation was worked out by the banking department which necessitated the common consent of about 50,000 depositors and creditors. This separation was accomplished last week, and it is probable that 15 or more of these branches will be absorbed by banks organized for the particular purpose of taking over the assets of these branches. Three banks already have organized, the primary purpose of which is to absorb the Georgia state branches in those communities, the statement said.

Resources of the 15 Georgia state branches referred to are $3,200,000. It will be seen that when these plans are worked out the total resources of the banks reinstated and absorbed by other banks organized for that purpose, will be approximately $11,000,000 of the $18,000,000 total resources of the 85 banks that closed.

That the Georgia banking situation as a whole was financially sound is evidenced by the fact that only one bank outside of this "ten-pin" system closed, and that was caused by a run incident to the closing of a Bankers' Trust bank in that neighborhood. This one bank was reorganized and permitted to resume business in less than a week after it closed.

PLAN ADVERTISING FOR FERTILIZERS AT ATLANTA MEET

Washington, October 2.—(Special.) A meeting of advertising managers for fertilizer manufacturing concerns will be held at Atlanta shortly before the southern fertilizer manufacturers convention there November 9-10 to discuss the feasibility of a nation-wide cooperative advertising campaign to stimulate use of fertilizer.

This preliminary advertisers meeting was decided upon at a meeting here today of the soil improvement committee of the National Fertilizer association and invitations will be issued by Charles J. Brand, executive secretary of the association. The exact date of the meeting has not been set.

JUDGE HILL'S CLASS GETS NEW QUARTERS

The men's Bible class of St. Mark Methodist church, taught by Justice H. Warner Hill, of the state supreme court, is endeavoring to have 500 persons present this morning to celebrate the removal into new headquarters—the fourth such move necessitated since 1920 by increased membership. The new quarters are located adjacent to the main church auditorium at Peachtree and Fifth streets.

The program will include short talks by Judge Hill, Dr. J. B. Mitchell, pastor; Joel Hunter, Sunday school superintendent; Thomas H. Scott, a former president, who will give a short history of the class, and the following other ex-presidents: J. A. Strever, C. F. Hoke, C. M. Marshall and Dr. B. T. Carter.

Visitors are cordially invited, according to George E. Knott, class president.

POLICE STOP RIOTS AT SYRIAN HANGING

Bierut, Syria, October 2.—(AP)—Repeated police charges were made to suppress disorders which broke out today before the grand serail palace, where four men were hanged for murdering a native sergeant wearing the French uniform.

The condemned men shouted insults at the French officials and called upon the crowd to mutiny, continuing their demonstration until the nooses tightened about their necks.

Collier Defends Holder Administration Policies

Defense of John N. Holder, candidate for governor, was voiced Saturday in a statement by J. C. Collier, of Piedmont, Ga., who characterizes attacks on Holder as "abuse and false statements."

Mr. Collier's statement follows:

By reason of the vital issues at stake, affecting the future welfare of our state, I wish to say a few words to the voters and taxpayers of Georgia in regard to the enormous amount of abuse and false statements being heaped on Hon. John N. Holder since he became a candidate for governor of Georgia.

I am and have been a member of the Georgia state senate from the 22d district for the past two years, and have observed closely the moves by the big corporations and their allies to take charge of the state of Georgia and saddling a big bond issue on the taxpayers of the state.

During July, 1925, a move was made to investigate the highway department or really John N. Holder, the chairman, whom Governor Walker and W. T. Anderson were trying to oust. A committee from the state senate was appointed by the president, Howard Ennis. As I was chairman of the finance committee and from W. T. Anderson's district, I was placed on the investigating committee.

I am frank to say that after having conversations and receiving correspondence from various interested people in this situation, I commenced my work of probing the highway department (John N. Holder), prejudiced against Mr. Holder, but like a fair-minded juror I went after the facts and truth, laying all prejudice aside.

Says Holder Is Honest.

This committee had meetings, day after day, and week after week, and we could only find that John Holder was an honest man. Every dollar drawn by him for personal or department use was duly charged to the proper account, or to John Holder personally at the time it was secured. All payments were made by bank check properly entered at the time, and signed by the treasurer of the department.

We further found that John Holder had built up the highway department from nothing to a vast organization working hundreds of people. We also found that the highway board did not have legal control over the chief engineer or the people working under him. W. T. Anderson, John Holder and Warren Neel, the chief engineer, were brought before the committee.

Mr. Citizen of Georgia, guess what was behind all of W. T. Anderson's madness. It developed that, while Mr. Anderson was a member of the highway board, he wanted the highway board to purchase a lot of land south of Macon from E. B. Weatherly (a lawyer-promoter), of Macon, for the state of Georgia at a cost of several hundred thousands dollars for the exploitation of a cement plant. John Holder, working as he should for the interest of the state of Georgia, objected. At that time also it appeared from various moves made that W. T. Anderson wanted to be governor of Georgia, succeeding Governor Walker. It appeared that he thought the best route to success was by sweeping John Holder out of his path—by wrecking Holder's personal standing before the people. He was willing to break down the Georgia highway department in order to carry his point—"to wreck John Holder and kick him out of politics."

Defends Committee.

Some time ago Mr. Anderson in The Macon Telegraph referred to the highway investigating committee—"composed of Senators Dixon, Hutcheson, Carswell, Andrews and myself, as white washers." All men are "white washers" to Mr. Anderson when they do not do his bidding. I will now reply to this statement by saying that any man who says that I did not follow the dictates of my conscience when rendering my decision on this committee is deliberately and maliciously making a misstatement.

Georgia has no better citizens than Howard Ennis, Jim Dixon, Howell Andrews and Dr. Carswell. Mr. Anderson knew that there were no irregularities in the highway board's administration of affairs—he wanted to run Georgia politics—and to become the governor of Georgia. . . . It will be a sad day for Georgia when the administration of her affairs are turned over to William T. Anderson, of Macon, Ga.

Now pertaining to Governor Walker's part in the highway Holder controversy, it appeared from all points that he wanted Holder out of the way for special reasons with the result that he could appoint a man of his own selection. Holder having held an appointment from a previous administration. Perhaps a man favoring a big bond issue would have been appointed.

Discussing further the question of Holder's use of highway money the committee found every penny properly entered on the highway books at the time it was disbursed—and no attempt on the part of Holder or other highway officials to do any wrong or conceal any transaction.

With these facts, which were a part of the committee's report, and which were published, it is beyond the bounds of reason how The Macon Telegraph, Dr. L. G. Hardman and the state bond advocates will jump on John Holder just because "he runs for governor, and stands in the way of their big bond issues plans." Mr. Farmer, Mr. Country Merchant, Mr. Country Banker, Laborers and Good citizens of Georgia, if you elect Dr. L. G. Hardman for governor he will carry out the policies of Governor Walker, with his big bond issues, and mortgaging the state of Georgia's future, and playing right into the hands of the big interests who have been supporting bonds—the big paving and construction companies, the school book trust, the large cement combine, the road machinery people—and thus squandering millions of the taxpayers' money.

Claims Bonds Is Issue.

Mr. Capitalist—retired business man, widows, do you realize it would be necessary to have a classification tax—an income tax, for paying the interest on these state bonds (proposed). Don't you know what an income tax will mean, the opening up of all your private business t othe collectors?

Doctor Hardman's election means state bonds—and putting the ban on the campaign now being waged to secure new industries in the state. Just stop and think, how does a $100,000,000 bond issue look to you? Do you know the present conditon in North Carolina with her enormous bonded debt, and carrying about double the Georgia taxes, and also in addition having an "income tax," which is now proving very burdensome? Georgia can't grow cotton at 12 to 15 cents per pound and prosper, and that is the reason we are conducting a campaign all over the state to secure New England cotton mills. These mills are not giving consideration to North Carolina at present on account of the high taxes and hugh state bonded indebtedness. They will not come to Georgia if we bond our state and raise taxes, instead they will be welcomely received by Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Texas. The voters of Georgia should not be stampeded into voting for a state bond issue by electing Dr. Hardman.

Stand pat, and vote for John N. Holder on October 6, as he will never let a bond issue be put onto the state of Georgia while he is governor. His road policy is formulated on sound business lines. He will build roads just as fa sas we have material and labor.

They accuse Holder of introducing a bill in the general assembly to tax gas five cents. He did not, as I am the man who introduced this bill. I didn't to down the bond bill. The man who uses the roads should bear the largest amount of expenses in building roads.

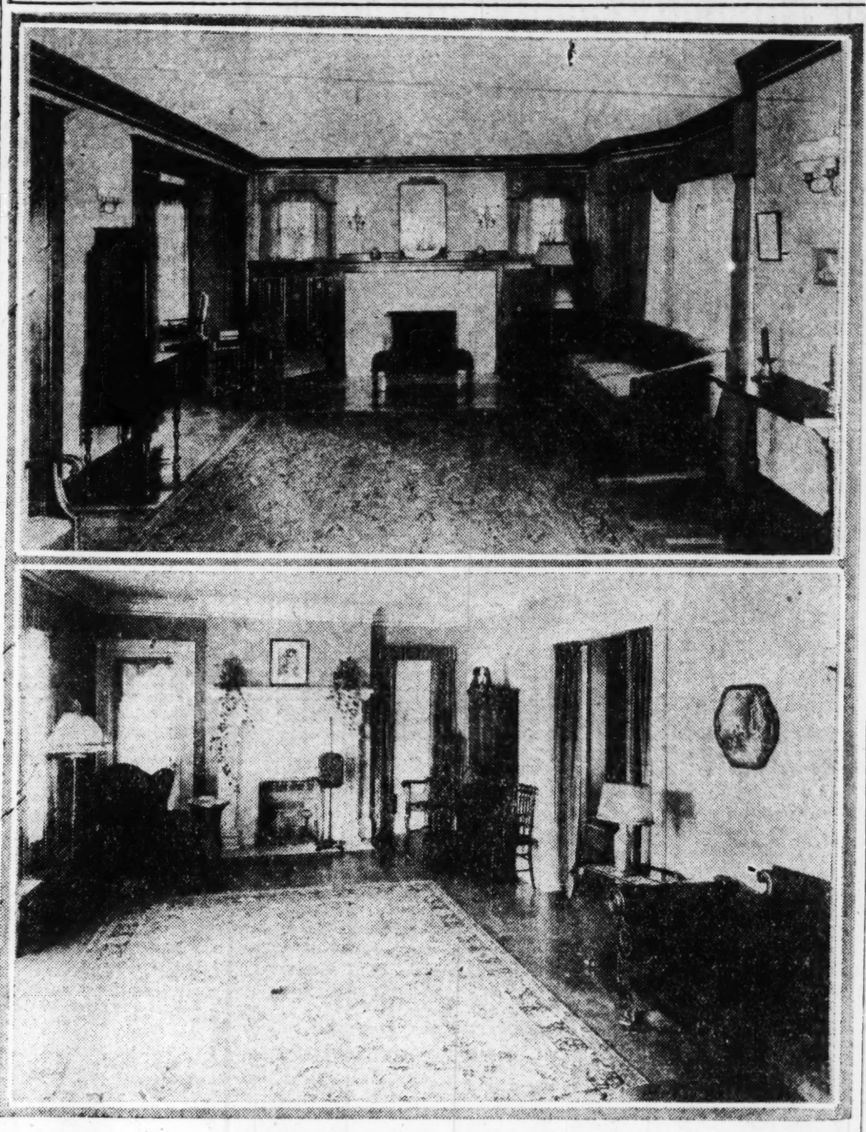

John Holder is playing fair in the building of roads, he is scattering good roads in all parts of the state.

John Holder is honest—he stands for better schools and colleges. He stands for good roads and built on a practical systematic business basis without mortgaging the state's future—he stands for progress—but says "pay-as-you-go"—and if he is elected governor of Georgia, he will stand out in Georgia's history as a great governor who stood out firm for the good of the poor people and the advancement of the commercial interest of our grand old state.

(Signed) JENA CUTHBERT COLLIER.
Chairman, Finance Committee, Georgia State Senate.

Interior Views of Homes at Avondale

Above are shown two attractive rooms in homes at Avondale Estates, which won the admiration of thousands during the "Home Beautiful" exhibition of The Constitution. Through special arrangement, Avondale now is offering to build homes for all purchasers of lots on the basis of "ten per cent cash and one per cent a month." This program permits the builder to pay for his home at rates cheaper than rent.

An American concern will supply 19,000 tons of steel rails for the Pekin-Mukden railway in China.

Jerusalem's building spurt is giving work to many who have been idle for some time.

A plan to have direct railway service between Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Germany is under way.

AVONDALE CHANGES DOWNTOWN OFFICES

Downtown offices of Avondale Estates, Atlanta's scientifically-planned suburban development, have been moved from 173-175 Peachtree street, at Ellis street, to 63 North Broad street. The same tastefulness of furnishings and decoration that marked the Peachtree street quarters has been lavished upon the new offices, which were selected as being more accessible to the center of real estate activities.

Progress of the new suburb along lines of increased public interest, continuance of the program of home building, and activity toward completion of the paving program, was announced by John H. Byrley, general manager of the new department. Paving of the lake and golf sections has been pressed, with the likelihood that the seven miles of street frontage of this unit will be completely paved and improved by the end of fall. One of the achievements in this connection has been completion of paving on the streets encircling Lake Avondale, providing a smooth boulevard more than a mile long about this stretch of clear water on which canoeing has been developed as a popular sport.

Powers To Plead For Wayward Girl In Sermon Today

Evangelist "Jack" Power, who recently decided to make Atlanta his future home after leaving Washington, D. C., will fill the pulpit both morning and night at the Atlanta Christian church, East Atlanta, today.

His morning subject will be, "Does It Pa yto Serve God," and at night he will deliver his specialty, "The Prodigal Daughter; Or a Plea for the Wayward Girl."

"I am strong for the one standard," Power says.

MRS. M. C. HOLTZCLAW PASSES AT MARIETTA

Marietta, Ga., October 2.—(Special.)—Mrs. Marietta Clark Holtzclaw died at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. L. B. Robeson. Mrs. Holtzclaw was the widow of Judge H. M. Holtzclaw, of Perry, Ga., and was the mother of the late Major K. N. Holtzclaw and Dr. H. M. Holtzclaw.

Her living children are, Mrs. L. B. Robeson, of Marietta, and two sons, T. C. Holtzclaw, and John G. Holtzclam, of Perry. She also leaves a large number of grandchildren and great grandchildren.

If Mrs. Holtzclaw had lived until October 28, she would have been 93 years old. She had been an invalid for the last five years.

The funeral will be held in Perry Monday morning.

DAVIS STREET SCHOOL LOCATION CHANGED

Relocation of the Davis Street school, authorization of the purchase of additional property for construction of another unit at Hoke Smith Junior High school, approval of appointment of G. Loyd Preacher as supervising architect for work to be done in administration of bond funds and a proposal to employ a bond clerk in the department of education, Saturday featured a meeting of the school committee of city council.

The session was held at the city hall and was attended by Willis A. Sutton and R. R. Ritchie, superintendent and assistant superintendent, respectively, of the schools.

The present Davis Street school will be shifted to another part of the same site in order to permit construction of the proposed new structure, Mr. Ritchie said.

ARKANSAS LEADERS WILL VISIT ATLANTA

Atlanta will be visited Sunday, November 14, by a party of 125 prominent Arkansas business men, who will be entertained by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce during their stay, according to B. S. Barker, executive vice president of the chamber.

The party will leave Camden, Ark., on November 12 and will make a "textile tour" through Georgia and the Carolinas, visiting the more important cotton mill cities. The party will include the governor-elect of Arkansas, President L. W. Baldwin, of the Union Pacific railway, and many other prominent men.

Visitors will spend part of the day on a visit to Stone mountain, Grant park and the Cyclorama, and through the service committee of the chamber of commerce will be given opportunity to meet prominent Atlanta men and women.

Window Dressing Expert Arranges Displays for Nunnally Candy Company

A window display of the new Nunnally candy "College Box" harmonized with the Emory university colors, is shown above as designed by Gene Curtis, of the Nunnally company, for Jeffares-Long Drug company, at Emory university.

Gene Curtis, widely-known window display expert, has been given complete charge of the displays for the wholesale department of Nunnally Candy company, according to announcements made Saturday.

Prior to his connection with the Nunnally company, Mr. Curtis did specialty display work for several years with Colgate & Co. It was while working for that concern that he gained a national reputation as a display expert.

Mr. Curtis recently completed the dressing of a Nunnally candy window for the Jeffares-Long Drug company, a new drug store at Emory university. The display consists of a layout of the new Nunnally "College Box" and other decorations in Emory colors. He is designing special work for the oncoming holidays for Halloween, Thanksgiving and Christmas, it was stated.

Roadside Squire And Cop Must Go, Candler Says

"If motoring progress and, particularly the use of the automobile, is to keep pace with car registration and the demand for individual transportation, it is imperative that steps be taken to remedy the apparent evils of the present-day system concerning the vehicular laws of our state. The Atlanta Motor club," said William Candler, president, "is interested in the betterment of motoring conditions for all motorists and the suggestions we have to offer are in line with a policy of being a service to the community and to the state.

"Although our car registration is increasing by thousands each year, motoring progress is still hindered by countless restrictions and discriminations. There should be a clearer definition and understanding of the rights of motorists. Above all we need simplification and uniformity in vehicular laws, especially in traffic regulation.

"It has been proven that our present system of taxation is not only unscientific and inequitable but also highly discriminatory. The motor vehicle is too important as an agency of transportation to permit its natural growth and expansion to be hindered in any manner by haphazard methods of taxation.

"A respect for the rights of motorists on the highway must be established. The roadside squire and cop must go. There is no place in American practice for the fee system of arrests, which are operated solely as a means of revenue for a few individuals who hold office in the municipalities.

"We must get away from the tendency to blame the motorists for every accident which happens. Too often the motorists are blamed for accidents for which they are not responsible, but which can be traced directly to the actions of pedestrians or moving vehicles, other than automobiles and trucks. The motorists must be protected against the thousands of flimsy and annoying suits brought against them, by professional damage seekers and gold diggers."

CHATTOOGA TO VOTE ON TAX EXEMPTION

Summerville, Ga., October 2.—(Special.)—Following the calling of a special election by Ordinary J. Edgar King for Tuesday, November 2, for the purpose of letting the voters of Chattooga county decide whether new manufacturing industries will be exempted from taxation for a term of five years, under provisions of an act of the Georgia legislature, J. F. Pless, mayor of Summerville, has ordered an election for the same date in order to give the voters an opportunity to decide whether or not the city of Summerville will exempt new enterpriss.

J. Edgar King, ordinary, also has called an election to be held on November 2 for the purpose of choosing a county treasurer to fill the unexpired term of George W. Sewell, who had held the position since 1914.

MOVE TO PAVE EAST FAIR BEGUN

Initial steps looking toward paving, widening and extension of East Fair street are expected to be taken Monday by city council, when that body is slated to consider a letter from the Atlanta Improvement association suggesting the improvement as the "shortest, quickest and most direct route into the heart of Atlanta from the east side."

It is expected that the city, Fulton county commissioners and DeKalb county will cooperate in the improvement, and in addition to sending copies of the letter making the suggestion, to council and commissioners, others also were dispatched to the mayor of Atlanta, the mayor of East Lake, the Stone Mountain Memorial association, Avondale Estates and the three Atlanta newspapers.

"East Fair street extends in practically an unbroken straight line from Whitehall street to about a mile beyond East Lake, only a short distance from Columbia seminary and Avondale, crossing East Lake drive one block north of the East Lake Country club," the letter, which was signed by A. O. Randall, secretary, pointed out.

East Fair is paved to Whiteford avenue. Street cars and interurban cars operate on it as far out as the city stockade. By widening the street out as far as the street cars operate, and paving and extending it from Whiteford avenue to Avondale and by extending East Mitchell into Fair street and Capitol avenue, the street would be an important thoroughfare from the east side.

BARRY WRIGHT SPEAKS TO FORSYTH VOTERS

Forsyth, Ga., October 2.—(Special.) Barry Wright, of Rome, spoke here this afternoon in the interest of John N. Holder for governor. He was introduced by Hugh H. Hardin, well known Forsyth citizen. The speaking was in the courthouse.

The speaker reiterated the charges made over the state against Dr. Hardman about the bull calf and the widow's blanket, and also attacked the public record of the Commerce man. He praised the record of Mr. Holder, both in private and public life.

Monroe county was carried by J. O. Wood on September 8.

'Slur' on Watson's Memory Claimed by Clarke Countian

"The evidence is cumulative and convincing that Dr. Lamartine G. Hardman has slurred the memory of the late Senator Thomas E. Watson more than once during his campaign, denials of his campaign managers to the contrary notwithstanding, "Says a statement issued Saturday by the Holder headquarters, in the Kimball house.

"In a speech at the Colonial theater, in Athens, during his campaign, Dr. Hardman declared that 'he wanted to educate the country boys so that they would not grow in ignorance and follow a man like Tom Watson.'

"That the doctor made this statement is testified to by Mr. H. H. Winn, a prominent citizen of Clarke county, and a Hardman supporter, who heard the Colonial theater speech.

"Mr. Winn swears that he heard Dr. Hardman's speech at the Colonial theater, and that he said among other things,

"Mr. Winn, on yesterday, at Athens, made the following affidavit before James W. Arnold, notary public in Clarke county:

"Georgia, Clarke county, in person appeared before me came H. H. Winn, and who by me being duly sworn upon oath deposes and says; that he is fifty years old and has been resident of said state and county all his life. Deponert says that he was present at the Colonial theater in Athens, Ga., on the night that Dr. L. G. Hardman spoke in the interest of his campaign for governor. That he does not remember the exact date but it was a few days prior to the election held on September 8, 1926. Deponent says that Dr. Hardman discussed his experience as a legislator and said that he was the author of several bills, namely the bill creating the tubercular sanitorium at Alto, Ga., the bill providing serum for hydrophobia and bill providing serum for diptheria, and said that he was the first man to create a sentiment for better roads in Georgia and introduced the first highway bill. That he was the first man to introduce the teaching of agriculture in Georgia, that he passed the first agricultural bill in Georgia. He said that he wanted to educate the country boys so that they would not grow up in ignorance and follow a man like Tom Watson. Deponent says that he is for Dr. Hardman, but the above is true and while he does not like publicity nevertheless he discussed the remarks with some friends the day following the speech and thought at that time that the doctor was using poor judgment to make such remarks even if he felt that way. More will follow."

Trinity Memorials Urged by Hallman In Marietta Speech

Marietta, Ga., October 2.—(Special.)—Urging people of this section to think of Stone mountain, Peachtree Creek park and Kennesaw mountain as a trinity of memorials to the south rather than as separate projects, Henderson Hallman, originator of the Peachtree Creek park memorial project, and former Governor Nat E. Harris spoke here Friday at the meeting of the Kennesaw Mountain Memorial park commission.

In addition to many other speakers, Mr. Hallman and former Governor Harris dwelt on the fact that the three projects are reconciliation monuments, reconciling the north and south, as outlined by Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley in his introductory remarks at the meeting.

"The strength of all three projects depends on their unity," Mr. Hallman declared. "Plans are being made for a broad boulevard to connect all three monuments, from Kennesaw mountain through the site of the battle of Atlanta at Peachtree creek and on to Stone mountain."

Senator W. J. Harris agreed to work to his utmost to get the Kennesaw mountain memorial project through at the next session of congress, notwithstanding the outlook for a short session. Among those present from the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and Atlanta were B. S. Barker, Henderson Hallman, former Governor Harris, Dudley Glass, Nick Ayer, Sam W. Small and others.

ALL POSTAL BOXES USED AT BAINBRIDGE

Bainbridge, Ga., October 2.—(Special.)—That every box in the local postoffice is in use shows how Bainbridge has grown in population within the last few weeks. Up to a short time ago there were boxes to rent but the recent influx of new people to this community is noticeable, not only in postoffice conditions but in the demand for houses as well.

C. J. Williams is postmaster here.

RETAIL DEALERS PLAN ANNUAL FOOD SHOW

The sixth annual food show of the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers association will be held in the auditorium-armory November 1 to 6, according to announcement made Saturday by Ernest Bell, general chairman of this year's committee in charge, who declares that the 1926 food show will be even superior to the one held last year.

More than three-fourths of last year's exhibitors already have taken space for this year and the committee anticipates all available space being sold within the next week or 10 days. A large committee of retail food dealers is meeting weekly to formulate additional plans and features to make this food show more attractive than the preceding ones.

In addition to last year's exhibitors, five food manufacturers and distributors who have come to Atlanta within the past year have signed for space. Quite a large number of out-of-town manufacturers have signified their intention of attending and participating in the show.

Fifty-four exhibitors, including many prominent national food manufacturers, have already taken space, leaving only 14 spaces available.

"The Atlanta food show has gained an enviable reputation." General Chairman Bell said, "for the character of those who attend and all Atlanta can feel proud of that reputation. National exhibitors have repeatedly commended the food show for the big attendance of so many good people, declaring no other food show had such an attendance of good citizens."

The executive committee in charge of the event is: Ernest Bell, general chairman; R. V. Bergen, secretary-manager; G. D. Bridges, M. M. Bullard, J. H. Bullock, A. J. Elliott, J. H. Herritt, J. R. Morris, S. D. Mullinaux and M. Weinberg.

CHATTOOGA SELECTS SPELLER FOR CONTEST

Summerville, Ga., October 2.—(Special.)—Miss Eddie Baker, of Gore, was selected to represent Chattooga county in the state spelling contest at the Southeastern fair in Atlanta on October 4. The elimination contest was held at the Summerville High school building Monday afternoon. Three schools were represented.

Summerville was represented by Miss Francs Myers, Menlo by Miss Leida Jean Cleckler, and Gore by Miss Eddie Baker.

Brenau Graduates 'Marrying'

:: OLDEST STUDENT LIVES AT NORCROSS ::

Type, Questionnaire Shows

Gainesville, Ga., October 2.—(Special.)—"After graduation—What?" A questionnaire recently sent out to over 4,000 former students and alumnae of Brenau college reveals some interesting statistics taken from the first 1,000 questionnaire cards returned to the Alumnae association.

First of all, the Brenau girl is the marrying type. Out of 1,156 girls, 773 are married. The Brenau girl also believes in the family, as shown by the fact that 924 future "Brenau fans" have been born. Among these are five pairs of twins.

The credit for the largest family goes to Mrs. H. D. Still (Margaret Hair) of 100 Dexter street, Blackville, S. C. She has eight children, the oldest 21, the youngest four months. Next in line are three "Brenau girls" each with a family of seven; three with six children, four with five children, 32 with four children and 52 with two children. Coming down to the younger married women, we find 145 with two children, while 241 have one child.

Although married, 83 out of 773 women are engaged in various occupations outside the home. Many of these teach music, oratory or academic subjects in high schools and colleges. Several are professional musicians. One has described herself as "dairy woman and farmerette." Among others are two playwrights, a contractor, a tea-house hostess, two costume designers, a historian, a gift-shop proprietress, a serologist and a song writer.

According to the records, Brenau college develops a great many teachers. Of these, 78 are teaching music, either by private lessons, or in schools and conservatories; 151 are teaching various other branches; 44 are in business offices. Of these, 19 are stenographers, 11 private secretaries, four clerical workers, two saleswomen, seven bookkeepers and one bank cashier.

The oldest student of Brenau college has been discovered in Mrs. T. D. McDaniel (Emala C. Wilkes), of Norcross, Ga. She entered in 1878 when the college had just been founded as the Georgia Baptist seminary. This last spring Mrs. McDaniel attended the annual alumnae reunion at commencement itme, May 29, and enjoyed meeting old classmates, among them Mrs. J. H. Hunt (Aurora Strong, of Gainesville, Ga.), of the class of 1882, and who recently donated the Dixie-Hunt hotel, valued at $250,000 to Brenau college, as a start for its endowment fund. Another student who started when Brenau college was in its infancy is Mrs. Elbert Davis (Nettie V. Robertson), of Auburndale, Fla. She entered in 1880.

MARKET BULLETIN FUNDS HELD UP

mailing list and machinery following the recent resignation of L. B. Jackson as head of the State Market bureau, it was declared at the capitol Saturday.

At headquarters of Mr. Holder in the Kimball House it was said late Saturday afternoon that no one was present at that time qualified to make a statement on behalf of Mr. Holder, who was out of the city in the interest of his campaign. An early statement will be made, however, it was indicated.

The governor's letter follows:

October 2, 1926.

"Hon. William J. Speer,
"State Treasurer,
"The Capitol, City.

"Dear Sir: I am writing to advise you that I will approve no more warrants covering the expenses of the market bureau bulletin of the state agricultural department until I am satisfied as to just how much of the expenditure involved is to be properly charged to the public service.

"You will therefore please await a careful investigation of the expenditures involved in any warrant covering the activities of this bureau of the state agricultural department.

"I am sending you this notice as the result of the evident use for political purposes of the mailing list of the Market Bureau Bulletin, this list aggregating, as I am advised, 70,000 names covering practically every militia district of the state, and compiled and printed at a great cost to the state. Although it was announced last week that the entire year's appropriation had been exhausted and the publication of the Market Bulletin must be suspended, there can be no possible doubt of the use of this mailing list this week for political purposes. It is a printed list with each name bearing the expiration designation.

"This entire list has evidently been used for political purposes, the addresses being clipped from the printed roll and placed on envelopes instead of on the Market Bulletin for which the list was prepared.

"This is a flagrant abuse of the function of the agricultural department and I will approve no warrant on account of the Market Bureau Bulletin until I am satisfied as to just how much of the expense should be charged to the state and how much to the political purpose for which this list has been used.

"Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) "CLIFFORD WALKER.

U. S. AID IS ASKED IN EUROPE'S PEACE

a sympathetic echo, especially in the United States," he said.

Referring to the international iron pact concluded by Germany, France, Belgium and Luxemburg, Stresemann said that business had become the pace-maker for the new European structure."

"Business is disregarding frontiers," he said, "and is engaged in eliminating the anomalies of the peace treaties."

He repudiated the suggestion that such business combines were aimed against rival foreign enterprises and asserted that neither the Russo-German treaty nor the Franco-German negotiations were directed against a foreign power. He ridiculed the suggestion that German policy was hostile to the United States.

NO COMMENT MADE BY ADMINISTRATION.

Washington, October 2.—(AP)—A plea voiced in Cologne today by German Foreign Minister Stresemann for American participation in the rehabilitation of Europe attracted considerable attention here but failed to evoke any authorized comment in administration circles.

The address seemed to be regarded as designed to throw light in connection with the flurry caused in European capitals by the recent private conferences between the French and German premiers and later between the Italian premier, Mussolini, and Sir Austin Chamberlain, British foreign minister, rather than for the significance of its reference to the United States.

In an address at Cambridge to which the German statesman referred in making his plea, President Coolidge stressed the importance in American eyes of security agreements between the European powers as basis of economic restoration. It contained a suggestion, at least, that American financial aid in that readjustment could hardly be expected under any other conditions.

Urged Security Pact Idea.

The president has frequently urged the security pact idea in connection with arms limitation problems abroad. Speaking at Arlington on Memorial day this year he said:

"Europe has the League of Nations. That ought to be able to provide those countries on certain political guarantees which our country does not require."

In view of the emphasis the president has always laid in his public utterance upon the policy of standing aloof from European political entanglements, the expression of Chancellor Stresemann probably cannot be regarded as more than a reiteration of the wish that the Washington government could find it possible to participate directly in European readjustments, either as a member of the league, the world court, or in any other way that participation could be secured.

FRANCE AND BRITAIN DECLARED IN ACCORD.

Paris, October 2.—(AP)—France and Great Britain are in accord concerning the negotiations for a closer Franco-German understanding, it was announced today after a talk between Foreign Minister Briand and Sir Austen Chamberlain.

The British foreign secretary stopped off to see M. Briand while returning to London from Italy, where he conferred at Leghorn Thursday with Premier Mussolini.

The two statesmen today went over the whole gamut of international problems, according to a communique issued after the meeting, and agreed on a common policy.

Neither the Leghorn conference nor M. Briand's recent meeting with Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany at Thoiry was mentioned in the communique, but it is understood Sir Austen informed the French minister of the substance of his conversation with Mussolini.

When they separated, the ministers showed the same cordial intimacy that has characterized their relations since the Locarno conference, from which it was deduced that their exchange of views was entirely satisfactory.

"BE NOT DECEIVED," DR. HARDMAN SAYS

holds becomes a matter of deep concern to every man who has the interest of himself, and the interest of his children at heart.

"Before you pass final judgement upon the fitness of this man, I want you to observe his political alignments, his treachery to men whose friendship he sought, the inconsistencies that have characterized his every performance, and the hopeless tangle in which the affairs of the highway department are involved. Then if you conscientiously believe that a man of his type is entitled to promotion, is competent to handle the vastly more important affairs of state, I will cheerfully abide by your decision, and still do everything in the capacity of a private citizen to make Georgia a better state in which to live.

"But until that time comes, I charge him at the ballot box with having created and operated for his personal gain, the most pernicious political machine that ever oppressed a free people. The Brown machine, which the indignant voters destroyed on the 8th of September, was a harmless toy compared with this evil giant that bestrides the state of Georgia. There has never been anything approaching it as an instrument of tyranny since the days of feudalism in England.

Camouflages Issues.

"Mr. Holder strives to camouflage its reality by directing attention to a mythical machine born of his own desperation.

"His election to the governorship, by which he would appoint his own successor, would mean not only the perpetuation of his highway machine and the continued squandering of money and continued road inefficiency, but would mean the establishment of a political dynasty under Holder's czarship that would set Georgia back a quarter of a century, and continue to throttle the people of this state with ring rule such as in no state in America today.

"But the intelligent voters can not be deceived by any mirage that his imagination can conjure. They are thoroughly aroused to the dangers that threaten their institutions, and the 6th of October will witness another Runnemede.

"I would not attempt to enumerate, much less to reply to all the frivolous charges that my opponent has brought against me in this race; for I feel that my true life's history is ample refutation of every calumny that his devilish ingenuity can invent. But when he ghoulishly invades the sacred precents of the dead and tries to invoke the shade of the mighty Watson to bolster his vanishing hope, every decent Georgian must protest so vile a use of an honored name. Did ever demagogy descend to lower depts? The Watson I knew and respected would have been the last man to countenance the wholesale pillage of his native state. Although Mr. Holder be in the throes of political death, this convulsive sacrilege may not be forgiven him.

"I profoundly regret that I have lived to see the fair name of Georgia dragged through the mire of petty politics, while her languishing industries pay the bills for her own undoing; and I cherish the hope that in the providence of God I may be given the opportunity to rescue her from the pitiless graft and incompetence of those who are guiding her destiny to irretrievable ruin.

Points to Record.

"During the several terms that I was a member of the legislature I advocated every progressive measure that came up for consideration, as the journal of the house will disclose. Many of these bills I introduced myself and the efforts of my opponent to minimize my services will fall upon deaf ears. The credit for what I did can no more be taken away from me than the credit for the revolutionizing parcel post law can be taken from the lamented Watson.

"But I have long since realized that no member of either house can ever do for Georgia what lies within the sphere of the chief executive. It is within his administrative powers that the real salvation of the people lies It is the province of the legislature to pass wise and beneficent laws for the governance of the people; but the constitution imposes upon the governor alone the solemn duty of seeing that every department of the state is organized according to the law by which it was created and made to function in the interest of the tax payer and not in the interest of the politician whom fortune has placed in that position.

"I would be untrue to my own ideals, untrue to the great state from which I hold my commission and commands my undying allegience if I failed to appoint as department heads men of the highest courage, character and ability to be found in the state of Georgia, regardless of politics or religion. I promise you that every unfit man—every unnecessary man—within the appointive power of the governor shall be weeded from the public service. This is the only promise I have made, or will ever make, in this campaign.

Appeals to Voters.

"Your attention has been called to the manner in which I have conducted my own business, and I have been accused of immodesty when I mentioned it myself, just as every word I have spoken has been 'twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools.' But whether I am immodest or not is not germain to the question. In asking you to honor me with the highest office within your gift I have felt that you had a right to know my qualifications. I may be vain, but this is certainly no evidence of vanity. It is a matter of business—of the most important business.

"The affairs of Georgia might well tax the executive ability of any man within her borders. I may not measure up to the requirements of this great office, but I will bring to it a patriotic devotion, an untiring energy and every resource that my experience has taught me. If I should fail I can assure you that your disappointment can be no greater than mine."

SUCCESS AT POLLS SEEN BY HOLDER FORCES

few votes behind the leader. Especially was this true of practically all of the counties carried by Messrs. Carswell and Wood.

"Holds to Counties."

"Obviously, the campaign, from a practical standpoint, has involved, first, the holding of counties carried on September 8, and second, gains sufficient in other counties to give Mr. Holder a clear, clean-cut majority of the county unit vote.

"That these practical elements have been successfully handled is abundantly demonstrated by conditions existing today in a big majority of the counties of the state. No one familiar with the Holder campaign entertains the slightest doubt that both the first and second aims, as indicated, have been attained, as will be convincingly shown when the votes are counted next Wednesday.

"The conditions that so unmistakably point to Mr. Holder's nomination are due in the main to the awakening of the people to the real issues. Mr. Holder himself has borne the brunt of the campaign to arouse the voters of Georgia. His stumping tour of the state is without a parallel in the history of Georgia politics, and our information is that in no campaign since the memorable contest between Hoke Smith and Clark Howell, in 1906, have the people been aroused to a greater pitch of enthusiastic zeal.

"The people realize the necessity of putting in office a man of John Holder's qualifications, who will bring the legislative and executive branches of the government in closest harmony and cooperation.

Bonds Issue, Claim.

"Mr. Holder has shown the fallacy of a great bonded indebtedness of ninety-three million dollars, supplemented by many more bonds in the future years, which will load down generations yet unborn with a debt under which tax payers will groan for a century.

"Mr. Holder has brought another great issue into this campaign, one of paramount importance to the people. He has said with emphasis that the state banking department must be reformed, its present head removed and the disgraceful state of affairs at the capitol, which have cost Georgians many millions of dollars, ended forever.

"No issue ever presented to the people of Georgia has received such unanimous aproval as Mr. Holder's attack on the banking department, which stands entrenched in the capitol, with the governor himself at the head of the machine which is doing its best to land Dr. Lamantine G. Hardman in the gubernatorial office.

"During the past six years hundreds of banks have failed in Georgia, communities have been bled white, families impoverished and widows and orphan children have been left stranded and all their savings wiped out, while vast sums of money have been given to liquidating agents, and court costs eating up the money which otherwise might have gone to depositors.

"The failure of the banking department to do its duty caused these disastrous failures and the governor of Georgia, who was called upon by the Fulton county grand jury to remove Superintendent Bennett has done nothing.

Spoke Once in Primary.

"In the first campaign, Mr. Holder made but one speech, that before his home people at Jefferson, a dignified statement of the issues of the campaign. During that time he was being slandered and abused from one end of Georgia to the other by Dr. Lamartine G. Hardman and his two allies, George H. Carswell and Joe Wood.

"Mr. Holder has answered during the last campaign the slanders and abuse that he stood in patience and silence in the first campaign. He has shown his oponent to be a candidate of the only machine in Georgia—one headed by the governor and his satellites. He has shown the record of Dr. Hardman from one end of Georgia to the other, has stripped that gentleman of his cloak and shown him to be a cold, calculating, heartless business man.

"Mr. Holder entered into this discussion of his opponent with reluctance, turning aside from the issues of the campaign in order to give the people the true facts. He has given them the facts. He has laid bare the record and the voters of Georgia may be entrusted to render their overwhelming verdict in favor of John N. Holder on Wednesday next."

LABOR ATTITUDE HIT BY HOLDER.

The attitude of Dr. Lamartine G. Hardman toward labor, more especially employees of his cotton mills at Commerce, is set forth in a statement given out by J. N. Holder headquarters Saturday, and made by W. H. Epps, superintendent of the cotton mills at Jefferson, in Dr. Hardman's home county of Jackson.

"During all my experience in cotton mill work I have never known one mill to write another protesting against a wage advance during such times as we had in 1918," says Mr. Epps' statement, "yet this is what Dr. Hardman did.

"I do not see how any cotton mill operative or any laboring man can afford to vote for a man who has made millions off laboring people and is still trying to grind them down.

"I know for a certainty that Dr. Hardman does not look after the comforts of his overseers as he should. At his Commerce mills there are no overseers' houses, as there are at other mills, and to my personal knowledge he does not pay his overseers as much in comparison as other mills do.

"In 1918, Dr. Hardman wrote a letter to each of the mills in his immediate section, asking that wage increases be discontinued. He said that it was disorganizing labor. It has always been his policy to keep down the price of labor to the very lowest ebb.

"I am making this statement that laboring people generally may be fully informed about Dr. Hardman's stand toward labor. I am advocating the election of John N. Holder, and appreciate his sympathetic attitude. I have worked my way up from cotton mill sweeper to superintendent, and know about the hardships of cotton mill operatives."

Parent Is Liable If Place Is Held Open in College

In a case where a parent or guardian makes a reservation to send a student to college, and then changes his mind shortly before the college term opens, the institution is entitled to recover damages for breach of contract, the Georgia court of appeals has just ruled. The case was that of the Georgia Military academy against Dr. S. F. Rogers, appealed from the Randolph superior court.

The military academy sued Dr. Rogers for a year's tuition and incidental expenses, amounting to more than $500, alleging that a reservation was held for Dr. Rogers' son up to within three days of the opening of the school year. The petition set up that Dr. Rogers wrote for a catalogue, complied with the terms by asking for a reservation for his son, and making a deposit of $10, and then withheld notice of the change of plans until just before the term started.

Judge M. J. Yeomans dismissed the case on demurrer, which decision the court of appeals reversed. The higher court did not pass on the question as to whether the college would be entitled to recover an entire year's tuition, but set out that proved damage could be recovered.

ABSOLUTE SATISFACTION OR YOUR MONEY BACK

To this Film on Teeth

Today's leading dental opinion ascribes many tooth and gum disorders. Glistening teeth and healthy gums, according to many authorities, follow as a natural result when film is removed daily this way

MOST persons' teeth and gums are imperiled, according to many authorities, by a film that forms on teeth.

Ordinary brushing having failed to combat it effectively, a new way in tooth cleansing is being advised. A way that differs in formula and effect from previously accepted methods. These are embodied in the special film-removing dentifrice called Pepsodent.

Now an effective film combatant

For years dental science sought ways to fight film. Clear teeth and healthy gums come only when film is constantly combated—removed every day from the teeth.

Film was found to cling to teeth; to get into crevices and stay; to hold in contact with teeth food substances which fermented and fostered the acids of decay. Film was found to be the basis of tartar. Germs by the millions breed in it. And they, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea and most gum disorders.

Thus there was a universal call for an effective film-removing method. Ordinary brushing was found ineffective. Now two effective combatants have been found, approved by high dental authority and embodied in a tooth paste called Pepsodent.

Curdles and removes film
Firms the Gums

Pepsodent acts first to curdle the film. Then it thoroughly removes the film in gentle safety to enamel.

At the same time, it acts to firm the gums—Pepsodent provides, for this purpose, the most recent dental findings in gum protection science knows today. Pepsodent also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. And thus aids in neutralizing mouth acids as they form.

It multiplies the starch digestant of the saliva. Thus combats starch deposits which might otherwise ferment and form acids.

No other method known to present-day science embodies protective agents like those in Pepsodent.

Please accept Pepsodent test

Send the coupon for a 10-day tube. Brush teeth this way for 10 days. Note how thoroughly film is removed. The teeth gradually lighten as film coats go. Then for 10 nights massage the gums with Pepsodent, using your finger tips; the gums then should start to firm and harden.

At the end of that time, we believe you will agree, that next to regular dental care, Pepsodent, the quality dentifrice, provides the utmost science has discovered for better tooth and gum protection.

SLAYER OF WOMAN TRIAL DATE SET

James Johnson, alias "Smoky" Johnson, former Fulton county negro convict, who was indicted Thursday on a charge of murder in connection with the slaying of Miss Amanda Tumlin, who was found in a pool of blood in her home on Moore's Mill road near Howell Mill road several weeks ago, will go on trial for his life Monday, October 11, according to attaches of Solicitor General John A. Boykin's office.

Solicitor Boykin has announced that the trial will be as speedy as possible and that he will demand the death penalty for the negro.

Johnson was arrested several days ago by members of the Fulton county police and soon after was taken to the scene of the murder where he told the horrible details of the killing, according to the police and attaches from Solicitor Boykin's office.

The negro, according to the county police, was seeking a large sum of money which was found in the home by police soon after the murder and he has denied having taken anything from the home after failing to find the money he was seeking.

intendent of parks are empowered to administer the funds of the department for the best interests of the city. We have engaged Mr. Settles to make a survey and advise us in order that we may avoid costly mistakes of other cities. He is under contract and we will have to pay him anyway.

"If Mr. Ford succeeds in getting his paper through council, I will appeal to citizens of Atlanta and civic, patriotic and women's organizations which are keenly interested in proper supervised play programs for Atlanta children to pay Mr. Settles his money. But I don't believe council will stand for this kind of narrowness, which will cripple the playground movement, which up to this time has been such a big success.

"If athletics are good for rich people of Atlanta, they eshould be good for the poor, and it is our purpose to work out community programs which will offer wholesome recreation to children and grown-ups. This survey will help us."

Objects of Survey.

The objects of the survey as set forth by Mr. White are:

1. To make a complete study of all the facilities now owned by the city with a view of determining the very best uses that can be made of them.

2. To provide a basis for the acquisition of new properties from time to time so that they wil best serve the people of the city.

3. To make a layout of all properties to be used for recreation purposes and to work out a plan whereby other property now owned by the city can be used for such purposes. A program of activities will be worked out that will provide recreation not only for children, but also for adults, especially those who cannot provide such facilities and activities for themselves.

4. To complete a program for a period of five years or more which will be outlined and planned and suggest methods of organization details to carry out the program outlined.

"Mr. Settles already has drawn half of his salary, and his report should be completed within about three weeks," Mr. White said. "It would work a real hardship on our department to deprive us of his completed survey, and we will fight any attempt to cripple us. We do not believe council will repudiate the committee and the department in its judgment of what is best for the parks, playgrounds and Atlanta children."

WILL RADIUM AT LAST OPEN THE DOOR OF THE GREAT UNKNOWN?

If you are sick and want to Get Well and Keep Well, write for literature that tells How and Why this almost unknown and wonderful new element brings relief to so many sufferers from Constipation, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout, Neuritis, Neuralgia, Nervous Prostration, High Blood Pressure and Diseases of the Stomach, Heart, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, and other ailments. You wear Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad day and night, receiving the Radio-Active Rays continuously into your system, causing a healthy circulation, overcoming sluggishness, throwing off impurities and restoring the tissues and nerves to a normal condition—and the next thing you know you are getting well.

Sold on a test proposition. You are thoroughly satisfied it is helping you before the appliance is yours. Nothing to do but wear it. No trouble or expense, and the most wonderful fact about the appliance is that it is sold so reasonably that it is within the reach of all, both rich and poor.

No matter how bad your ailment, or how long standing, we will be pleased to have you try it at our risk. For full information write today—not tomorrow. Radium Appliance Co., 102 Bradley Bldg., Los Angeles, Calif. (adv.)

KIDNEYS NEED LOTS OF WATER AT TIMES

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-know.. local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—(adv.)

Added Features Stimulate Radio Show Ticket Sales

Two more fair members of the "On-to-Hollywood Club" of the Atlanta Radio-Electrical exposition. They are competing in the sale of tickets to win a vacation trip to California, or, as second prize, a similar trip to New York. Left, Mrs. Blanche Fincher; right, Miss Florence Germany.

Engagement of Francill, America's radio wizard, as the feature attraction for the Atlanta Radio-Electrical exposition has stimulated public demand for tickets, it was reported at headquarters Saturday by the young ladies of the "On-To-Hollywood" club who are competing in the sale of tickets in the hope of winning one of two vacation trips or a valuable scholarship.

Miss Thelma Kimberly, of 99 Park drive, still leads, according to E. E. Floyd, chairman of the special committee. Cash reports from the various contestants, tabulated Saturday morning, also revealed that the group of "five best sellers" included Miss Mary Ridgway, of the Atlanta Biltmore; Mrs. Mary Allen, 279 South Whiteford avenue; Mrs. Blanche Fincher, of 655 Elbert street, and Miss Elizabeth Watson, of 330 Pulliam street.

"Undoubtedly Francill is the best drawing card we could have secured," Chairman Floyd said. "We find that many Atlantans remember that Francill came here a few years ago with a bag of tricks at one of Atlanta's earliest expositions of this nature, and he has added several amazing radio acts to his interesting reportoire.

Expectations High.

"We expect the show this year to be one of the most complete ever held in the country. Attendance records of previous shows will be smashed."

Francill recently appeared before audiences of 8,000 twice daily at a radio show in Milwaukee, and his act was the sensation of the city. A Milwaukee newspaper, describing his act, said, in part:

"A weird and startling effect is produced by this marvel of the mystic waves. By the manipulation of switches and dials, he causes an eight-foot dreadnaught to move to and fro, from right to left, and navigate generally as a modern fighting vessel. A small bell rings. A fog horn is sounded. A flag is run up a mast, a searchlight is played over the audience. A small phonograph inside the vessel is played to represent the ship's band. A .32-calibre revolver is fired, spitting forth a blaze to represent the cannon.

"Port-holes are large cut jewels of various colors, with electric lights behind the gems, which flash on and off. Strings of colored lights run up over the masts, presenting a vision of rare beauty. Single and combination operations of the ship are effected simultaneously. The boat appears to have mechanical life and power."

Francill also controls two stock model automobiles by radio, flashing the lights on and off, sounding or silencing the horns, starting or stopping the motors, and other novelties. He will allow spectators to operate the various devices to show there is no trickery or fraud, it is said.

J. C. Calhoun, chairman of the program committee, is enthusiastic over the engagement of Mark Goff's Pennsylvania orchestra, which will furnish two concerts daily during the show.

On Monday morning the galleries will be thrown open to the general public, with artists whose work is included in the collection, present at all times for personally conducted tours and explanations of the significance and importance of the different types and styles of work shown.

Word was received during the past week from other artists, in addition to those already announced, who are coming here for the opening, which is the most important event of the fall in American art circles.

Albert Sterner, in the front rank of American painters, is to be here, he writes J. Carroll Payne, president of the local Art association. Mr. Sterner, examples of whose work hang in the most famous collections, is an American who was born in England. His parents were living in London at the time of his birth, March 8, 1863. He studied in Birmingham, England, and is a pupil of the Julian academy in Paris, under Boulanger, Lefebre and Gerome. He was made an A. N. A. in 1910.

Mr. Sterner won the bronze medal at the Paris exposition in 1900; the silver medal for water color and bronze medal for drawings at the Pan-American exposition in Buffalo in 1901, and the gold medal at Munich in 1905. He illustrated many famous books, including "Pru and I" by George W. Curtis, and "Fenwick's Career," by Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

Incidentally, a recent letter from New York, speaking of Miss Harriet Whitney Frishmuth, N. A., the famous woman sculptor who is coming to the exhibition and who will show here in the collection, said of her that she "is without question one of the greatest women sculptors of all time. She is a full-fledged national academician and probably the most successful artist in New York."

sided at the trial, 10 of the jurors signed a petition asking that Howell's sentence be commuted to life imprisonment.

The governor had the clemency appeal under consideration for several days following the refusal of the Georgia prison commission to intervene in the case.

Governor's Order.

The text of the governor's order follows:

"The record discloses that this applicant has lived a consistent life of defiance of the law; that every legal right has been accorded to him; that in every legal process the verdict of the jury has been affirmed; under these conditions I have been unable to escape the conclusion that the judgment of the court should not be interfered with and it is, therefore

"Ordered, that a respite until Friday, November 19, 1926, be and the same is hereby granted that the said John Howell may prepare finally for his fate. $2,000,000 ART EXHIBIT PLANNED of the galleries and the distinguished visitors from all parts of the country.

1,000 Invitations.

One thousand invitations are being sent out for the dinner, but in as much as the seating capacity of the grand ballroom at the Biltmore is considerably less than this, all who are anxious to be present on this occasion, marking a high light in the cultural development of Atlanta and the south and when one of the most distinguished guest lists in the history of Atlanta will be made, are advised to notify the committee of the Atlanta Art association of their acceptance promptly.

Officials of the association on Saturday stated that they expected a capacity crowd at the banquet, both because of the civic importance of the occasion, and as a mark of honor to Mrs. High, showing her the depth of appreciation Atlanta feels for her munificent gift. By a coincidence, the opening of the new museum, with the great exhibition by the Grand Central Galleries, falls this year in "National Buy a Picture Week," which is scheduled from October 12 to 20. That many Atlantans will take advantage of the presence in their city of this great $2,000,000 collection to carry out the slogan of this work, has already been intimated and it is likewise known that a number of the city's best known citizens are planning to purchase pictures either to be donated or loaned to the permanent collection which will be hung on the walls of the High museum, after the Grand Central exhibition is over. Atlanta already possesses, through the art association, a score or more of important works of art ,and the acquisitions to be made during the coming exhibition will, it is believed, make of the High Museum of Art a place luring thousands of visitors as well as home folk by its beauty.

Private Pre-View.

Following the banquet the first view of the exhibition will be private, to members of the association and the out-of-town guests only. This will be on the Sunday afternoon following.

J. L. SATTERWHITE.

Satterwhite Firm Celebrates Second Anniversary Sale

The Satterwhite Furniture company is now two years old. Just two years ago this firm opened for business at the present address, 292 Peachtree street, carrying a large stock of high-grade furniture and home furnishings. Since the opening of this store out on Peachtree, in the newly-developing business section, a growing volume of business has been enjoyed by this firm, and today the outlook for future business was never better, stated Mr. Satterwhite, president of the firm.

In order to celebrate the second anniversary, Satterwhite's is holding an anniversary sale, the announcement being carried in a large advertisement in another section of today's Constitution.

Adhering strictly to a policy of giving good value, keeping their prices right and making terms that suit the customer, have had lots to do with the phenomenal growth of this concerned, Mr. Satterwhite said.

RESTAURANT MEN WILL MEET HERE

More than 5,000 restaurant men of the nation will gather in Atlanta this week for the eighth annual convention of the National Restaurant Men's association at the auditorium-armory.

Assembling here in response to an invitation from Governor Walker and other prominent leaders of Atlanta and the state, restaurant men will have as one of the main features of their program a national exposition of modern machines, equipment, food and supplies at the opening of each day's session. Welcome addresses by Governor Walker and Mayor Sims will extend the freedom of the city to the visitors on their first trip to a meeting in the south.

An indication of the prosperity of the restaurant industry today may be seen in the announcement that of the members of the association expected to attend are 11 millionaires, one of whom, J. O. Mills, of Columbus, has just been nominated by an overwhelming majority for the post of lieutenant governor of Ohio. Mr. Mills is a chain restaurant proprietor and is a past president of the national association and director of the exposition at the convention.

Round of Features.

Entertainment for the restaurant men will include a "typical down south" program on the roof of the Ansley hotel Wednesday night, a trip at Stone mountain and barbecue Wednesday afternoon, the annual banquet at the Biltmore hotel Thursday night, the president's reception and ball at the Biltmore Tuesday night and other features.

On the reception and entertainment committee are J. R. Nix, president of the Atlanta Britling Cafeteria company; Frank Reynolds, assistant to the president of the Dinkler hotels, and E. B. Venable, propietor of Venable's "Southern Cooking" restaurant.

Dr. Stanley L. Krebs, president of the Institue of Mercantile Arts, Chicago; George M. Stroughton, of the Eats Shop, St. Paul; W. L. "Young" Strihling, of Atlanta. G. M. Waters, of Waters-Genter company, Minneapolis; Frank Sohn, art director of the Vitrolite company, Chicago; W. C. Jones, of the McRae restaurant, Colorado Springs; Mrs. Katherine M. Talbot, of the Grey Manor tea room, Dayton, Ohio; Robert Arthur Elwood, pastor of the Boardwalk church, Atlantic City; Mrs. Linda Spence Brown, associate professor of the department of institutional administration, Iowa State college; Ralph Parlette, author, orator, philosopher and humorist, of Chicago, and others will be feature speakers of the convention.

Will Name Officers.

Officers of the association for the new year are to be elected at the close of the convention Friday. H. J. Boekenhoff, of Des Moines, Iowa, is president, and Al. B. Carder is secretary. George G. Fowler is treasurer.

Group meetings of the service section, Ed Venable, chairman; cafeteria section, C. M. Hayman, Kansas City, chairman, and the dairy lunch section, John W. Welch, Omaha, chairman, are to be held Tuesday afternoon. Reports of these meetings will be made to the general convention on Friday morning.

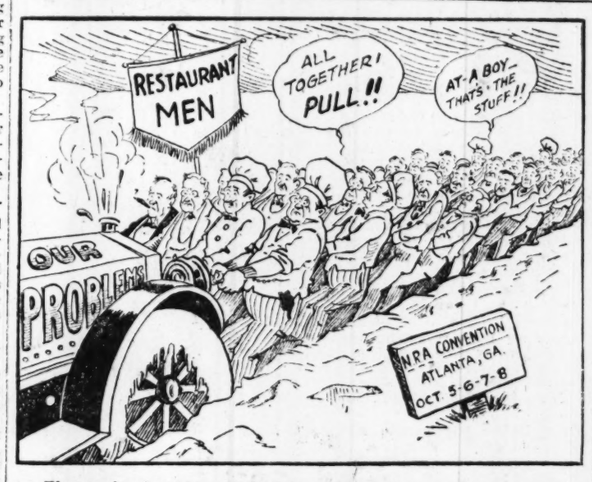

Women attending the meeting will be given an autnomobile ride to Grant park Thursday, where they will be shown the Battle of Atlanta cyclorama. Convention programs have been prepared in a novel style, consisting of tiny note books with the program of each day on a page. As the days pass, the program for each day is detached and thrown away, leaving the next day's program in the top position.

Delegates to the convention will arrive in special trains, one of which arrives today, and three others Monday.

"This is the first time in the history of the association that a convention has been held in the south," local officials said Saturday, "and the entire southland will assist this city in entertaining a great body of men, leaders in their business and outstanding citizens of this commonwealth.

"At least 5,000 restaurant men will attend, according to advance reservations, the first groups arriving today and through Monday and by Monday night this city will be literally thronged with restaurant men. We want to outdo ourselves in entertaining our guests, in seeing that the great outlay of machinery in the auditorium-armory is properly shown and that this feature of the convention is satisfactory. We are equally as anxous to see Atlantans greet these visitors and welcome them for their first convention in the southland."

Restaurant Men Arriving

Thousands of cartoons, similar to the above, more than 50 full pages of advertising in the National Restaurant Men's magazine, and pamphlets and other reading matter have been broadcast over the United States during the past few weeks telling of Atlanta's advantages as a convention city and urging more than 5,000 restaurant men to attend the convention here this week.

Realty Transactions of Week Involve More Than $1,000,000

The Thrower building, on the southeast corner of Pryor and Mitchell streets.

Real estate sales, trades and construction that have been pending for some time in an apparently calm market took place to the extent of transactions involving more than $1,300,000, as announced by various real estate offices Saturday.

Sale of the Thrower building, on the southeast corner of Pryor and Mitchell streets, at a consideration understood to be $300,000, and the sale of a parcel bounded by Spring, Nassau and Walton streets, measuring 80x180x103 feet and improved by a one-story building, for $250,000, together with the transfer of properties in Inman Park section worth approximately $100,000 and other parcels in various sections of the city amounting to $160,000, making a total of more than $800,000, were announced Saturday by the Adair Realty and Trust company.

John C. Baldwin, Jr., and Perry Adair were the representatives of the Adair company who sold the Thrower building for M. L. Thrower to the Atlanta Realty corporation, owners of the Hurt building and other property belonging to the Hurt estate. While the price paid for the Thrower building, which is six stories high, containing 50,000 square feet of floor space and measuring 95 feet on Pryor street and 140 feet on Mitchell street, was not disclosed, it was understood that the structure and lot were sold for $300,000, with properties on Edgewood avenue, in Inman Park section, valued at about $100,000, given as part consideration by the Atlanta Realty corporation.

The building was built in 1911 by M. L. Thrower, owner of considerable property in that section, for the purpose of housing the M. Kutz company, wholesale milliners, and the county courthouse, until the new courthouse could be erected, which was some five years later. According to the history of the building related by Mr. Thrower, its construction was fire-proof in order to afford protection to the public documents of the courthouse, and while occupied by the municipal courts was the scene of several trials of nation-wide interest.

Opens Wholesale District.

Its erection, Mr. Thrower said, marked the opening of South Pryor street as the wholesale district of Atlanta, the section at that time being largely residential and ungraded.

The former owner stated he paid $65,000 for the lot but did not disclose the cost of the structure. While he was offered a large profit on the land before building, the price paid by him represented less than $700 a front foot on Pryor street. In the recent sale the land was appraised at approximately $1,500 a front foot on Pryor street, and the building at $175,000. The present annual rental from the property was said to be $27,000, with the building occupied by the following tenants in addition to M. Kutz company: Gershon Printing company, Crescent Manufacturing company, Atlanta Cap company, Townley Printing company, Princess Manufacturing company, J. J. Cooper and the archives department of the Southern Bell Telephone company.

Block Sold on Spring.

In the other large sale closed by the Adair company within the past few days John C. Baldwin sold the Spring street block with a frontage of 80 feet on Spring, 103 feet on Walton and 180 feet on Nassau to the Trust Company of Georgia for the Southern Mortgage company, at a valuation of $250,000. As part consideration $160,000 in properties, including a four-story building, at 147-9 Whitehall street, a one-story building, at 12 Porter place, and a vacant lot on the northwest corner of Spring and Pine streets, was given by the Trust Company of Georgia. The price paid for the Spring street block represents a valuation of approximately $3,000 a front foot on Spring street.

Other real estate deals which placed the total of property transactions well over the million mark include the sale of a parcel at 80 North Pryor street, improved with a three-story building, now occupied by Ludden Bates Piano company, and reported sold for $71,500 to Lawrence M. Fox, of the Fox Manufacturing company, by L. N. Hyatt, of the National Paper company.

New Construction Projects.

Sales announced by J. H. Whitten, of the Rankin-Whitten company, consist of a parcel of property on Peachtree and Fourth streets, measuring 104 by 232 feet, sold for J. Carroll Payne to a client, at a consideration understood to be about $100,000; another parcel of property at 1062 Piedmont avenue, improved with the 24-unit Delamanta apartments and sold to Harold Beers for Martin B Dunbar, at a consideration of $140,000, with other properties given as part consideration. Ward Wright handled Mr. Dunbar's end of the transaction. Miscellaneous sales amounting to about $50,000 were announced by Mr. Whitten.

Three constructive projects aggregating more than $175,000 were a portion of the past week's real estate business. Work on the Silver Lake mill, a branch of the Silver Lake mill, of Lynchburg, Mass., to be constructed at Chattahoochee, near Atlanta, at a cost of about $85,000, will begin Monday morning, it was announced by A. K. Adams, of the A. K. Adams Construction company, which was awarded the building contract.

New Factory Planned.

The structure, which will be a steel frame of one-story, measuring 480 feet long with a wing 160 feet long, and containing 55,000 square feet floor space, will be completed by January 1, it was stated. The mill will manufacture cotton braid as a part of the textile lines turned out by the headquarters at Lynchburg.

Construction of a substantial commercial unit containing two stores with a 40-foot frontage on Peachtree street, adjoining the Masonic Temple building at Cain and Peachtree streets, has been begun by Chestnut and Johnson, contractors and builders, it was announced Saturday.

The building is being erected for J. Bulow Campbell, who acquired the lot some time ago, said to be worth $300,000, or more, and will cost approximately $17,500. It is to be 100 feet deep and 40 feet wide, and will be finished by January 1, it was stated.

Plans for the erection of an $80,000 church in Inman Park, as outlined by the building committee of the Presbyterian church, of which J. R. Brooks is chairman, were reported to be well under way. Robert Monday is the architect in charge.

FOURTH FLORIDA DOCTOR ARRESTED

Tampa, Fla., October 2.—(AP)—As a result of further investigation of the alleged "diploma mill" said to have been operated widely in Florida and other states, postal inspectors arrested Dr. W. M. Sharpe, 35, of St. Petersburg, and placed him in the county jail here today where he is held in default of $3,000 bond. He is accused of using the mails to defraud, and of conspiracy with Dr. George A. Munch, of Tampa, who was arrested here September 5 on mail fraud charges in connection with the alleged "diploma mill" case. Dr. Munch is out on $5,000 bond.

Dr. Sharpe is the fourth physician arrested as a result of the investigations of Postal Inspectors Ward, of Tampa, and Jervey, of Jacksonville. He was arrested at his home by United States Marshal Law, of Tampa, and brought to Tampa for a hearing before United States Commissioner Williams.

Dr. C. C. Faiman, formerly of Chicago, who played an important part in the famous Sheppard poisoning case, was arrested last week in Panama City. Dr. Faiman was charged with purchasing a fraudulent medical license from a "diploma mill," which is alleged to be a branch of the Florida headquarters. He was taken to Marianna where he was placed in jail under $3,000 bond.

During the trial of William B. Shepard, who was charged with killing young Billy McClintock, a wealthy orphan, Dr. Faiman testified for the state of Illinois that he supplied Sheppard with the typhoid germs with which it was alleged McClintock was killed.

Social Season Plans Are Laid At White House

Judge Blocks Plan For Death Probe

Sebring, Fla., October 2.—(By the Associated Press.)—Judge R. C. Horne, of Glades county, tonight set at rest all rumors and possibilities of the issuance of a coroner's warrant to inquire into the deaths of the flood victims of the Moore Haven hurricane by definitely declining to issue such a document.

In reaching this conclusion, Judge Horne explained that he believed an inquest to be too drastic a measure to be undertaken and that after talking the matter over with Governor Martin, had decided to dismiss the subject and to give his every support to work of rehabilitation.

Washington, October 2.—(AP)—President Coolidge today informed Secretary Jardine that "it is my desire that you use every possible facility" of the agriculture department for the aid of farmers in the Florida storm-stricken area.

The president expressed this wish in a letter to the secretary in reply to a report on the Florida situation by Mr. Jardine. The report said about $300,000 was needed at once by farmers in the storm area.

Mr. Coolidge wrote that if congress "were in session it would authorize immediate and substantial relief for this class of sufferers," and that it was his desire that "you use for this purpose funds of your appropriations as will not interfere with your current operations."

President's Letter.

The president's letter to the secretary reads:

"The reports which you have furnished me from your agents in Florida with regard to the destitution which is facing the farmers in the stricken area of that state indicate clearly the urgent need for prompt and effective assistance in the matter of furnishing them with seeds and fertilizer.

"The federal government always has been quick to respond to an emergency of this nature and I am confident that if the congress were in session it would authorize immediate and substantial relief for this class of sufferers in Florida whose needs cannot be met from other sources.

"The reports set forth that the farmers must grow crops this winter as their only source of living and that it will require approximately $300,000 to furnish them with the seeds and fertilizer necessary to enable them to get started.

"It is my desire that you use every possible facility of your department immediately to meet this crying need of the destitute farmers in the stricken

Officials Declare School Shutdown Crisis Will Pass

City Fathers, Though Offering Few Plans, Confident 'Something' Will Keep Schools Open.

HOFFMAN DEFENDS EDUCATION BOARD

Finance Committee Chairman Answers Critics in Speech Delivered at Meeting of Board.

With all forces of the city government Saturday united in an effort to devise some means to raise a fund of $500,000 to prevent the closing of Atlanta's schools Tuesday, it was predicted freely that a plan to meet the crisis would be evolved Monday and that the schools would remain open.

White students Monday will have a holiday in order that they may attend the Southeastern fair, while negro children will attend school, and unless the financial problem is solved or its solution assured at several meetings slated for Monday and by council Monday afternoon, schools will not reopen Tuesday.

Members of the finance committee of city council, the Atlanta board of education, Mayor Walter A. Sims and other officials will hold a joint meeting at 9 o'clock Monday morning. The board at this session is expected to ask city council to borrow $500,000 and to pledge that it will repay this sum out of money which it will receive in January of next year.

Councilmen Confident.

If this is done and council approves the proposal, Mayor Sims will seek to obtain the indorsement of leading Atlantans to a note to cover the deficit in the board and thus avert the closing which has threatened for the past two weeks.

Members of council Saturday expressed the opinion that "something will be done Monday to prevent the schools from closing Tuesday." None of them seemed to know exactly what move would be taken in the event the mayor fails to secure the necessary indorsements to the city's note.

Councilmen C. D. Knight, W. E. Saunders, Harry York and others, and Aldermen W. Guy Dobbs and J. Allen Couch were among those who declared that some move to relieve the schools would be put through council Monday.

Ragsdale Silent.

L. N. Ragsdale, who by virtue of his nomination in the democratic primary is virtually mayor-elect, Saturday night declined to issue any statement regarding the situation, saying he preferred to await developments. He intimated, however, that he would be willing to cooperate to prevent the actual closing of the schools.

J. Allen Couch, alderman from the fifth, Saturday declared that if council Monday fails to devise some solution of the problem, he will offer a resolution that the finance committee be instructed to reapportion all funds of the city and to give the schools their pro rata share and that when all these are exhausted, that all departments of the city government close at the same time.

Legal authorities Saturday held that the proposal of Councilman Saunders that an emergency tax be levied to relieve the situation would be illegal and untenable if it were attacked by injunction or other legal steps.

Councilman York made an informal

One of the greatest young American contraltos, Kathryn Meisle, is to sing in Atlanta on Sunday, November 14. Miss Meisle is being brought here as guest artist with the Atlanta Symphony orchestra, which will give the first of its 1926-27 series of Sunday afternoon concerts at Loew's Grand theater on that date.

Atlantans, generally, are not so familiar with the artists of the Chicago Civic Opera company, of which Miss Meisle is an outstanding star, as they are with those whose names are included in the roster of the Metropolitan Opera company, of New York, by reason of the annual season of opera given here each spring by the Metropolitan. Nevertheless a number of the Chicago stars have appeared here in concert and all local music lovers who heard Sigrid Onegin last winter, know that when the critics place Miss Meisle's voice in the same rank with that of Madame Onegin, she is possessed of a contralto of remarkable beauty and power.

The action of the Atlanta Symphony association in bringing Miss Meisel here as one of the guest artists for the opening concert is merely an indication of the famous vocalists and instrumental artists who are to appear here this winter in connection with the series of eight Sunday afternoon concerts. They will be a prominent feature in the cultural life of the city and state.

The orchestra this year will also be a greater aggregation than in any of the preceding three years of its existence. It has, as a matter of fact, shown a steady improvement each season, due largely to the inevitable better coordination of the individual performers, as the soul of the orchestra as a whole comes slowly to birth as a distinct entity rather than as a mere grouping of the individual musical genius of 70-odd players.

But in addition to this natural and slow creation of the distinct orchestral spirit, the organization this year will include in its personnel, for the first time, the "first chair" men and concert masters of every orchestra of any moment in the city. During the summer, also a number of remarkable artists on various instruments have located here as teachers, and all of these will be found occupying places in the symphony orchestra.

Enrico Liede, who has been so successful as conductor ever since the first inception of the local symphony idea, and to whom a large part of the steady improvement of the organization is due, will again wield the baton before the conductor's stand.

Rehearsals for the season begin today and arrangements have been made whereby longer time has been secured this year for herearsal than ever before.

In view of the far greater artistic and popular significance of the concerts this season, the demand for seats for the series of eight is greater than day of the concerts, therefore seats ever before. Under existing conditions it is impossible to accept admission price on Sunday afternoons, the

GOVERNOR NAMES STATE DELEGATES TO COTTON PARLEY

Walker Expresses Fullest Sympathy With Conference To Aid Farmers in Crisis.

PLANTERS URGED TO REDUCE CROP

Texan Charges Farmers Will Only Get Poorer If They Disregard His Advice.

Declaring that he was in full sympathy with the spirit of the cotton conference suggested by Governor Whitfield, of Mississippi, to be held in Memphis, Governor Walker, of Georgia, Saturday night said he, nevertheless, believed that cooperative organizations in the south are capable of handling the present cotton crisis.

In a telegram to the Mississippi executive, Governor Walker announced the appointment of a committee of representative business men to the meeting, "that Georgia may cooperate fully," but asserted the conviction that support should be thrown to existing organizations rather than the setting up of new machinery.

"While as governor of Georgia I am in full sympathy with the spirit of the meeting you have called, in my judgment we have in the south organizations like the Georgia Cotton Growers Cooperative association which are entirely capable of handling the present cotton crisis," Governor Walker said in the telegram.

"It is my conviction that we should throw our influence back of these organizations rather than set up any new machinery. The association in this state and its sister state organization sthroughout the belt are entirely capable of financing and handling the entire cotton crop of the south if necessary."

"In order that Georgia may cooperate fully in accomplishing the ends you have in mind I have appointed delegates to the Memphis conference."

On the Georgia committee are: J. E. Conwell, chairman; C. A. Cobb, E. R. Black, John K. Ottley, J. S. Floyd and George C. Harris, all of Atlanta; R. F. Donaldson, of Statesboro; J. Phil Campbell, of Athens; H. J. Bradshaw, of Rome; J. Leonard Rountree, of Summit, and H. A. Petty, of Dawson.

BLACK PLEADS FOR DIVERSIFYING.

Washington, October 2.—(AP)—An appeal to southern cotton planters to reduce the cotton crop next year by at least 25 per cent was issued here today by Representative Black, democrat, Texas.

He urged the farmers to diversify their crops and get away from "so much cotton." If they don't, he said, they will become poorer and poorer.

"What we need to do is to raise a crop small enough to make the mills hungry for cotton and it wouldn't hurt if we made a crop so small that some of them would have to shut down for the want of the staple," he added.

He accused the crop reporting board of the agriculture department of an overestimate of this year's crop, but added that too much cotton was raised during the last season. He said not more than 13,500,000 bales should have been raised while department estimates showed 15,810,000 produced.

Asserting he himself expected to reduce his own acreage 25 per cent, he called on the landlords and tenants to do likewise.

FRENCH VETERANS DISRUPT MEETING

Dissension at Conclave Over Rigidity of Rules Causes Suspension of Sessions.

Geneva, October 2.—(AP)—So violent was the dissension among French associations represented at today's session of the International Association of War Wounded and Ex-Service Men, that the conference had to be suspended temporarily to permit the French delegates to patch up their internal differences.

The controversy was based on what attitude the new organization should bear to the Inter-Allied Veterans association (F. I. D. A. C.). The new association, which includes Germans, has been looked upon as somewhat of a rival to the Inter-Allied Veterans association, which has Americans in its ranks.

Some of the French speakers complained that the rules of the organization were too rigid to insure adhesion of national bodies still outside it, and that the conference was ignoring the convention which F. I. D. A. C. is planning at Luxemburg. Other speakers took an opposite view.

Eventually an agreement was reached by the French delegates and later ratified by the conference whereby the executive committee will communicate with the president of F. I. D. A. C. in an endeavor to secure cooperation by the two organizations in order to further the ideals common to them.

The conference, which passed a resolution opposing war at its session on Thursday, later acclaimed the entry of Germany into the League of Nations and adopted a resolution in favor of disarmament.

It was decided to hold an international peace day annually as a protest against the spirit of war and to demand the right of war crippled soldiers to be heard at the assembly of the League of Nations.

Polar Flight Plane To Visit Forty Cities

Fokker Will Be Piloted by Mechanic of Commander Byrd.

New York, October 2.—(AP)—People in about 40 cities between the east and west coasts will have an opportunity to see the Fokker airplane in which Commander Richard E. Byrd made his historic flight over the north pole.

Starting from Washington on October 7, the big plane will traverse the important air routes of the country, making stops at representative cities. While the itinerary has not been completed, the first flight of the tour will be from Washington to New York, and then to Albany, N. Y. Other cities have not yet been named. Floyd Bennett, who was mechanic on the north pole flight, will pilot the plane.

Harry F. Guggenheim, president of the Daniel Guggenheim fund for the promotion of aviation, who is arranging the tour, said that the department of commerce, the army and the postal air service officials were cooperating in the undertaking. Its purpose is to further nation-wide interest in air travel and in the use of air mail. It is hoped that as a result of the tour, cities and towns along the existing air routes will be encouraged to establish air ports.

LARGE WANTS VISIT TO ATLANTA.

"Atlanta would like very much to see the big Fokker airplane land at Candler field," said E. K. Large, Atlanta postmaster, Saturday night when questioned as to the possibility of the plane being brought here.

"It will be a great thing and the postal authorities in the city will do everything in their power to have the plane fly over the city on its cruise," it was stated Saturday night.

LEADERS OF G. O. P. PREDICT SUCCESS

Senator L. C. Phipps Declares Republicans Are Sure To Win in Five Eastern States.

Chicago, October 2.—(AP)—Political reports from Senator William E Borah, Idaho, on conditions in the west, and by Senator I. C. Phipps, Colorado, chairman of the republican senate campaign committee, were made here today, the latter dealing with eastern states.

Coincident with their statements, Senator Borah offered his services as a campaigner to the committee and was accepted, tentatively being assigned to Indiana, Oklahoma and Missouri.

Senator Phipps declared that in five eastern states where close contests for the senatorship have been claimed, the republican candidate will be successful without exception.

Says Butler Will Win.

The republican party will win, he said, in Massachusetts, New York, Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri, while in Indiana, Ohio and Illinois "the result is not in doubt."

Senator Phipps said:

"In Massachusetts Senator Butler is safe. The claim of the democrats that they can defeat him is absurd He absolutely is in no danger.

"In New York where the democrats are making one of their strongest efforts, Senator Wadsworth will be reelected.

"In Maryland Senator Weller has a remarkable effective organization which is going at full speed and is certain to meet with success.

"In Kentucky, Senator Ernst will

PAST ATTENDANCE RECORDS BROKEN FOR OPENING DAY

More Than 15,000 Visitors Pass Through Gates During First Day of Annual Fair.

ARRAY OF EXHIBITS CENTERS INTEREST

Educational Features, Gay Midway Attractions and Live Stock Greater Than Ever.

Launched with a bombardment of dynamite bombs and artillery and a blare of bugles at 8 o'clock Saturday morning, the Southeastern fair had swung Saturday night into what appeared from every available index to be the greatest season of its 11 years of existence, leaders stated.

The second day of the fair Sunday will be marked by a spectacular program of free entertainment, featured by the first appearance of Basile's famous Madison Square garden novelty band, a second triple balloon ascension, preparatory to next week's balloon races, and a high dive from an airplane into the lake in front of the grandstand by Aerial MacKay, daredevil stunt man of the A. B. McMullen Flying Circus.

Admission both to the grounds and to the grandstand will be free today and free parking space will be provided for automobiles.

Carnival to Arrive.

The Zeidman and Pollie shows, the carnival company engaged for the midway, will arrive during the day and a special permit has been secured for them to start installation of their rides and shows today so that they will all be ready for operation by 10 o'clock Monday morning, when the midway is scheduled to open for children's day at the fair. The gates will open at 8 o'clock Monday morning, the exposition buildings at 9 o'clock and 9:30 o'clock and the midway at 10 o'clock. School children will be admitted Monday at a special price of 15 cents each, which price will include students of colleges and private preparatory schools as well as public schools.

The horse races, free acts in front of the grandstand, midway shows, balloon races and many other features will begin Monday.

Ateendance Heavy.

Attendance estimated late Saturday night exceeded the first day attendance of last year by 40 per cent or more than 15,000 visitors, making the attendance in proportion to the number of exhibits that have been sent to the fair from Atlanta and elsewhere in the southeast. Every available foot of space in the three exposition buildings had been taken two weeks before the opening and more than a score of commercial and county exhibits were rejected during the last two weeks because of lack of space.

The opening of the fair was marked by a brief program of addresses by past and present executives of the fair association, including Mell R. Wilkinson, first president, and now finance chairman; Ivan E. Allen, second president and now executive committee chairman; Arthur L. Brooks, present president; H. G. Hastings and Colonel Frederic J. Paxon, past presidents, and Oscar Mills, former president who is now vice president and general manager.

Big Crowds Attend.

Attendance Saturday, before the complete program of amusements was launched, exceeded the first day of last year's fair by 40 per cent, according to estimates late Saturday night. With the opening of the $50,000 amusement program today, when Basile's famous Madison Square Garden Novelty band plays its first concert, and Monday, when the Zeidman and Pollie shows and the brilliant array of free acts are launched for children and school day, attendance is expected to shatter all records of past history. More than 100,000 school

Heads of Atlanta Public School System Pay Tribute to New Constitution Feature

Coincident with the announcement that The Constitution will Monday begin publication of the new feature, "Men Who Made the World," by Dr. Elliott Shoring, noted historian, Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, and Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president of the board of education, issued statements in which they praised the work as one of the most valuable aids in impressing important historical facts.

Both were enthusiastic in their praise of a similar historical feature carried in the columns of The Constitution, Dr. Eubanks declaring that he has a scrap book of "High Lights of History," which has been run for the past several months.

"These illustrations, accompanied by explanatory remarks of outstanding historians, are of untold value in the teaching of history to children and in impressing them with important events," Mr. Sutton declared. "Several of the history classes have arranged scrap books and are pasting into them the strips carried in The Constitution. I am delighted to know that the scope will be broadened to include short biographical sketches of leading men of all nations, thus enlarging the field of usefulness.

"Dr. Shoring is of course one of the great historians of the present time. It has given me pleasure to carefully examine the first fifty installments of his new feature and his work in this connection undoubtedly ranks up with any he has ever done. It is truly a great feature, and I predict an immediate and overwhelming popularity for it.

"The Constitution is to be congratulated on the new feature, and we are grateful to get it to use in conjunction with our history department."

"No better way to impress students with great historical facts has been devised than that of illustrated strips which have been carried daily in The Constitution for the past several months," Dr. Eubanks stated Saturday. "I have kept a scrap book of "High Lights of History," by Mansfield and consider it one of the most important and valuable supplements to our history texts. The Constitution is performing a meritorious service in behalf of Atlanta school children in adding Dr. Shoring's "Men Who Made the World."

"Many of the great characters of history will be sketched in this new strip, and Atlanta school students will get the benefit of the work. I wish to convey my personal thanks to the paper and to say I consider the addition one of the most valuable made in many months."

MANLEY TRIAL SET FOR OCTOBER 25

W. D. Manley, president of the defunct Bankers' Trust company, who was indicted on various charges growing out of the failure of the chain of country banks, will be placed on trial in the Fulton superior court during the week of October 25, according to attaches of Solicitor General John A. Boykin's offices, Saturday.

Manley was indicted by the Fulton grand jury on a charge of felony, alleging that when president of the Farmers and Traders bank the bank became fraudulently insolvent, and was also indicted on other charges.

According to attaches in Solicitor Boykin's office, Manley will probably be placed on trial Monday, October 25, as the case is expected to last several days.

TAX COLLECTIONS GAIN 100 MILLION

Washington, October 2.—(AP)—An increase of more than $100,000,000 in income tax collections for the third quarter over the same period last year was reported today by the treasury, which said collections amounted to $536,212,000.

This was offset, however, by a drop of $90,000,000 in miscellaneous tax receipts which resulted from the repeal of the capital stock levy. These taxes netted $126,000,000 for the period.

The prospective treasury surplus continued to grow, however, with customs collections amounting to $156,762,000 for the quarter, an increase of more than $11,000,000 over last year.

Optimism over the possible surplus was increased because of the fact that the full effect of repeal of the capital stock tax was expected to be felt in this quarter, this tax netted almost $100,000,000 last year.

No diminution is expected in the increasing returns of income taxes, while the drop in the miscellaneous receipts is not expected to be so large hereafter.

An excess of $238,139,000 receipts over expenditures stands on the treasury books for the first three quarters of this calendar year, compared with an excess of $129,280,000 last year.

MANY NEW USES FOR LINOLEUM IN MODERN HOME

Always a boon to housewives since its invention by Frederick Walton in 1863, linoleum in the last few years has shown unexpected versatility as an all-around article in the modern home.

It makes an excellent lining for closet shelves, especially if the shelves are exposed. Not only does it lend smart color to the closet, but, because of the germicidal qualities of linoleum and the ease with which it can be cleaned, it also makes a very sanitary shelf finish.

The fact that linoleum is waterproof has opened up another practical use—that of drain board covering. Many builders are now constructing special service drain boards with tops of colorful linoleum firmly cemented in place. Housewives who have such modern drain boards in their kitchens say that they make dish washing a lot easier because plates don't slip on the linoleum and because it is so easy to wipe clean.

The breakfast nook gives modern linoleum still another task to perform. Here a jaspe effect in green or blue dresses up the table top and keeps the seats looking spic-and-span. Hot dishes can't scar the linoleum table top, spilled things won't stain it, nor can it crack or chip.

Some housewives have found that small pieces of linoleum, cut in squares or circles, make excellent service mats. They stand the heat of dishes well, and can be washed again and again without damaging them one bit. Unusual decorative effects can be obtained, too, by painting brightly-colored borders or flowered designs on the linoleum mats. Paint holds well on linoleum, for linoleum is made largely of linseed oil, one of the ingredients of good paint.

Then there are tea table tops, service trays, coasters and bridge table tops which are made of linoleum. And for the desk, a pad, made of a large square of linoleum, with leather or silver corners. Nor is the children's room overlooked. A large square of plain black held in place on the nursery wall with a wood moulding, makes an excellent blackboard. It also serves as a board for tacking up paper cutouts, pictures and other things children like to make.

All these uses point to the two qualities of modern linoleum which have made it so acceptable as a floor for every room of the house—beauty and long wear. With colors that go clear through to the back, with designs that decorators and architects approve as correct, the modern floor of linoleum has well earned acceptance as a fine floor for bedrooms, livingrooms, diningrooms, hallways, and sunporches.

If you would like to receive a 20-page book which pictures in full color attractive rooms in which the floors are the very latest idea in linoleum, write to the editor of this page for Hazel Dell Brown's "The Attractive Home—How to Plan Its Decoration." This book tells many unusual facts about a truly remarkable material which is playing such an important role in the home of today.

COMB SAGE TEA IN FADED OR GRAY HAIR

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for only 75 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

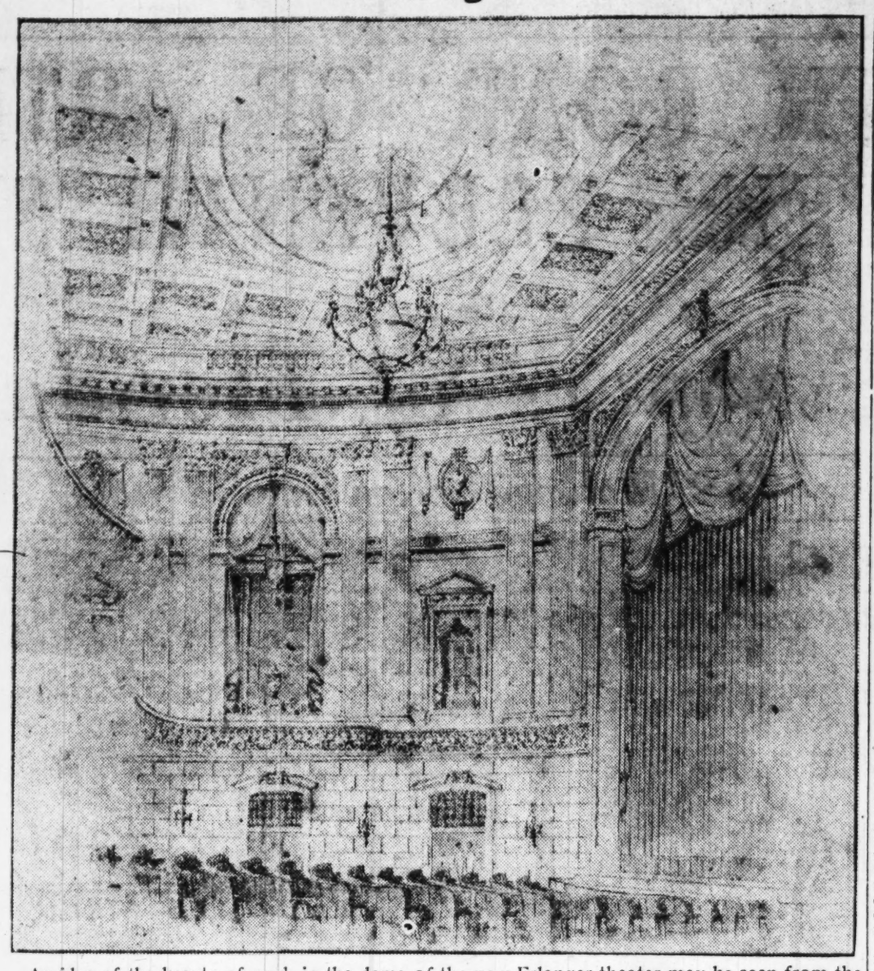

Well-known druggists say everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.—(adv.)

A Delightful Row

"My wife had suffered from stomach and liver trouble for many years and had taken medicine enough to sink a ship so when I brought home a bottle of MAYR'S, on the advice of my employer, she refused to take it. Her liver trouble hadn't helped her disposition any. We had a big row, but she took it the next week. Her ailments have all disappeared." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Jacobs' Pharmacy and druggists everywhere.—(adv.)

Dome of Beautiful Erlanger Theater Will Be Enduring Work of Real Art

An idea of the beauty of work in the dome of the new Erlanger theater may be seen from the above photograph. The work is under supervision of George Wharton, who says he is striving to make it lasting work of art and beauty.

Here's a talk with a man who is laboring with all his energy on work which will bring much pleasure to Atlanta in years to come and who, in all probability, will not get much credit in the future for what he is doing.

The man is George Wharton, and the work of art is the dome of the beautiful new Erlanger theater on Peachtree street, which is now entering its final stage of completion.

High up on mammoth scaffolds which look like they would reach to the sky if they were out in the open a corps of artisans has been busy for the last few days molding and shaping the plaster designs which will make the ceiling of the Erlanger theater one of the most admired works of its kind in the entire country.

Mr. Wharton has stood over them and has directed them in completing a series of designs in plaster which are ranked by experts as a series which is not surpassed in any building of like nature in the country.

Wharton's Object.

"We are striving to finish here something which will bring credit to Atlanta, to those who designed and erected this theater and to those in actual charge of this particular part of the new theater," Mr. Wharton said.

While Lewis Haase, manager of the theater, was lost somewhere down in the basement inspecting some of the dressing rooms, a representative of The Constitution caught Mr. Wharton in the midst of his work and was able to get a close-up of the beautiful designs which are destined to win the admiration of the people of Atlanta when they are permitted to visit the beautiful and magnificent new theater in a few weeks.

"The Corinthian design of the architect has been carried out in every detail and his effects will be produced in plaster before they are touched by the decorator," Mr Wharton said. "The plaster work is most important in carrying out the decorative effect although few people realize its importance after the colors have been added. A person can see the plaster as it is now applied without the touch of the decorator and can then see the completed effect and he can realize just how much care and finish the plasterer has used in finishing the work."

Wharton Is Artist.

Mr. Wharton came to Atlanta from Miami and has had charge of the plaster work and the stucco work in some of the most attractive theaters, cathedrals and public buildings in Detroit, Chicago and other large cities of the west. He is now permanently located in Atlanta being connected with the Clyde M. Watson company, located at Boulevard and Tenth street.

"When plaster work in this theater is finished I believe it will compare in beauty of design, in its proportions and in artistic finish with that of any public building in the south," he said. "And it will be a credit to Atlanta because it was done by Atlanta people working for an Atlanta firm under the plans of an Atlanta architect in a building erected by an Atlanta contractor for an Atlanta citizen."

The new Erlanger theater was designed by Raymond C. Snow and is being erected under his supervision by W. F. Winecoff, pioneer Atlanta capitalist.

"Both Mr. Snow and Mr. Winecoff deserve unlimited credit for this theater which I believe will be one of the most beautiful playhouses in America when it is finished,' Mr. Wharton said. "In finishing the plaster effects we have been directed to use only the best materials and no expense has been spared in making the very best possible job. In my personal experience I have seen many theaters in the finishing stage but I don't believe I have ever seen a prettier one than this."

Decorators Get Busy.

Under Mr. Wharton's direction the plaster work on the mammoth dome is finished and the decorators are now putting on the colors. He also has finished the greater portion of the sides of the theater, the top of the orchestra lobbies, the stairway walls and ceilings and the main lobby decorations.

In the center of the dome is an immense circle from which will be suspended the main chandelier, flanking this dome in four directions are alternate squares and circles, each in relief. A six-foot main cornice circles around the entire ceiling and is in itself a rare example of the perfection of the ornamental plasterer's work. Corthian caps to gigantic corinthian columns have been finished in plaster, six of these columns will be placed on each side of the theater running down to the lodge box seats located just above the orchestra floor at the ends of the balcony circle.

"When decorators finish the work of coloring and when the shimmer of lights are turned on these designs after the theater is opened I firmly believe the people of Atlanta will gasp with pleased surprise at the rare beauty of this part of the theater," Mr. Wharton said.

Opening Day Not Set.

Just now it is not possible to fix an exact date when the new theater will be ready for the opening performance but the workmen are not taking any chances by trying to rush the job to completion. The policy of building a theater which will last for scores of years and which will serve Atlanta far in the future as a playhouse is being carried out in every phase of the plans.

Architect Snow has used utmost care in selecting materials for the interior decorations and the contractors are using most substantial structural material. Concrete and steel are massed in a solid building which will be absolutely fireproof and which will last for ages.

Even with special care being taken in all construction details the work on the Erlanger theater is progressing steadily and when it is finished there is no doubt that Atlanta will be ranked with the leading cities of the country in the possession of a theater able to handle any kind of theatrical offering possible to produce.

LIQUOR WORTH $1,800 IS FOUND IN GARAGE

Whisky valued at $1,800 and an expensive automobile were confiscated by city detectives Saturday night in a raid on a garage in the rear of 672 Peachtree street, according to police records.

The officers confiscated 200 one-gallon cans and 10 kegs ranging from two gallons to 10 gallons capacity filled with expensive liquors. The car, valued at $4,000, was loaded with the gallon cans, while the kegs were found stored away in a corner of the garage.

Members of the vice squad of city detective department who participated in the raid were E. S. Acree, H. C. Newton, R. L. Mosley, C. C. Harper, E. I. Hildebrand, John R. Norton and R. O Dupree. The officers waited some time for the owner of the liquors to appear on the scene, but did not locate anyone, and then carried the liquor laden car to police station.

Her Hair Fairly SPARKLES Now!

The woman who knows what to do after waving her hair doesn't fear the effect of hot irons. Nor of frequent washings. A few drops of Danderine—on comb or towel—and the hair is soft and lustrous, and behaves beautifully.

A bit of Danderine rubbed lightly into the scalp, is the one sure way to dissolve every particle of dandruff. But a few drops more make a dressing that is simply marvelous. A sheen that rivals brilliantine, and no grease!

Machine Politics Attacked By Dr. Hardman in Speech Before Swainsboro Audience

Candidate Denounces Proposal To Increase Tax One Cent Per Gallon on Gasoline.

Swainsboro, Ga., October 2.—(Special.)—Dr. L. G. Hardman, candidate for governor, spoke here this afternoon to a crowded courtroom. The people were enthusiastic in the reception of his speech, applauding him frequently.

He denounced machine politics and the methods employed by the opposition during the campaign and promised a righteous business administration if elected. His speech was well received.

"As conclusive evidence that the Brown-Holder machine is aligned in the fight," he said, "my attention has been called to the use of the mailing list of the Market Bulletin. This mailing list is the property of Georgia, was paid for by the taxpayers and never designed to be prostituted to the use of a self-seeking politician. There are many, no doubt, in the sound of my voice who this week received Holder literature with a pink label on the envelope which showed that the Market Bulletin mailing list had been used for political purposes.

"The highway department has spent $35,000,000 and yet we have less than 500 miles of hard-surfaced roads. Another indication that we need a business administration in the affairs of our state. Emanuel county, along with many other counties, is waiting for highway funds, with no indication that they will receive any for some years to come. If we are going to have good roads, and I certainly favor good roads, we must have a more judicious expenditure of state money. Every dollar should buy a dollar's worth of road. I believe in efficiency not only in private business but in state government.

"The money from taxpayers should not be squandered in building up a political machine, which is contrary to all form of government. I would like to ask Mr. Holder what did he do with the $500 given him before the midnight bill was passed in the legislature? Why did he have the minutes of the highway board changed? Why did he borrow money from state funds for his own personal use for a period of nine months?"

The slump in the cotton prices, Dr. Hardman said, will hit the Georgia farmer hard and "all the more stresses the importance of a business administration in the affairs of our state, because every dollar saved will lessen the burden of the taxpayers."

Was Watson's Friend.

Dr. Hardman denounced the attempt to drag into politics the name of the late Thomas E. Watson. He stated he had always been a close friend of the late senator, and "if he were living today I feel confident he would be my ardent supporter." Dr. Hardman said.

Dr. Hardman denounced the attempt to increase the tax on gasoline in Georgia. The Holder road-plan advocates at the last session of the legislature introduced a bill seeking to increase the tax on gasoline one cent a gallon. The Ford owner, the tractor and gasoline engine operator in Georgia are paying enough tax now, and, as governor, I would veto any attempt to increase the gasoline tax one cent a gallon."

"In conclusion, let me ask that the voters compare the public records of myself and my opponent, and I feel sure that there will be no doubt hat the choice of the voters next Wednesday will be for a business governor rather than a governor aligned with machine politics."

Tarantula Victim, At Grady Hospital, Eased With Whisky

Whisky, and plenty of it, was the doctor's prescription at Grady hospital Saturday night for W. H. Scoggins, 56, of 410 Whitehall street, who was rushed to the hospital suffering from poison inflicted, he told doctors, when he was bitten by a tarantula, a member of the spider family which is often called a banana spider.

Scoggin, according to the doctor's report late Saturday night, was resting much better after he had taken several doses of whisky.

Prohibition Agents Told To Respect Citizens' Rights

Washington, October 2.—Prohibition agents must respect the constitutional rights of citizens in seeking bootleggers, Assistant Secretary Andrews has warned his dry corps in special instructions just sent out

"It would be better to let a man carrying a quart of liquor escape arrest than to make an arrest and then be unsuccessful in prosecuting him," Andrews said in commenting on the instructions

Dry agents, under no circumstances, should enter private dwellings without having obtained search warrants in advance, he declared.

TROUT JOINS RICH'S SILK DEPARTMENT

W. J. Trout, well-known figure in dry goods circles of Atlanta, has returned to Rich's silk department—his first connection in the business world, it was announced Saturday.

W. J. TROUT.

Mr. Trout is very prominent among silk men, being, so to speak, a merchant born. His father before him was an eminent retailer of north Georgia, and Mr. Trout, himself, has for many years served fabric-buying Atlanta.

Mr. Trout will be glad to see his numerous friends in Rich's silk department, and Saturday was busy familiarizing himself with the big outlay and variety of the Rich silk department.

AGNES SCOTT NAMES STUDENTS OF HONOR

According to annual custom, Agnes Scott college makes announcement in the autumn of those who have been outstanding students in the various classes the previous session. This is a formal affair as every effort is made to show that high scholarship is to be greatly prized. The faculty march in academic caps and gowns; the president makes the formal award of the honors.

Winners of honor follow:

HIGH GRADE COALS

Atlanta Office, 1702 Candler Bldg

Knoxville, Tennessee
October 1, 1926.

To The Public:

So many inquiries have been received in connection with the open letter which we ran in The Constitution of Sunday, September 19th, as to why the retail price on Domestic coal is so high with coal selling at the mines at $2.04 per ton, that we think some explanation to the general public should be made.

In the first place, the $2.04 price referred to was on Run of Mine coal, which includes everything just as it comes from the mines. This coal has to be screened and sized, and the average mine producing domestic grades of coal obtains approximately 60 per cent of domestic or prepared sizes, the remaining 40 per cent is slack.

This slack has to be sold at a loss of about $1.00 per ton in order to market it, which means that the remaining 60 per cent of domestic coal used by householders has to be sold at a price high enough to offset the loss of $1.00 per ton on the slack coal and make a profit on the whole operation if the coal operator stays in business.

At first glance it may seem that the householder is not getting a fair deal in this arrangement. As a matter of fact, the slack coal referred to above—to use an every-day illustration, is the "skimmed milk," and the domestic or prepared sizes of coal is the "cream" of coal production.

To the price of these coals f.o.b. cars at mines, has to be added freight, and the cost of handling by the retailer, including slackage and shortage, and the retailer's profits.

Some people seem to think the last item is a very substantial one. From our observation covering almost twenty-five years in the coal business, we do not believe there is any class of merchants in the retail trade that make as small a percentage of profit on the volume of business done as the retailer of coal.

This country has for fifty years enjoyed the cheapest prices on coal of any country in the world, in spite of the fact that higher wages are paid here for producing and handling it than in any country in the world.

Yours truly,

THE SOUTHERN COAL AND COKE COMPANY

Holder Favors Amendments To Highway, Farm and Bank Laws, He Says at Ft. Valley

Candidate Ends Week's Speaking Tour With Address To Peach County Voters.

Fort Valley, Ga., October 2.—(Special.)—In his address here Saturday afternoon, where he closed a week of campaigning, John N. Holder, candidate for governor, charged that Dr. Lamartine G. Hardman, his opponent, had in a speech at Dawson previous to the first primary, proclaimed his willingness to have the people of Jackson county decide as between him and Mr. Holder.

"Dr. Hardman had just delivered himself of his false and slanderous charges against me," said Mr. Holder, and I am informed that in order to emphasize them in the minds of those who heard him he had added that he was willing to let the people of Jackson county, the home county of Dr. Hardman and myself, decide which should be governor.

"But when, on the 8th day of September, the people of Jackson county rebuked him by giving me a splendid majority and thereby showed their confidence in me, he promptly proceeded to forget the proposition he made in his Dawson speech. There were some in his audience, however, who have not forgotten it, and among them is John Lindsay, a prominent farmer of Clay county.

Supports Holder.

"Mr. Lindsay was, I am told, a Hardman supporter in the first primary, and he was very much impressed with the fairness of the doctor's proposition about letting Jackson county voters decide. When after the Jackson county voters had registered their decided preference for me, Dr. Hardman failed to withdraw from the race, Mr. Lindsay, I am told, immediately announced his support for me and is now one of my very warm supporters. Mr. Holder dwelt at length upon the importance of the bond issue question in the gubernatorial race. He said it was the only great issue, although his opponent and the machine politicians who are backing him have insisted it is not an issue and that a governor can have nothing to do with a bond issue

"There are certain interests in Georgia who are bent upon issuing around a hundred millions of bonds for highways and higher education," said Mr. Holder. "They would saddle a tremendous debt upon our people that would crush them for a hundred years with heavy taxes. The interest cost alone on a hundred million-dollar bond issue would be around forty million dollars.

"Those who want these bond issues, and they are led by Governor Clifford Walker and his statehouse machine, backed by Bill Anderson, of the Macon Telegraph, and Julian Harris, of the Columbus Enquirer-Sun, yearn to see the state pouring out bond funds in unlimited amounts. My, how the contractors and material and equipment men and others especially interested in such expenditures, are licking their chops in anticipation.

"Among these is J. B. McCrary, of the J. B. McCrary company, a contracting company in Atlanta, which gets some highway contracts and which wants others. McCrary is a brother-in-law of Governor Walker, and is the financial chairman or payoff man for the Hardman campaign in Fulton county. It is not necessary to say he is strongly in favor of bonds in almost any amount. Those great statesmen who framed our present constitution wisely prohibited the state from floating bond issues. Georgia is at present struggling along with the remainder of a bond issue floated prior to the drafting of the present constitution 50-odd years ago. This bond issue originally amounted to around ten million dollars. Within 50 years the state has paid $18,000,000 in interest and has retired but half of the issue. Thus it is with state bond issues.

"I favor amendments to the laws governing the highway, the agricultural, the banking and educational departments of the state so that these departments may be made to render the greatest possible service to the people, and at the least possible cost. I favor the most economical administration consistent with good service, and I favor the elimination of useless jobs and political sinecures

"With the $13,000,000 available for highway purposes next year, $10,000,000 of which will be available for construction, Georgia should be able to enter at once upon a great coordinated system of paved and otherwise improved highways. This can be done on the pay-as-you-go plan, for $10,000,000 of cash will certainly go just as far as $10,000,000 of borrowed money.

"I favor a convention of southern and western governors to memorialize congress to provide for the federal government to interest itself in furnishing information concerning the location of markets for all kinds of agricultural products. The federal government now furnishes us weather reports, crop estimates and ginners' reports. It certainly could, with its army of representatives in every state and county and with its facilities, gather and disseminate information as to where the various farm products will find ready markets.

"I favor making the banking laws as strong as they can possibly be made, but I am convinced that what is most needed for the protection of the depositors and stockholders in the state banks is a state banking superintendent who will enforce the present laws. If I am elected I will appoint another bank superintendent who can and will give protection to the interests of the people.

"I favor an educational survey that will reveal our educational needs and I favor an expanded program of education for our common schools and institutions of higher learning in accordance with the plans provided in such a survey. I also favor obtaining the funds for such a program from current revenues and not from state bond issues. I am confident I can find the necessary funds.

Regrets Low Pitch.

"I deeply regret that this campaign could not be conducted on a high plane and free from all personalities and I call on the people to witness that it was not I who gave it a low pitch. All during the first campaign I remained silent in the face of an avalanche of slanderous lies circulated by all three of my opponents and their headquarters. Patience and forbearance ceased to be virtues in the face of the infamous attacks made upon me. It became necessary for me to defend my good name, the only heritage I have to leave to my children, and for which I have labored and fought for more than 50 years. I made up my mind that governorship or no governorship I would go before the people and throw into the teeth of my detractors the lies they were circulating on me.

"And when I opened up on these character assassins they promptly began shouting that I was slinging mud. Mud, forsooth, what I have been slinging is sometimes more effective than mud. I have turned the spotlight on my defamers, I have pulled aside the curtain and they are exposed in their true light.

"Bill Anderson, Cliff Walker and their gang have desperately tried for two years to ruin me. They brought all kinds of charges against me. The charges were heard in the courts, in the house of representatives and in the state senate and in each and every instance I was given a clean bill of health. They spent $8,000 of the taxpayers' money on a private auditor in their efforts to find something on me and refused to trust the able state auditor, Hon. Sam J. Slate, because they knew that he would not be a party to their scheme, then spent another $1,400 of the taxpayers' money to hire lawyers to prosecute and persecute me. They sought to drive me out of the chairmanship of the highway board so that Cliff could appoint Bill Anderson chairman.

Says Anderson Mad.

"Bill Anderson is mad with me because I would not support him for governor; because I would not agree to let the highway department buy a rock quarry from a friend of his for $250,000 when it was not worth $25,000; because I would not agree for the highway department to expend a million dollars on a cement plant to be located on land of a friend of Anderson's near Macon, the department to pay $35,000 for rental of the land and then give the million-dollar plant to the owner of the land at the end of 10 years; because I refused to agree for the highway department to give a contract to a friend of his in Macon for all the oil and gas business of the department in the Macon territory without advertising for bids; because I refused to agree for a friend of his in Macon to be allowed to change his bid on some trucks after all the other bids had been opened, and because of other similar reasons.

"One of the main planks in Dr. Hardman's platform is that he is a humanitarian. I want to aks you is any man humanitarian who seeks to keep surrounding mills from raising wages because it will make it necessary for his mill to raise wages? Is any man a humanitarian who boasts of the large dividends he receives from his cotton mill and who withholds from his employees the comforts and sanitary, educational and recreational advantages accorded mill operatives by other progressive and humane mill owners? Is any man a humanitarian who declines to permit a Christian woman the authority to teach a free night school in his mill village for the little girl and boy workers and gives as his reason that if they are educated they will leave the mill and his labor will be demoralized? I might go on asking similar questions, each based upon an actual fact, for hours, but what's the use?

"There's no end to the things Dr. Hardman has done which show up his attitude of mind and heart to his fellows. His Bible teacher was seeking an important office. Somebody circulated a false report on him. He asked the members of his Bible class to sign a statement that the report was false. Everyone did so with the exception of Dr. Hardman, but he said he did not feel like signing such papers. He had hardly gotten into the governor's race before he went to this Bible teacher and sought his support, and this Bible teacher told him he would do as much for him as Dr. Hardman had done for the Bible teacher when he asked a favor.

Aid Was Sought.

"A long time ago when he was running for governor he went down in South Georgia and sought the support of the people in a certain county. They gave it to him and carried the county for him. Some time later these people became interested in the creation of a new county. The fight was hot and close in the legislature. They went to Dr. Hardman and requested him to speak to a friend of his in the legislature, in their behalf. Dr. Hardman refused. They reminded him how they had taken off their coats and worked for him. He admitted this, but said they were working for the interests of their state when they worked for his election, and that he could not and would not speak to his friends for them.

"I could go on multiplying such incidents, but it isn't necessary. The people have learned Dr. Hardman for what he is, a selfish, hard-hearted, money-loving man, who feels that the fact that he has acquired great wealth, which he has used for his own selfish purposes, should entitle him to be governor of Georgia.

"Dr. Hardman boasts of his wealth and of the money he makes, but he forgets to tell the people that he is one of the state's outstanding tax dodgers. He fails to tell them it was with great difficulty that the Jackson county tax assessors forced him to raise the assessment on his cotton mills from $150,000 to $175,000, although he has boasted of dividends amounting to 100 per cent and notwithstanding he had bought up 34 houses and lots in the vicinity of his mills and had not returned them for taxation. He fails to tell them that he did not return his electric light plant for state or county taxes, and he fails to tell them that during the only year when income tax returns were made public his name did not appear on the list."

MRS. WELCHEL NAMED FARM BUREAU HEAD

Appointment of Mrs. R. F. Welchel, formerly state home demonstration agent of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, as home advisor of the Sears-Roebuck agricultural foundation, Atlanta, is announced by George C. Biggar, secretary of the foundation.

MRS. R. F. WELCHEL.

She will handle all problems submitted to the mail order farm bureau by housewives of the south. Arrangements of the "model home" exhibit of Sears, Roebuck & Co. at the Southeastern fair was supervised by Mrs. Whelchel and she will be in charge of this home exhibit throughout the fair.

Each morning of the fair at 10 o'clock the new home advisor will conduct a radio program from the Sears-Roebuck agricultural foundation studio over WSB, discussing household problems and making suggestions for more efficient home-making methods. Another talk will be given for fair visitors each afternoon at 2:30. These two daily features may be heard throughout the Automobile building by means of a public address system especially installed for the fair.

Mrs. Whelchel is widely known throughout the south as an expert in problems of the home. She will welcome direct questions on household problems, all of which will be answered by personal letters. Now residing with her husband on a small farm near Decatur, Mrs. Whelchel is daily engaged in homemaking, poultry raising and gardening and the benefits of her daily experience will be broadcast to thousands of housewives.

She is a graduate of the Georgia State College for Women, at Milledgeville, and the University of Georgia. Before becoming state home demonstration agent she served as county agent of Union county and as district agent at Gainesville and Augusta.

be elected by a comfortable majority. The fact that he was able to carry Kentucky in 1920 when even President Harding could not carry it proves that.

"In Missouri, Senator Williams is facing a vigorous effort on the part of the democrats, but there is no chance for him to be defeated. Missouri will never again be a democratic state.

"These five states," said Senator Phipps, "can be set down as safely republican. Indiana and Ohio realize that Senators Willis, Watson and Robinson are certain to be reelected.

"In Illinois there is no doubt as to the election of Colonel Frank L. Smith. I am convinced that he will have no trouble in winning by the usual republican majority."

Congressman Walter Newton, of Minnesota, chairman of the speakers' bureau, announced that Senator Borah would conduct an active speaking campaign in behalf of republican candidates in various states, Indiana, Oklahoma and Missouri probably being included in his itinerary. Senator Boran said that he would be ready to take the stump after a brief visit to Washington on official business.

Encouraging, Says Borah.

Commenting on political conditions in the west, Senator Borah said:

"I have just returned from a trip through western states and I found republican prospects there very encouraging. In my own state of Idaho the republican ticket is safe. In Washington I believe prospects are good for election of a republican congressman from the Spokane district, which heretofore has been democratic. Senator Jones and the four sitting republican congressmen there are certain of reelection."

COOLIDGE URGED TO NAME POLLARD ON TRADE BOARD

Washington, October 2.—(AP)—President Coolidge today was urged by Senators Swanson and Glass, democrats, Virginia, to appoint John G. Pollard, of Virginia, to be a member of the federal trade commission, succeeding Huston Thompson, resigned.

Mr. Pollard, a former member of the trade commission and former attorney general of his state, now is professor of economics at William and Mary college.

SECRETARY DAVIS HAS NO PASSES TO GIVE TO FANS

Washington, October 2.—Secretary Dwight L. Davis has just one box for the Army-Navy game at Chicago, and he wants the world to know that he has no tickets either to sell or give away.

"Within the last few days I have had at least 500 requests from football fans in Chicago and other middle western cities," Mr. Davis said. "All these must be refused for the war department does not have any tickets at its disposal. I have a box and plan to use that for myself and family."

the south to "use every effort in their power to put an end to the unnecessary panic among producers" of cotton and belief that if the staple were held off the market "right and reason prevail" it would sell — cents a pound higher, was expressed in a statement issued here tonight by Fran B. Hayne, president of the New Orleans cotton exchange.

The south sold nearly $16,000,000 bales of the cotton staple last year at more than $100 a bale and there is no justification for it to force its cotton on the market and sell it under $65 a bale, Mr. Hayne said, pointing out that mill consumption as indicated by mill takings are 12 per cent more than at the same time last year.

"From a world's standpoint, American cotton below 15 cents cannot prove otherwise than unusually attractive to mills abroad as well as at home," he said.

Mr. Hayne said that if the government had followed the system in vogue until a few years ago and delayed issuance of a cotton crop estimate until December 14, the south would have been at least $500,000,000 better off.

Judge Humphries To Head Children's Aid Society

Organization of the Children's Aid society, of Georgia, for mentally-defective children, was perfected Friday in the chambers of the Fulton county juvenile court. Judge John D. Humphries, of Fulton superior court, was elected president, and Robert B. McCord was made executive director.

Following adoption of by-laws officers were chosen as follows: Judge Humphries, president; S. G. McLendon, vice president; W. L. Hunnicutt, secretary, and Dr. W. N. Adkins, treasurer; Judge Garland Watkins, of the juvenile court, chairman; the Rev. J. M. Hawkins, Frank E. Davis, Dr. Adkins and W. F. Handley, executive committee.

Funds for the work of the society will be raised by voluntary contributions. C. L. Boone, newly-elected chairman of publicity, offered the use of his offices in the Healey building as headquarters for the work, and the offer was accepted. Plans for operation of the society are two-fold, first, to launch a campaign of education and propaganda on the subject of Georgia's mentally-defective children into every county of the state with a view to asking the legislature for a substantial appropriation for enlargement and better equipment of the state school begun at Gracewood, and more adequate maintenance of the work begun there five years ago; and second, to raise a fund to enable those who handle this campaign, which will bring them in contact with many distressing cases of mentally-defective children who have been left dependent and in poverty, to do some constructive relief work where it cannot be passed over, it was pointed out.

The Atlanta meeting in the interest of mentally defective children follows action recently taken by leading citizens in Augusta, where a state institution for this class of unfortunate children was established five years ago.

Judge Watkins stated that he had been forced to turn his back as judge of the juvenile court on perhaps 100 defective children brought into his court in the last few years because no facilities were provided in the state for handling such dependents. He had never been able to get but one child admitted at Gracewood, near Augusta, where the school is located, he said, and the reason given was that no room was available and the appropriation for maintenance was so meger.

Rev. J. M. Hawkins, for 17 years head of Decatur orphanage, explained the situation from the private institution's point of view. A few of these defective children had through the years been admitted to his orphanage, but they were a disrupting influence among the normal children and it was now against the policy of the orphanage to receive any but normal children who were orphans, he said. Applications for admitting these mentally defective children were turned down and he did not know what became of them.

Other speakers at the meeting were Dr. W. N. Adkins, child specialist; Judge Humphries and Mr. McCord, formerly executive head of the state's child placing system. The latter explained that his greatest problem in placing the homeless child in private families was what to do with these mentally defective boys and girls. In the last few years of his work in connection with the Georgia Children's Home society mental tests were required of all seeking admission for placement in private homes, because a feeble-minded child should not be offered to childless couples seeking a normal and promising child to rear as their own.

Others present who took part in the discussion were Frank E. Davis, W. L. Hunnicut, C. L. Boone, Leslie Hubbard, G. H. Hutson and W. F. Handley.

SHACKLEFORD SPEAKS TO CORDELE AUDIENCE

Cordele, Ga., October 2.—(Special.) T. J. Shackleford, of Athens, spoke in the interest of John Holder at the courthouse here Friday. He was introduced by Judge Max Land and fully half of his address was directed toward W. T. Anderson, editor of The Telegraph and former member of the state highway board.

WASTE AND EXTRAVAGANCE IN HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT ARE CHARGED BY AUDITOR

SLATE CALLS UPON THREE OFFICIALS TO TURN BACK FUNDS

Lack of Cohesion and Maintenance Work Hit in Exhaustive Report

The report shows an investigation of every feature of highway department affairs.

Expense accounts and "junkets" of officials and employees to points outside of Georgia, at the public expense, are severely criticized, and fixed expense allowances are characterized as illegal.

The payment by the department of the board and lodging of the chairman, while he is in Atlanta, is criticized.

The receipts of the department last year were $6,910,000 and the disbursements for construction $4,527,000; maintenance, $1,300,000; reconstruction $423,000, and emergency $101,000.

The equipment of the department, new and old, does not receive the proper attention, remaining often out in most inclement weather, a prey to thieves.

The provision of high-priced automobiles for officials and employees is severely criticized, and the elimination of many cars suggested.

Expense accounts are characterized as the highest in any state department, and "unnecessary junkets" have costs the public many thousands of dollars.

The payment of subsistence costs of the chairman while he is in Atlanta is characterized as "a bad precedent."

The minutes of meetings have been improperly kept, and not signed, and it is impossible to ascertain whether or not there have been alterations.

Bonds should be required of the executive officer and all head engineers to safeguard the state from losses through possible collusion between officials and contractors.

Overhead expenses are so "detoured" that it would take months to arrive at a fair basis of overhead expenses, but they are apparently over 6 per cent.

The auditor was "painfully impressed" with the scant returns that are being obtained from an expenditure of $1,300,000, or more than $200 per mile, for maintenance, in 1924, and it is recommended that the legislature consider the return of maintenance supervision to the counties.

The budget account needs to be scrutinized more carefully and the practice of purchasing automobiles out of money allotted to the expense accounts should be stopped.

Juggling of accounts to make the budget come out right is criticized.

The report closes with an appeal for the laying aside of personal and political matters and a united effort to build roads.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK PROCLAIMED

Atlantans along with millions of other citizens of the United States are urged to take active part in the annual national "fire prevention" week which will be observed this week, October 4 to 9, it was officially announced in a proclamation from Governor Clifford Walker, Saturday afternoon, who joined other governors of the United States in the movement.

Insurance men here have joined with the city firemen in proclaiming this week national "fire prevention" week and elsewhere in this issue of The Constitution they have devoted a full page to the subject.

City firemen, members of the International Association of Fire Fighters, local No. 134, have put on an extensive prevention campaign during the past seven days and, working under the direction of Fire Chief W. B. Cody, have placed hundreds of posters in various sections of the city, showing some of the hazards of fire through carelessness and neglect.

Folders Show Losses.

In carrying out their part of the week, insurance companies have printed folders showing the losses of life and tremendous property damage inflicted by the powerful destroyer, fire.

Millions of dollars worth of property each year is consumed by fires which, in many instances, are results of neglect and carelessness. Thousands of automobiles are burned up each year by persons who carelessly throw lighted cigarettes or cigars into gasoline and grease under cars.

Every citizen is urged to see that basements are cleaned out and furnaces and chimneys in good working order before they are fired up for the winter, for many of the city's worst fires are caused by the neglect of inspecting furnaces and chimneys.

Firemen also suggest that ashes be removed from furnaces or stoves before winter and that they are not allowed to accumulate after the winter fires are started.

To Reduce Hazards.

The public is also warned to be more careful in the future about the disposition of greasy rags and waste that has been used in polishing floors and furniture. Greasy rags and waste, if left in a closed place, will often cause spontaneous combustion, which in many cases has started great city fires.

Defective wiring and the carelessness of placing aerial wire in close proximity to electrical wires are other hazards that should be safeguarded.

In other words, "be careful at all times and especially safeguard your premises against fire hazards," is the slogan of the Atlanta fire department during fire prevention week.

PRESIDENT ORDERS HELP FOR FLORIDA

areas of Florida and that you use for this purpose funds of your appropriations as will not interfere with your current operations.

"A detailed account should be kept of all expenditures made to meet this emergency so that a full report may be made to the congress."

LEGION ASKS MARTIN TO RETRACT STATEMENT.

Miami, Fla., October 2.—(AP)—Harvey Seeds post, No. 29, American Legion, today announced the unanimous adoption of resolutions demanding "that Governor John W. Martin immediately and publicly retract his former erroneous statement and give the nation and the world the actual facts of our suffering and devastation in the storm area."

The action followed publication here of statements by John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, charging Martin and others with minimizing losses in the hurricane-swept area.

The resolutions were signed by Post Commander R. V. Waters and Adjutant Joe Frank.

FLORIDA NEEDS FUNDS TO RELIEVE INJURED.

Washington, October 2.—(AP)—Florida needs funds for relief of persons injured in the recent hurricane, but not for rebuilding, President Coolidge was told today by George W. Bean, republican national committeeman from Florida.

Expressing regret over the dispute between John Barton Payne, head of the Red Cross and Florida officials concerning relief measures, Mr. Bean said both groups were working toward the same end, but through different channels. Red Cross funds are needed for individual sufferers of the storm, he declared, but Floridians themselves are able to recoup their property losses.

He reiterated the contention of Miami officials that that city is only slightly damaged so far as hotel and other tourist accommodations are concerned and that the city will be able to receive its quota of visitors this winter.

If You Roll Can't Sleep Try This

Restless sleep is often caused by gas from fermenting food. After taking Adlerika Mrs. Cora Noblett states she can sleep ALL NIGHT now.

Adlerika gives the system a REAL cleansing and brings out old metabolic poisons which may have caused trouble for a long time. Just ONE spoonful relieves GAS and takes away that full, bloated feeling so that you can sleep at night without rolling from side to side. Even if your bowels move every day, Adlerika removes much additional poisonous matter which you never thought was in your system, and which caused sour stomach, nervousness, sleeplessness, headache, etc. Don't wait any longer but let Adlerika give your stomach and bowels QUICK relief. Dandruff Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—(adv.)

Poss Slowly Winning Long Battle for Life After Being Paralyzed in Auto Accident

For the first time in 19 months Joe "Bun" Poss, whose remarkable fight for life attracted the attention of thousands of Georgians, was able to stand in an upright position Monday. With the aid of a set of braces of a special design young Poss was able to move about in an upright position in the yard of his little home on the Roswell road Monday and with a smile of determination on his face he stated confidently that he will continue to fight in the hope of ultimately obtaining the use of his lower limbs to a certain extent.

The story of Joe Poss, told recently in The Constitution, attracted wide attention and brought him much sympathy and practical aid. Due to the activity of The Constitution in behalf of the young man whose lower limbs were paralized as a result of an accident in February, 1925, a fund of $173.50 was raised to help the unfortunate young man and his little family.

Nineteen months ago Poss and his bride were riding on a truck on the Roswell road going to the funeral of a relative. The truck driver lost control of the car and it turned turtle, apparently inflicting fatal injuries on Poss and also slightly injuring his young wife. Poss's spinal column was shattered and his lower limbs were paralyzed completely. He was taken to his little home where he began a nineteen months fight for the restoration of his health which has won the admiration of every person familiar with the case.

Improving Now.

During the last few months Poss has been growing stronger although physicians at one time declared he could not live. He gradually recovered partial use of one of his legs and with the aid of the braces built for him by C. M. Paille, of Atlanta, he stood erect for the first time Monday and will be able to continue his efforts to learn to walk with the aid of these braces.

Poss now is eager to visit the Southeastern fair, and with the aid of his new braces which were purchased for him with funds raised through The Constitution, he believes he will be able to spend the entire week at the fair meeting friends and others who may become interested in his peculiar case.

One man has been the guiding figure in the fight to get a chance for the injured boy and due to his efforts the news of Poss' condition was given The Constitution and through his efforts food for Poss, his wife and little daughter has been provided during the long period of helplessness. This is J. O. McCrary, Fulton county investigator of charities.

"Mr. McCrary was present Monday when Poss walked his first steps and he will also make efforts to take him to the Southeastern fair next week.

Thanks Constitution.

"We certainly appreciate the help The Constitution has given us in bringing the case of Poss to public notice and the paper deserves the credit for raising the funds which enabled us to buy a wheel chair and the braces for Poss and also to help set him up in some kind of business," Mr. McCrary said.

At present the Community Chest gives Poss $3 a week which is used to buy food for the little family of Poss. No other funds are forthcoming for the injured man and there is no way in which he can earn money at present.

"I'm going to be making money pretty soon some way or other," Poss said Monday. "If I can get enough to start a little store up there on the Roswell road somewhere my wife can help me and I feel sure I can make a living."

Prior to his injury Poss was working as a mechanic at the Bull Sluice power station of the Georgia Railway and Power company. He has lived in the northern part of Fulton county all his life.

In spite of the unfortunate and almost hopeless condition in which he has lived for 19 months the young man is cheerful and apparently happy.

"I'll get back to walking some way or other yet," he said Monday.

Mr. McCrary is authorized to receive any contributions or aid for Poss and can be found at his office in the courthouse.

FORT LAUDERDALE ADMITS DAMAGE.

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., October 2.—(AP)—Fort Lauderdale has not minimized the damage caused by the hurricane, and "we are badly in need of help, and not ashamed to make a plea for it," Mayor J. W. Tidball said today, commenting upon the statement by John Barton Payne, American Red Cross chairman, that Florida officials had underestimated the losses in the hurricane and thereby handicapped the assistance of the Red Cross.

"This city has been hard hit, and we have tried to tell the country how badly without trying to cover the loss. Nor do I think we have exaggerated, though we are not completely wiped out, as the first reports said. But in order to care for the thousands in need, we can use all the help we can possibly get in order to recover. We are badly in need of money to work with," he said.

FLORIDA TO BE READY FOR WINTER TOURISTS.

Tampa, Fla., October 2.—(AP)—Every Florida city struck by the recent hurricane will be as well prepared to receive winter visitors when the tourist season opens as it would have been if there had been no storm, Henry M. Baker, national director of disaster relief for the American Red Cross, said here today. Mr. Baker said this assurance was given after a careful study of the devastated areas and with an intimate knowledge of the progress being made toward restoration.

"You may say, on authority of the American Red Cross, that nobody need fear coming to Florida this winter. Debris will be cleared away, essential repairs made and proper sanitary safeguards provided. Tourists can come by thousands upon thousands with every assurance of safety and ample accommodations.

"However, this does not mean that the stricken cities are not in need of help. No authentic story of loss or damage in the Miami and Moore Haven districts has been exaggerated. Hotel facilities in the lower east coast cities have not been impaired seriously, and possibly will be at or above normal when the tourist season begins; but thousands of residents of that region are not only homeless, but unemployed and dependent on the American people.

"The Red Cross has spent about $1,000,000 for the relief of acute distress in Florida, but will need not less than $4,000,000 for rehabilitation. Therefore, unless contributions reach a total of $5,000,000, or more, our work will be hampered and we shall be obliged to reduce our awards to needy families. There is no danger that too much money will be given for relief work, however brilliant the coming season may be from the tourist standpoint."

Mr. Baker said he expected to be in Florida "many, many months."

MOORE HAVEN REPAIRS ARE ORDERED AT ONCE.

Moore Haven, Fla., October 2.—(AP) Beneath the boughs of Lone Cypress, a landmark in the business district here, Governor John W. Martin today gave instructions to put this city and its surrounding devastated area into condition to permit the return of residents at the earliest possible date.

Martin, after his first personal observation of the Glades county flood devastation today, told Fred C. Elliott, chief engineer of the Everglades drainage district, immediately to repair the dikes which still let water in from Lake Okeechobee, and to rid the city of water as quickly as possible.

"Mr. Elliott," said the governor, "you are to spare neither time nor expense. I don't care what it costs, the state wants this work done right now."

The governor and party were brought by special train from Sebring to Ortona, military base, and taken to Moore Haven, about 18 miles, by truck.

Martin called on other officials for cooperation in the working out of reclamation and declared he would hold each to his responsibility.

To Sheriff Richards, the chief executive said: "I am going to hold you responsible for the maintenance of law and order. The troops I ordered here are sent for your assistance. They are to work for and with you."

Calling Dr. H. S. Harrison, of Fort Myers, state health officer of this district, the governor asked that he also do everything possible to assist the refugees in salvaging their property.

DEPARTMENT STORE TO HOLD KARPEN SALE

In the completely remodeled and refinished fourth floor furniture quarters of ChamberlinJohnson-DuBose company, on Whitehall street, National Karpen week is to be observed for the next seven days with a sensational offering of high-grade living room pieces at prices within the reach of the most modest pocketbooks.

Announcing the sale Saturday, Wiley Jones, manager of the furniture department, drew attention to the fact that the Karpen week observance will be held this week all over the United States, and that through the great production of the Karpen people, extraordinary values are obtainable in choice upholstered, fiber, overstuffed and other types of furniture.

Although only living room furniture is included in the Karpen week sale, many other attractive bargains can be found in the furniture department of the Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose company, such as dining room sets in mahogany done with a Spanish motif, early Colonial in walnut and maple, not to mention bedroom, dining room and living room pieces done in the style of such master hands as Chippendale, Adam and other craftsmen of old.

Popular Modern Types.

The chief source of interest this week at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose will be the display of Karpen guaranteed construction furniture made in Chicago, Michigan City and New York, a nationally advertised line considered one of the best known lines of living room furniture on the market today.

In Karpen furniture, Mr. Jones has secured pieces in the popular wicker or fiber type, consisting of steel wire center fiber strands colored throughout by a special process, divans, lounges and other articles in the damask and tufted style so much the rage in the '80s and which is once again popular in furniture styles; Windsor-type chairs and, in short, everything essential for the tastefully selected living room suite.

Another new feature of the furniture department is the layout of 16 rooms for the purpose of displaying suites to the prospective purchaser. Here are shown bed room, living room, sun parlor and other furniture sets as they will appear in a home. At one end of the room layout there is a special room for the showing of nursery and children's room furniture.

Modern Home Furnished.

On the other side of the department, a modern bungalow is maintained for the display of higher priced furniture, the suites and hangings being changed frequently. One wanders from sun parlor to living room to dining room to bed room only to find still more attractive pieces of high-grade furniture executed by master craftsmen.

"We are showing more mahogany dining room suites this fall than in the past 12 years," Mr. Jones said. "There is a newly awakened demand for America nand early colonial designs in mahogany."

Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose company has received a carload of new designs shipped here especially for the Karpen week sale. In the carload there is included everything the home furnisher can ask in the way of living room suites, occasional chairs in the new hollow button back style, chairs trimmed with new linen frieze work with tinseled tassels, bright reds predominating. Mohair suites with mahogany and walnut touches, and many other beautiful pieces are to be seen.

Trade Officials Stationed In Mexico, Chile Visit Here

An unusual opportunity for Atlanta manufacturers to confer in person with high government officials on Latin-American trade, finance and investment will be presented Monday when Ralph H. Ackerman, American commercial attache to Chile, and Leonard M. Brin, assistant trade commissioner to Mexico, visit Atlanta.

Both officials are now on tour, visiting a few of the more important commercial centers of the United States in the interest of American foreign trade, it is announced by Harry O. Mitchell, district manager of the South Atlantic office of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

While in Atlanta, Mr. Ackerman and Mr. Brin will make their headquarters in the local offices of the bureau in the Federal building, Mr. Mitchell stated.

A number of conferences have been arranged and a dinner will be given in their honor Monday night at the chamber of commerce by the Atlanta Foreign Trade club, of which Mr. Ackerman is a member. Both officials will visit the Southeastern fair Monday morning, and the commercial attache will deliver an address on modern Chile over the fair radio Monday noon.

Mr. Ackerman is known to many Atlantans, having visited this city on previous occasions and addressed a group on Latin-American trade. He is a graduate of the University of Chattanooga and served for several years with the Southern Railway system in trade promotion, both in the United States and Argentina. He traveled South America widely prior to his appointment to government service and is thoroughly familiar with conditions and trading methods in the Latin republics. In 1922 Mr. Ackerman was selected by Secretary of Commerce Hoover to serve as chief of the Latin-American division of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, and in 1923 was made advisor to the American delegation at the fifth Pan-American conference at Santiago. He was appointed commercial attache to the American embassy in Chile in August, 1923.

Mr. Brin is a recognized authority on Mexican commerce and has had two years' service at Mexico City. For several years before entering the service of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, he represented the Ingersoll Watch corporation in the export field. Mr. Brin has been devoting his attention primarily to automotive products, electrical equipment, industrial machinery, specialties and credit information and will be glad to confer with business men interested in these lines in Mexico.

Mr. Mitchell announced also that Mr. Brin was leaving shortly for Argentina and would be interested in talking with business men who are exporting to that country in order to get their points of view and suggestions for carrying on work in their interest at his new post.

ATLANTA WOMAN, FORMER ACTRESS, TO GET DIVORCE

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, October 2.—Judge Rush indicated today that he would grant a decree of divorce to Mrs. Sara Conter Lindlahr from Dr. Victor H. Lindlahr, head of the Lindlahr sanitarium.

An alimony settlement previously agreed upon was concurred in, providing for $65,000 in the wife's favor.

Mrs. Lindlahr, who is from Atlanta, and who was formerly on the stage, testified to acts of cruelty on the part of her doctor husband, who, she charged, in November, 1924, choked her after her had been "out on a party" where he had been drinking.

A search through the telephone and city directories failed to disclose the name of Lindlahr listed.

A bull terrier which raised an alarm by barking when the Crown hotel, Cookingham, England, caught fire, was recently awarded a medal for his act.

While floods continue to do damage on the upper Yangtze-kiang river, of China, drouths are taking toll in the lower Yangtze region.

A NEW BEAUTY COMING FROM CHRYSLER

When the Chrysler "70" appeared three years ago, you recognized with a thrill of delight the arrival of a distinct departure in design.

It was more than a departure—it created a new school of beauty; and world-wide imitation has not even dulled the edge of its distinctive individuality.

It may have seemed to you then, and it may seem to you now, that the creation of three years ago could not be outdone for a decade to come in originality and symmetry.

Nevertheless, the thrill of three years ago is about to be intensified and surpassed.

A new Chrysler "70" will be shown in this city and throughout the nation on October 9.

It excels the charm of its older self just as emphatically as that older self excelled the conventional three years ago.

To choose any other car before you have seen this new Chrysler "70" will be to run the risk of almost inevitable disappointment when its unique and brilliant beauty and advanced features are revealed.

See the Saturday Evening Post of October 9, on sale October 7, and issues of this newspaper throughout this week and next Sunday for further details.

VESTA BATTERY CO. SECURES WFKB

To Broadcast Week Day Nights Except Sunday.

Announcement has been made by Ward S. Perry, president of the Vesta Battery corporation, Chicago, that station WFKB will be known as the Vesta Battery Corporation station, WFKB, Chicago."

WFKB has been operating for over a year on 217.3 meters, as an experimental station, though having been off the air temporarily, during the summer. The station as now acquired by Vesta, is equipped with the very latest transmitting apparatus and will be opened on 1,000 watts.

The personnel of WFKB, under the direction of H. S. Kehm, are operators who have grown up with broadcasting in this station, and with the Vesta Battery corporation resources behind this station, programs of a high order of excellence are assured.

"It is our purpose," said Mr. Perry, "to have the programs reflect the quality of Vesta Radio and Auto products and leave the impression of Vesta high ideals in the minds of millions of listeners."

Inasmuch as so many radio listeners are users of Vesta products in their radio or automobiles, the Vesta Battery corporation will do its share of broadcasting the kind of entertainment that will appeal to this particular class of air audience.

Vesta station WFKB on 217.3 meters, will be on the air every week day (except Monday), from 6:30 to 8 and from 9 to 10:30 (central standard), and Sundays, 2:30 to 4 p. m.

Southern Motor Equipment company, 216-220 Spring street, Atlanta, Ga., is the southeastern central for the Vesta Battery corporation.

SCHOOL CRISIS END SEEN BY OFFICIALS

proposal that 50 per cent of the ad valorem taxes be given to the schools, stating that the city government and the schools would be benefited by the change in the plan which at present apportions 26 per cent of the gross revenue of the city for school purposes.

W. D. Hoffman, chairman of the current expenditures committee of the board of education, Saturday released for publication a speech in vindication of the board's expenditures. The address was delivered Thursday at a meeting of the board and follows:

Hoffman Speech.

Referring to the financial condition of the schools, the papers for the last week have been carrying what is stated to be interviews with the mayor, the chairman of the finance committee, and the city comptroller. According to these interviews, the attempt is being made to place the responsibility for the deficit in school funds upon the board of education, and they have been accused of "plunging into needless debt," "mismanagement and extravagance," and also that the refusal of the banks to finance the schools in their emergency was due to the lack of confidence of the bankers in the board of education. In regard to this last, this may be justified, and it might be added that this lack of confidence extends to the finance committee, the city council, and the administration of city affairs.

Before going into any discussion of these criticisms, it might be well for the public to know the facts and then draw their own conclusions. In the first place, the schools of the city of Atlanta prior to the erection of the last bond issue schools, 1922-23-24, were a disgrace to the city, as far as buildings and equipment were concerned. This was brought about by a policy of false economy which had been pursued for many years by making the city pay for all improvements out of its income.

In 1923 the annual cost of operating the schools per pupil enrolled was $51.54 and the only cities in which the cost was less than Atlanta out of a total of 25 cities of about the same population, were Birmingham, Ala., $45.84, and Nashville, Tenn., $34.63. The highest of these cities was Yonkers, N. Y., $141.90, and the average of the 25 cities was $88.65, so it can hardly be charged that the board of education was extravagant, or showed "bad business judgment." During the present year, the annual cost per pupil based on enrollment is $46, and the cost per pupil in average daily attendance, which accounts for the absentees, is $59. Against this, we have Yonkers, N. Y., $176; Omaha, Neb., $110; New Orleans, $76, and Dallas, Texas, $63. The remainder of the list I do not have available but without going into a long list of figures, I think this answers the charge of extravagance, "plunging into needless debt" and "bad business judgment;" for we certainly could not carry on our schools as well as we have and keep our costs to where they are as shown by the above comparison.

Cites Report.

If any further evidence is desired as to the economical operation of the Atlanta schools, I can quote the following from the report of the citizens' commission, appointed by the president of the board of education, January 7, 1925, report signed by Joel Hunter, George F. Hinman and James H. Bachman:

"We wish to call your attention to the commendations by the committee as follows:

1. In the average of 13 cities (100,000 to 500,000 population), there is one pupil in average daily attendance for each 7.7 of population; in Atlanta, there is an average daily attendance of one pupil for each 5.5 of population.

The average percentage of pupils in high schools in the 13 cities is 27.8 per cent—in Atlanta the percentage of white pupils in high school is 28.3 per cent; in eight southern cities with populations over 100,000 the percentage of white and colored in high school is 14.3 per cent; Atlanta has 23.2 per cent of white and colored children in high schools.

2. Atlanta's white schools have 8.4 per cent more pupils per teacher than the average of 13 cities.

White and colored schools combined in eight southern cities average 30.5 per teacher; in Atlanta the average is 42.1."

The trouble with the Atlanta school system is that it has grown faster than the increase in gross revenue of the city, and to maintain the school system which is necessary for the population of Atlanta requires more than 26 per cent of the gross revenue of the city. To give a few illustrations of what the board of education has been up against in the past, let us step back to 1923, when the Bass Junior High school was built out of current revenue at an expense of $232,000, when this should have been a capital expense paid for from some other source than current revenue. So far as I can recall, at that some old property was supposed to have been sold at an estimated value of $600,000 and this money was to pay for a Girls' High school which as everyone will recall was demanded on account of the dilapidated and dangerous condition of the Girls' High school building. However, through the delays in coming to a decision in regard to the purchase of the property, which is anything but creditable to those who participated in it, the building of the Girls' High school was delayed so that it could not be built out of the bond funds at that time, and when the sale of the old school property began, it soon developed that a combination seemed to exist that forced this property down to a much lower basis than was estimated, and if I recall correctly only about $460,000 was realized out of $600,000 estimated. Therefore, the Girls' High school, costing $600,000, was built out of current revenue in 1924; not only this, but during 1923, $132,000 was paid for portables also taken out of current revenue. It may be well asked "why did the school board permit this?" but the situation which confronted it was an annually increasing army of children demanding admission to the schools, and on the other hand insufficient funds to provide for these children, even when using the strictest economy. The city council, through its finance committee, would promise the funds requested for the above capital expense, but they simply did not have the money, and when they could not pay it, the board of education did the only thing they could do—take these funds from the current revenue in order to provide housing for the children.

Appropriation Fails.

In 1925 the city council appropriated $160,000 to build the Stewart Avenue school, which, as everyone knows, is badly needed and Mr. McLendon, the member of the board of education from the tenth ward, had worked so hard to secure this. Later on it developed that they would not be able to provide this money and attention was called by the board of education to the deficit. We were then advised to take this money out of the bond funds which would be available and the city council would endeavor to reimburse us at a later date, all of which was done with the idea of meeting the emergency as well as possible. Therefore at the present time, we are trying to get the bond commission to advertise for the bids for this school.

You will note from the above that besides being faced with a constantly increasing expense due to the increase of school population the board of education has had to take out of its funds appropriated for the operation of the schools large sums for construction of buildings, and other capital expense, which should not come out of current revenue.

I was a member of the city council when the charter was amended creating a separate school board and the only mistake I think was made at this time was that the special school tax should have been provided, so that the schools would not have to depend upon a percentage of the income of the city and would also be held absolutely responsible for keeping down the school tax to as low a figure as possible. I realize that the only advantage gained was that the school board was reduced to a small and efficient body, but later on this advantage was eliminated by the election by wards of the members of the board of education.

During this period we had a lot of difficulty with the school budget and the administration did not seem to be able to give a close estimate of the requirements of the various departments and for years this budget, which was largely guess work, was accepted and the board worried along to the end of the year, always facing a deficit, and then went to the finance committee, which by various means raised the money to keep the schools going.

Hits Comptroller.

In view of the criticism of the city comptroller and a certain underhanded reference to expenditures to be taken out of the coming year, let me say that neither he nor the trouble-maker whom he has in his organization, and whose ignorant criticism he seems to reflect, ever raised any question about the deficient budget in these past years, and also let me remind him that fire apparatus and other things were purchased by the city itself in one year and billed to them in the year following, all for the very good and sufficient reason that the funds for the current year were not sufficient and the people selling this apparatus were willing to take their chances on the succeeding year's appropriation, so the purchase of two automobiles by the board of education this year to be paid for in 1927 need not cause the petty politician who is furnishing the comptroller with his information any anxiety.

Beginning with 1926 the business administration of the schools was brought down to an efficient basis and a budget was prepared which really meant something. It goes into the most minute detail and I do not think any better arrangement of the items has been made. With this budget the board can tell the amount needed for every item, both individual, by groups and by schools. It can tell the amount expended each month, the total amount expended to date, and the balance remaining to date. I do not think there is anything in the comptroller's office or in this system that is any better than the above budget, and in reply to his undeserved criticism, present situation ultimately would result in the passage of a law requiring the board to adopt a non-flexible budget each year with sufficient funds which cannot be touched for other things set aside for teachers' salaries and other known expenses," that this is just what we have at present, and every known expense has the amount necessary set up against it and that is just why we are facing the closing of the schools rather than to divert money from the teachers' salaries to other items. The only trouble is, never since I have had anything to do with the schools have they had the "sufficient funds" referred to by the comptroller.

When the budget for 1926 went before the board the total amount asked for was $3,061,814.50. The board spent several weeks in going through this budget and with everybody making sacrifices for their particular locations we cut out $156,222.84, leaving a total asked for by the schools of $2,905,591.66. For several years the question of teachers' salaries had been a disturbing factor and after a long conference a schedule of salaries was adopted which would settle this matter for all time, and the increase for this was $110,000 for 1926. We also had the state school fund, $267,113.97; non-resident tuition, $20,000; vocational funds, $12,000, and the 26% of the revenue of the city, amounting to a grand total of $2,672,967.85, against our estimated needs of $3,016,191.66. This left a deficit of $343,223.81 and I believe if we had received this amount of money we could have worried through this year.

However, the city comptroller had paid out in 1925 the November payroll, which was $200,020, and also in unpaid bills carried over from 1925 to 1926, and not included in the 1926 budget, $30,368.40, making a total of $230,388.40. This was taken out of the 1926 revenue and brought our deficit up to $582,612.21. Besides this the December, 1925, payroll was brought over to be paid for in 1926, and this added approximately $200,000 more to the deficit for the current year. I attended a meeting of the finance committee of city council with other members of the board, and this entire situation was laid before them, so that they knew the facts as stated by the above figures. In addition to this, they were told that the salaries for 1926 with the increase above referred to would amount to $2,432,871 and they stated that the very best they could do was to give us 26 per cent of the city's revenue, amounting to $2,373,853.88. Therefore, on the face of the matter, Mr. Orme, Mayor Sims, Mr. West and everyone else knew in January, 1926, that the money allotted to the schools on the basis of 26 per cent of the city's income, would not even pay the pay roll.

Further Criticism.

Mr. West further criticises the board of education because the city has failed to collect $500,000 in fi fas., which means that 26 per cent of this—$130,000—should be taken out of the appropriation for schools by the finance committee. Just where he figures the school department responsible for this, he can explain better than I can.

When the budget was finally balanced by the board of education, the deficit above referred to—$582,612.121—was taken out of salaries, and at that time, I made a motion that all of the school funds be diverted to salaries, and when the condition of the building rendered them unfit for use, to close schools, but to at least pay the teachers for the full year. I did not get any support to this, and I do not think myself it was a good move, but it was the only thing I could see that could be done, and I thought we should have the courage to face it.

I have urged during this year that the deficit which has been going on for years be closed up, and if we could get $560,000, which is a little less than our total deficit —$582,612—we could run the schools for the balance of the year, but right here let me state that there would be no taking this amount out of the revenue for 1927. What I wanted to do was to pay this deficit up once for all and then stay within the budget for 1927, which I roughly estimated would be $3,000,000. There is no business firm in the world that could live by carrying over an increasing indebtedness from year to year as the schools have been forced to do. If we could get this money without taking it out of the 1927 funds, we can keep the schools open but I had rather close them now for the balance of the year than to start the year 1927 by carrying over a deficit of $500,000 to be taken out of the funds for this year.

In all the criticism that has been brought against the board of education by the mayor, the chairman of the finance committee, the city comptroller and others through the daily press, there has not been one helpful constructive suggestion. Mr. Orme seems to regret that the council does not have the schools, and I agree with him that it would be better policy for the council to have the schools outright or for the schools to have a separate school tax and to be independent of the council for the present situation is bad for both parties.

Feasible Economies.

If the schools could be kept open for the remainder of the year, there are a number of economies which could be made in the near future. I want to call attention right here to the fact that Atlanta's population is increasing rapidly, and since the first of the year 100 new firms have located here, bringing with them a large number of employees, and further this city is doing its best to advertise itself as a city of opportunity, realizing that about the first question asked by the newcomer is "what kind of schools have you?" Now, if we are going to ask people to come to Atlanta, thereby increasing our school population and then give the schools insufficient funds with which to operate, there are only two solutions—close the schools for the balance of the year or stop inviting people to come here! That is, provided the opinions of Mayor Sims, the chairman of the finance committee, and the city comptroller are correct that the funds given the schools are sufficient.

What we want first of all is sufficient buildings for our schools and even with the present bond issue we have to install portables in several locations. After we have the children under a roof, then there are some economies which can be made by consolidation of classes, as was suggested by Mr. Sutton at the meeting of September 30, and while each teacher would have to take about twice the number of classes, and pupils, and decrease the efficiency of the teacher, still this would effect a savings of something like $100,000 a year. The location of the Girls' High school on the south side and the Henry Grady on the north side is open to a lot of criticism. I have never been in favor of putting the Boys' High and Tech High together, but as long as it has been done and a lot of saving could be made by removing the existing lines between the two schools and duplication of work in many cases under the present condition. Commercial High school could be merged with the Girls' High and if further economies are to be made the Boys' High on the north side could be extended to its fullest development and made an educational school. The same could be done with the Girls' High school on the south side and the city would then have a high school on each side of the city under one head, with a maximum efficiency in housing and instructors. I am aware that this would raise a storm of protest, but I prefer to offer suggestions which may develop into something of value rather than a lot of criticism which has been handed to the board by certain people through the press wich does nothing but stir up hard feeling.

It is strictly up to the citizens of Atlanta. If they want their schools to be kept open for the remainder of the year the funds must be provided, and next year the board is ready to go ahead and state what they want, giving anybody the privilege of examining their accounts and estimates in order to check them. If we cannot provide the funds, then we will have to keep a certain portion of the children in the city without school facilities or, in other words, cut out schools to the ability of our city government's resources. Certainly we cannot reduce the cost per pupil to any less than it is now. As far as I am personally concerned, I did not seek my office on the board of education. In fact I took it very reluctantly, but I have given a large amount of time and study to the work, and also been through some rather unpleasant experiences in doing this. I do not mind deserved criticism, and I do not say that I or the other members of the board are the best people to run the schools but I do say that we are doing our best under the conditions, and if Mayor Sims, or Mr. Orme or anybody else connected with the administration of the city of Atlanta can do any better, they can have my job tomorrow, for I am tired of unjust criticism!

Eubanks Defends Board.

Declaring that the board of education for the past several years has been forced to carry a deficit from year to year of from $500,000 to $800,000 on account of capital outlays forced upon the board by the ever increasing army of children who storm the doors of the public schools for educational advantages, Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president of the board, Saturday also issued a statement in defense of the board.

For the most part it was corroborative of that of Mr. Hoffman, but pointed out several new phases of the situation.

"The statement that the board of education has been extravagant in the use of its money is erroneous," Dr. Eubanks said. "The board has been niggardly, painstaking and economical. Funds provided simply have not been adequate to care for school needs.

"The citizens commission which made a thorough and impartial investigation of the school system sometime ago reported that the 26 per cent of the city's gross receipts was not sufficient to meet the needs of the public schools of Atlanta.

Told Repeatedly.

"The present condition of the schools as to finances has been told repeatedly. The superintendent of schools and members of the board put themselves on record in emphatic terms before the finance committee of city council in January that the schools could not be operated on the present funds. This statement also has been given from time to time to the mayor and city council.

"A special committee of the League of Women Voters and the Parent-Teacher association appeared before the school committee of city council early in the year and informed the members of that body that they, as members of the organizations they represented, wished to place the responsibility where it belonged. They stated at the time that in the fall in all probability there would be charges of mismanagement and they wished the school committee and city council to know that they as citizens understood that it was impossible for the schools to operate on the funds as then provided."

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT FAIR OPENING

day tickets have been issued to children throughout Georgia and attendance of more than 70,000 is anticipated Monday.

Features of the amusement program will include the sensational automobile loop-the-loop act presented by the Fearless Greggs, the three Original Bernards in aerial acrobatics, flying trapeze and high wire walking, Fred's Pigs, a trained animal clown act; Morale's Dogs, a trained dog show; Basile's Madison Square Garden Novelty band, and several others.

The Fearless Greggs' act will be presented this week by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gregg, with Mrs. Gregg driving the second car in which a former driver was killed last spring. Mr. Gregg starts his car down a 200-foot runway at the bottom of which is a spring trap that switches him to a steeply rising runway. This runway throws his car high into the air and into a complete loop-the-loop in midair. Mrs. Gregg starts a fraction of a second after Mr. Gregg. The springing of the trap leaves the bottom of the runway level and her car shoots under Mr. Gregg's car while it is looping the loop in midair. The death of the previous driver was caused by a fifth of a second's delay in his start with the result that Mr. Gregg's car came down squarely on top of him, killing him instantly.

Many Farm Exhibits.

The agricultural department this year will be divided into two separate shows, one presented by the State College of Agriculture and the white farmers of Georgia in the Agricultural building opposite the main street car gates and the other presented by the negro extension department of the state college and the negro farmers of Georgia in the old dance casino building, opposite the Lakewood avenue gate above the upper midway.

Although county exhibit units have been reduced from 45 feet frontage to 30 feet frontage and individual exhibit units have been reduced from 30 feet frontage to 15 feet frontage, more than 20 county and individual exhits were rejected by the fair association because of lack of space to place them.

The agricultural college will exhibit its dairy and live stock work, home economics work, with a model creamery and kitchen in operation, a complete tobacco show, showing methods of raising tobacco, selection of soil, curing, marketing and other steps in the progress of tobacco from seedbed to smoker.

The largest and most complete Georgia apple show ever presented in any fair in the world will be another novel Agricultural building feature. The center space between the display booths will be occupied by a grove of living apple trees, each tree affected by a different tree disease which will be treated and partially or completely cured during the eight days of the fair, the cure being effected so that its progress can be watched from day to day by visitors at the fair.

Displays Attractive.

The arrangement of county and individual displays this year differs widely from those of any previous year. Uniform display platforms have been built on which agricultural and home arts products are arranged in uniform order, bidding for premiums strictly on the basis of the merit of the farm products with little regard to the carpentry or cabinet working ability of the exhibitor. The arrangement also makes the exhibits easier to study and compare.

The Liberal Arts building also makes an entirely different appearance to the visitor than in any previous year, exhibits being arranged and placed to receive full value of the huge windows of the building for daytime lighting and to receive more scientific artificial lighting at night, all tending to enhance the attractiveness of the displays.

An immense glass case, topped by a golden ball bearing, a golden "I" nearly 10 feet tall, fronts the Liberal Arts building entrance. In this case is displayed all the trophies won by the Georgia School of Technology since its establishment, a collection valued in five figures for the silver and gold contained in the cups, plaques and other trophies, and valued in millions of dollars for sentimental purposes. Trophies for every form of athletics, for scholarship, for architectural achievements, for textile victories, for superiority in all lines of engineering, are included in the collection. It is publicly displayed for the first time in history and thousands of Tech students and former Tech students are seeing the entire collection for the first time themselves.

Schools Show Work.

The remainder of the front part of the building is occupied by other features of the Georgia Tech exhibit. Textiles, ceramics, architecture, commerce, mechanical engineering, electrical engineering and all the other branches of science taught at the college will be exhibited and demonstrated by live exhibits, manned by Tech students.

Immediately back of the Tech trophy display will be the woman's department. All the booths in that department were taken several weeks ago.

The space for display of individual articles of handiwork and fancy work is filled, although nearly double the space previously available has been made available for this year through a rearrangement of shelves and cabinets. The fair is to pay nearly $3,000 in premiums in this department.

On either side of the woman's department are the school exhibits. A new arrangement for school displays this year gives each display the full benefit of the huge windows on the sides of the liberal arts building. No exhibits will be backed against the windows. The school exhibits on both sides of the building are separated from the woman's department by partitions which serve as the background for the exhibits.

Nearly double the space in former years is filled with school exhibits. Keen but friendly rivalry between city of Atlanta schools and schools from Fulton and other counties which will exhibit has resulted!

During preparation of the school exhibits, which are all separated by partitions from each other, schoolboy and schoolgirl guards have been posted at the conecting doors and the fair police department, swining into the spirit of the rivalry, declined to permit any student to enter any exhibit after working hours except the one on which he was working for his own school. The fair has posted $1,000 of premiums in the school department.

Novel Exhibit Features.

The commercial displays occupy about half of the liberal arts building. Each one, under a tacit agreement with the Fair association, has an informative theme appropriate to the type of exhibit. For instance, lumber companies show methods of selecting different woods for different purposes and for preserving different types of woods. Merchants show new fall styles. Others fit in generally with the education spirit of the fair.

The automobile building also presents a distinctively novel appearance to visitors who have seen previous fairs. One-third of the building, beginning at the front entrance, has been taken by Sears, Roebuck and company and developed into an animated version of the famous Sears-Roebuck catalogue. Every article listed in the 1926 catalogue is on display, ranging from a paper of pins to an actual dwelling house, with two bedrooms, living room, kitchen, dining room and bath room.

The center of the exhibit is occupied by a reading and recreation room for visitors with several hundred lounges and comfortable chairs arranged facing the radio broadcasting station. The radio station is of special glass front construction, actually forming a stage 20 feet wide on which the radio entertainers perform in full view of onlookers. A radio receiving set outside of the broadcasting station transmits the music and conversation to onlookers in the building by radio just as it is being transmitted to millions of people outside the building and as far as 5,000 miles away. A continuous program of entertainment is to be broadcast from the station, including concerts, operatic sketches, old fiddlers' contests, harmonica band contests, comedians and musicians picked from the midway attractions, Basile's band, the famous Madison Square Garden musical organization which will give daily concerts at the fair, several dance orchestras and concert bands engaged by the larger exhibitors, including the automobile show and the NuGrape company.

All Auto Models Shown.

All the 1927 model automobiles are on exhibition in the automobile show which occupies the remaining half of the building.

The dog show, sponsored by the Atlanta Kennel club, occupies the basement of the automobile building which formerly was used as general offices of the fair association. Nearly 500 thoroughbred dogs, many of them valued as highly as $10,000 by their owners, will be exhibited in competition for $2,000 in premium money. Nearly 100 of the entries are owned in Atlanta.

The poultry show occupies the basement of the agricultural building.

The negro agricultural exhibit occupies the dance casino and will be the largest negro exhibit ever presented at a southern fair. Forty-two Georgia counties are represented in the exhibit, agricultural and domestic science products being featured.

The cattle, hog, sheep and goat shows fill the live stock barns between the main entrance on Pryor street and the three exposition buildings.

Nearly 300 race horses, which will compete for the purses, stakes and trophies posted for Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, will fill all five of the horse barns, the show horse stables as well as the race horse stables. Nearly 30 representatives of Walter Candler's Lullwater stables have been entered and several other stables will enter horses which have been racing over the Grand Circuit this year.

Officials Pleased.

Arthur L. Brooke, president; Ivan E. Allen, chairman of the executive committee, and Oscar Mills, vice president and general manager, were all jubilant Saturday over prospects for the greatest fair in Atlanta's history. They expressed pleasure especially over the fact that indications which always have proved a barometer of attendance assure an attendance in keeping with the improved quality of the fair.

The most important of these was the demand for school-day tickets, ordered by city and county school superintendents throughout north Georgia. More than twice as many school-day tickets had been ordered Saturday as had been before school day last year. The demand was so large, in fact, that original plans to print the special tickets exclusively in the newspapers was abandoned and a special order of 100,000 was printed in addition to that many in newspapers.

MAN IS SERIOUSLY INJURED IN CRASH

A man, reported to be John Berry and whose address was not learned by police, was seriously injured early Sunday morning in an automobile collision on the Spring street viaduct, according to police records. The injured man was rushed to Grady hospital where doctors stated his condition, due to loss of blood, was serious.

Two other men are reported to have been in the accident but left the scene of the accident before Call Officers Claude and R. E. Carroll arrived. No details of the accident were learned at an early hour Sunday morning. Officers are investigating the case.

BROKERS ON TRIAL LATE IN OCTOBER

More than 30 Atlanta brokers will be placed on trial in Fulton superior court during the week beginning October 18, according to attaches of Solicitor John A. Boykin's office. The brokers were indicted on a misdemeanor charge in connection with alleged operation of business in violation of the state "anti-bucketshop" law.

'Disregard for Truth' Laid To Holder by Alex Chamlee

Charges that John N. Holder in his "present extremity had lost all regard for truth," were made in a statement given out Saturday by Alex S. Chamlee, campaign manager for Dr. L. G. Hardman.

"Apparently Mr. Holder has lost all regard for truth," Mr. Chamlee said. "He knows that the frivolous charges that he is hurling at Dr. Hardman are utterly false, so he hides behind the deceptive phrase, 'I am informed.' Any fact not generally known should not be accepted as true without definite authority. His attacks upon Dr. Hardman reminds me very forcibly of a man trying to knock down a stone wall with rotten eggs. Every charge that he has made against Dr. Hardman has been proven to be false. He has not, nor cannot, substantiate a single one.

"The good people of Georgia who know Dr. Hardman in his public and private life, resent these false charges and base insinuations. In spite of all that Mr. Holder can do to defame him, Dr. Hardman will emerge from this campaign as clean as he started. He is recognized as the peer of any man in Georgia, and the superior of any man who would stoop to falsify his record or traduce his character. I am fully convinced that every time Mr. Holder opens his mouth it is to court certain defeat.

Favors Negroes, Charged.

"Mr. Holder has employed only negro locomotive engineers, cranemen and derrick operators in the road department work at Oglesby, Ga. He employs negroes as truck and tractor drivers, while there are hundreds of white men with families who would be only too glad to have these jobs. Even worse things occurred at East Point where negro plasterers were paid $1.25 per hour for an 8-hour day, while white carpenters were paid only 80 cents per hour for a 9-hour day. Can you beat it? And this man wants to be the governor of white men in Georgia.

"That Dr. Hardman will carry Chatham county by a tremendous majority is the good news we have from the leading citizens of Savannah. Voters of that county are riding the Hardman bandwagon. They know that he will carry the standard of decency to overwhelming victory on the 6th of October. They know, with all others, that he will deliver Georgia from the clutches of greed and incompetence on that day.

"Mr. Holder, who urged the legislature last February to saddle the overburdened citizens of Georgia with a five-cent gasoline tax, has said no word of explanation. He would still be for the increase if he were allowed to handle the highway funds.

"He has not denied that he favors county bonds and has caused thousands of dollars worth of them to be issued. He is the man who lets the road contracts. But he opposes a state bond issue because the legislature has made it clear that such a huge sum will never be entrusted to him. Mr. Holder is clearly shown as the soul of selfishness and the incarnation of deceit. His only interest is in himself, and the diabolical machine that forwards his private ends.

Employees "Politicing"

"We have definite information that men employed by the highway department are working for Mr. Holder's success in the present election, and that, notwithstanding the fact, that they are paid out of the highway funds that belong to the state of Georgia. His campaign is costing the people of Georgia thousands of dollars that are sorely needed for the purpose for which they were levied and collected—money that the tax gatherer has wrung from the people's distress.

"The state auditor shows that the highway department under Mr. Holder spent over $6,000,000 in 1924. What has the state to show for it? Some persons think not $1,000,000 worth of roads.

"What has Mr. Holder to show for it? What he probably thinks is a fine highway of machine politics to the governor's chair, but his politically piloted car will be justly stuck and stopped in the mud of political disaster as thousands of Georgia motorists have been stuck and stopped in the mud of Georgia's highways by the gross mismanagement of the state highway department.

"He has held highway meetings all over the state of Georgia at the people's expense, with the monstrous pretense that he had road mileage to allocate. The deluded citizens of the various counties have neglected their work to attend these meetings, to be cajoled into promising him their support in this election in return for his promise to build their community roads. If the counties are entitled to any roads within his power to allocate, they are entitled to them without the price of their suffrage.

Hits "Combination."

"Mr. Holder has denied any connection with the discredited Brown and his machine; but the evidence pours in every day that there was a vital connection, amounting to a close working agreement. We have an abundance of letters sent out from the Holder organization, on which are stamped the addresses. The same mailing machine that is used in addressing the Market Bulletin, is used in addressing the Holder letters. The labels on the letters are identical. Is there any wonder that the funds for publishing the Market Bulletin are exhausted?

"Mr. Holder says he will recommend changes in the highway department if he is elected to the governorship. What changes would he make? Would he strip the chairman of the board of his autocratic powers and transfer them to the governor? Just as he has clung to his job in the highway department while running for governor, he would cling to the same powers and perquisites while acting as governor. But Mr. Holder need not disturb his mind with the things he would do as governor of Georgia, for he is destined to perish politically under the wreck of his machine on the 6th of October."

Old-Fashioned Square Dances

:: DINNER TO BE AT HENRY GRADY TUESDAY ::

Feature Pioneer Boys' 'Party'

BY W. F. CRUSSELLE.

Interest increases in the Pioneer School Boys' "party" at Henry Grady hotel on Tuesday night. Responses are coming in rapidly and all the "boys" should notify John Burckhardt at once so that proper provision may be made for the crowd. There's plenty of room, but the point is to find how much it will be necessary to engage.

The committee has completed the program and details, some changes being made because of absence from the city of some who were to take leading parts. An orchestra of old-fashioned fiddlers will be there, headed by Earl Johnson, Dixie's new champion fiddler, and his band of real old-time musicians, including a regular "caller" to call the figures of the square dances, including, of course, the Virginia reel.

A friendly contest will be held to decide the best dancer among the members, one of whom has announced that he wants to try it "to see if his Trilbys still function."

Miss Carolyn Sparling Nisbet, the popular soprano, will lead several old-time melodies in which the boys will join. "Old Black Joe," "Old Kentucky Home," "Comin' Through the Rye," "Lorena," and others are on the list. Everybody will sing Burns' "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot," as the "Home, Sweet Home" of the party.

There will be short addresses from among the boys, and some of the older guests recalling the days brought to the fore by the meeting and the idea of the organization. Among the honor guests are Judge George Hillyer, Peyton H. Snook, Hoke Smith, Henry H. Cabaniss, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connally, Dr. Sam W. Small, James B. Nevin, Miss Ella Smillie, Mrs. Fannie Banks Callaway, Mrs. Albert Perdue, Miss Gussie Brenner.

A full attendance of all the boys, those who were in school in Atlanta before the public school began in 1872, is very much desired. It is not necessary to have "joined"—the boys joined when they went to school—and it is not necessary to dance, come and see the others dance if you don't. There will be some sights, and a good time for everybody.

EMORY GLEE CLUB SELECTS PERSONNEL

Emory University, Ga., October 2. (Special.)—Tryouts for the Emory Glee club have been held during the past week by Dr. Malcolm Howard Dewey, director of the club, and a large list of men have been tentatively picked for the club. Final tryouts are to be held on Monday at 8:30 o'clock, at which time the personnel of the club which will make the trips during the fall itinerary will be chosen.

With the memory of a successful European tour which the club took during the summer still in mind, and with a probability of the club including the same journey on its itinerary for the coming season, together with a probable performance or two in New York during the fall or winter, competition for places on the roll of the songbirds is the keenest that it has ever been.

Those men who have been tentatively picked for places on the yet incomplete list are: First tenors, Ed Lovelace, Decatur; John Panter, Copper Hill, Tenn.; Snap McCord, Atlanta; Emory Bell, Palatka, Fla.; Robert Strozier, Tarpon Springs, Fla.; Robert Oglesby, T. G. Browder, Decatur; Emil Jallouk, Jerusalem; Allen Logan, Gainesville. Second tenors: Ed Kane, Nealy Peacock, Macon; Charles Carroll, R. L. Archibald, E. L. Bridges, Plains; G. W. Monk, Moultrie; L. Peacock, Macon. First bass: George Baker, Savannah; John Vann, Madison, Fla.; Lowry Davenport, Blackshear; John Haddock, Emory; Joe Crawley, Oxford; David Stubbs, Savannah; V. G. Eady, J. H. Blackmore, Alfred Cumbee, Walton Peabody, Macon, and James Knox. The second basses are: Lawrence Chaffee, Roy Thompson, Glenn Elliott, Fayetteville; Julian Dell, Columbus; Robert Henry, Emory; James Pollard, Greenwood, Miss., and Henry B

MOTOR TAG FEES NET STATE $58,166

September collections from Georgia's automobile registration fees amounted to $58,166.69, according to the monthly statement issued by the secretary of state's office today.

Since January 1, Georgia motorists, through the purchase of state licenses, have poured $3,326,398.52 into the state's coffers. This is an increase of $393,233.68 over the amount of registration fees received by the state during the corresponding period last year, it was announced.

A total of 234,252 passenger car tags and 34,228 truck tags were issued by the secretary of state from January to October, the records shok. This is an increase of 27,183 passenger cars, and 5,250 motor trucks over the corresponding period of 1925, it was stated.

BACK-TO-SCHOOL MOVE ATTENDED BY SUCCESS

Success attended the "back to school" drive launched by school officials, the Rotary club and the Atlanta chamber of commerce, according to figures released Saturday by H. Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent of schools, who declared that at least 241 students were persuaded to reenter school.

The figures were compiled for the junior and senior high schools only and show that 147 boys and 94 girls who had dropped out reregistered and now are students. Another outstanding feature which is believed to be a direct result of the drive is that about 600 more students were registered in high schools of the city at the end of the second week than at the same time last year.

"The Rotary club, the chamber of commerce and Atlanta newspapers are to be congratulated on the splendid cooperation hich made possible the success of the movement," Mr. Hunter said. "School officials, of course, are proud of the good work."

LOWRY SAYS FLORIDA SITUATION APPALLING

Colonel Sumter L. Lowry, Jr., of Tampa, Saturday passed through Atlanta on his way to Asheville, N. C., where he will rest for a while from the arduous task of directing relief work at Moore Haven, Fla., following the Florida hurricane.

Conditions in Florida are appalling, Colonel Lowry declared. Stating that certain sections of Florida are absolutely destitute and helpless, he predicted terrifying results unless outside help is received immediately. He urged that the relief work be kept up, stating that any misunderstanding regarding the real situation in Florida may have been brought about by the statement of people of wealth that they do not need help.

Colonel Lowry is attached to the 116th field artillery, this outfit being rushed to Moore Haven the day following the disaster by Governor Martin of Florida.

Bail Increased Carroll Allowed To Sail to Europe

New York, October 2.—(AP)—Earl Carroll, theatrical producer who is under sentence to serve a term in the Atlanta federal penitentiary for perjury, was given permission today to sail for Europe on the Leviathan after Federal Judge Goddard had ordered his bail increased from $5,000 to $10,000.

Carroll explained that he was going to Europe to arrange for theatrical productions there. The sentence against him was the outgrowth of the "bathtub" party in his theater here last February.

PHARMACY WEEK TO BE OBSERVED BY LOCAL STORES

National Pharmacy week, which has grown in two short years from a small beginning to a national institution of gigantic proportions, will be celebrated this year throughout the entire United States the week of October 10-16.

The celebration in Atlanta will be in the hands of the 80 leading retail drug stores, members of the Atlanta Retail Druggists' association, affiliated with the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association.

National Pharmacy week was inaugurated with the idea of teaching the American public that the druggist is a professional man, trained to serve the public in a special capacity, and that pharmacy is an institution safeguarding the health of the nation.

Pharmacy week this year will be observed and made effective through special newspaper and other advertising, as well as through special window and counter displays, which will display specimens of crude drugs, fine chemicals and professional equipment used in compounding prescriptions, each bearing a label giving its scientific as well as its common name, the name of the country which is the source of supply, and a brief notation of its properties and use. Many pharmacies will have Pharmacy week folders to wrap up with each purchase made in the store, and every effort will be exerted to make Atlanta's part in the celebration of national Pharmacy week fully in keeping with that of other leading cities of the country.

Group Chairmen Announced For Community Chest Drive

With announcement of chairmen of the four employee group divisions for the approaching Community Chest campaign, by Thomas K. Glenn, chairman of the campaign executive committee, and W. Bayne Gibson, campaign chairman, final recruting of workers for the campaign, from October 22 to November 1, will be rushed rapidly during the coming week.

The colored population division personnel is now being completed and organization is shaping up so that all persons in all walks of life will have an opportunity to share in the support of Atlanta's relief and social service activities.

Robert Gregg is chairman, and Mrs. E. M. Waters, secretary of the industrial employee division which will have charge of solicitation of employees in 175 industrial plants and factories.

The commercial employee division will be organized under leadership of Frank H. Neely, chairman, and George A. Deibert, secretary, and will promote the campaign in 413 commercial firms and institutions.

Race Heads Group.

Josiah T. Rose is chairman and James L. R. Boyd, secretary, of the public employee division in charge of federal, state, county and city employee solicitation.

The utility employee division will work among employees of the public utilities under A. Allison Thornwell, chairman, and Lee S. Hexter, secretary.

"We have in the chairmen of these four divisions, not only key men with their respective groups, but leaders of such outstanding ability that they might just as readily have been called to lead the entire campaign," said Mr. Glenn.

"Into the hands of these four men, and George West, chairman of the individual subscribers division, we have placed the responsibility of recruiting the men who are going to write Atlanta's most important insurance policy during the 10 days between October 22 and November 1.

"The insurance of freedom from suffering and distress for some fifteen thousand of our population, as well as insurance against those unfortunate community diseases that come from poverty and undirected community life is worthy of the very best leadership and the most enthusiastic support of our citizenship.

"I have been delighted by the ready response of these men and feel certain that the very best citizens in Atlanta will offer their services, whether as team captains or as solicitors. All of us realize how much of our time and energy is saved by combining these thirty-four campaigns in one, and when this one campaign is organized so thoroughly, with the work so evenly divided, I am sure that every man in Atlanta will fall into his place in the ranks when he is called."

Chairmen Are Prominent.

Mr. Neely is one of the most active leaders in Atlanta's civic life. He is now chairman of the city bond commission, president of the Retail Merchants' association, and a member of the Forward Atlanta Advertising commission. Mr. Rose is a former president of the Civitan club, a prime mover in everything good for Atlanta. Robert Gregg was president of the Rotary club last year. Mr. Thornwell's years of active relations with the railroads and utilities especially fits him for his work.

Each of these division chairmen will organize committees within the plants, offices and organizations assigned to them. The industrial and commercial divisions have their field divided into geographical districts, each to be headed by a chairman, with section captains under him. The executive committee already has received assurances of the most cordial cooperation from heads of the various concerns, members state.

To Address Ministers.

Bayne Gibson, president of the Community Chest, will address the Evangelical Ministers' Association of Atlanta at its meeting in the Y. M. C. A. at 11 o'clock Monday morning. The address will be the first made by a chest speaker before an outside organization preparatory to the campaign which begins October 22, two weeks from Friday.

Invitation to address the meeting was extended last week by Dr. J. W. Caldwell, president of the ministers' organization, through James Morton, secretary, who is also chairman of the church contact committee for the Community Chest campaign.

The meeting Monday morning will be one of two important meetings held during the day preparatory to the chest campaign, October 22 to November 1.

Directors To Meet.

All members of the boards of directors of the 34 social service and relief agencies dependent on the Community Chest have been called by Thomas K. Glenn, chairman of the campaign executive committee, to meet at the chamber of commerce at 7:30 o'clock Monday evening.

The evening meeting will be the first general meeting of all chest agency directors held this year, and Mr. Glenn said that 100 per cent attendance is highly important at this stage of preparation for the Community Chest campaign. He has asked that all board members cancel any other engagements they may have made previously in order to attend and take part if necessary in the discussion of questions bearing on the campaign which may develop during the meeting.

U. S. DRY FORCES NAB 1,404 GALLONS WHISKY IN AUGUST

During the month of August prohibition agents of the northern district of Georgia confiscated 1,404 gallons of whisky and 150,845 gallons of mash and equipment valued at $34,365, according to records compiled Saturday by W. T. Day, director of prohibition enforcement in the district.

Approximately 79 distilleries were captured and destroyed, 37 worms destroyed and 37 gallons of wine were confiscated. The records show that 780 fermenters and 12 automobiles, valued at $4,000, were captured and confiscated. Fifty-two persons were arrested and the prosecutions of 77 were recommended.

The largest single raid of the month was made in Merriwether county when a still of 1,067 gallons capacity was captured.

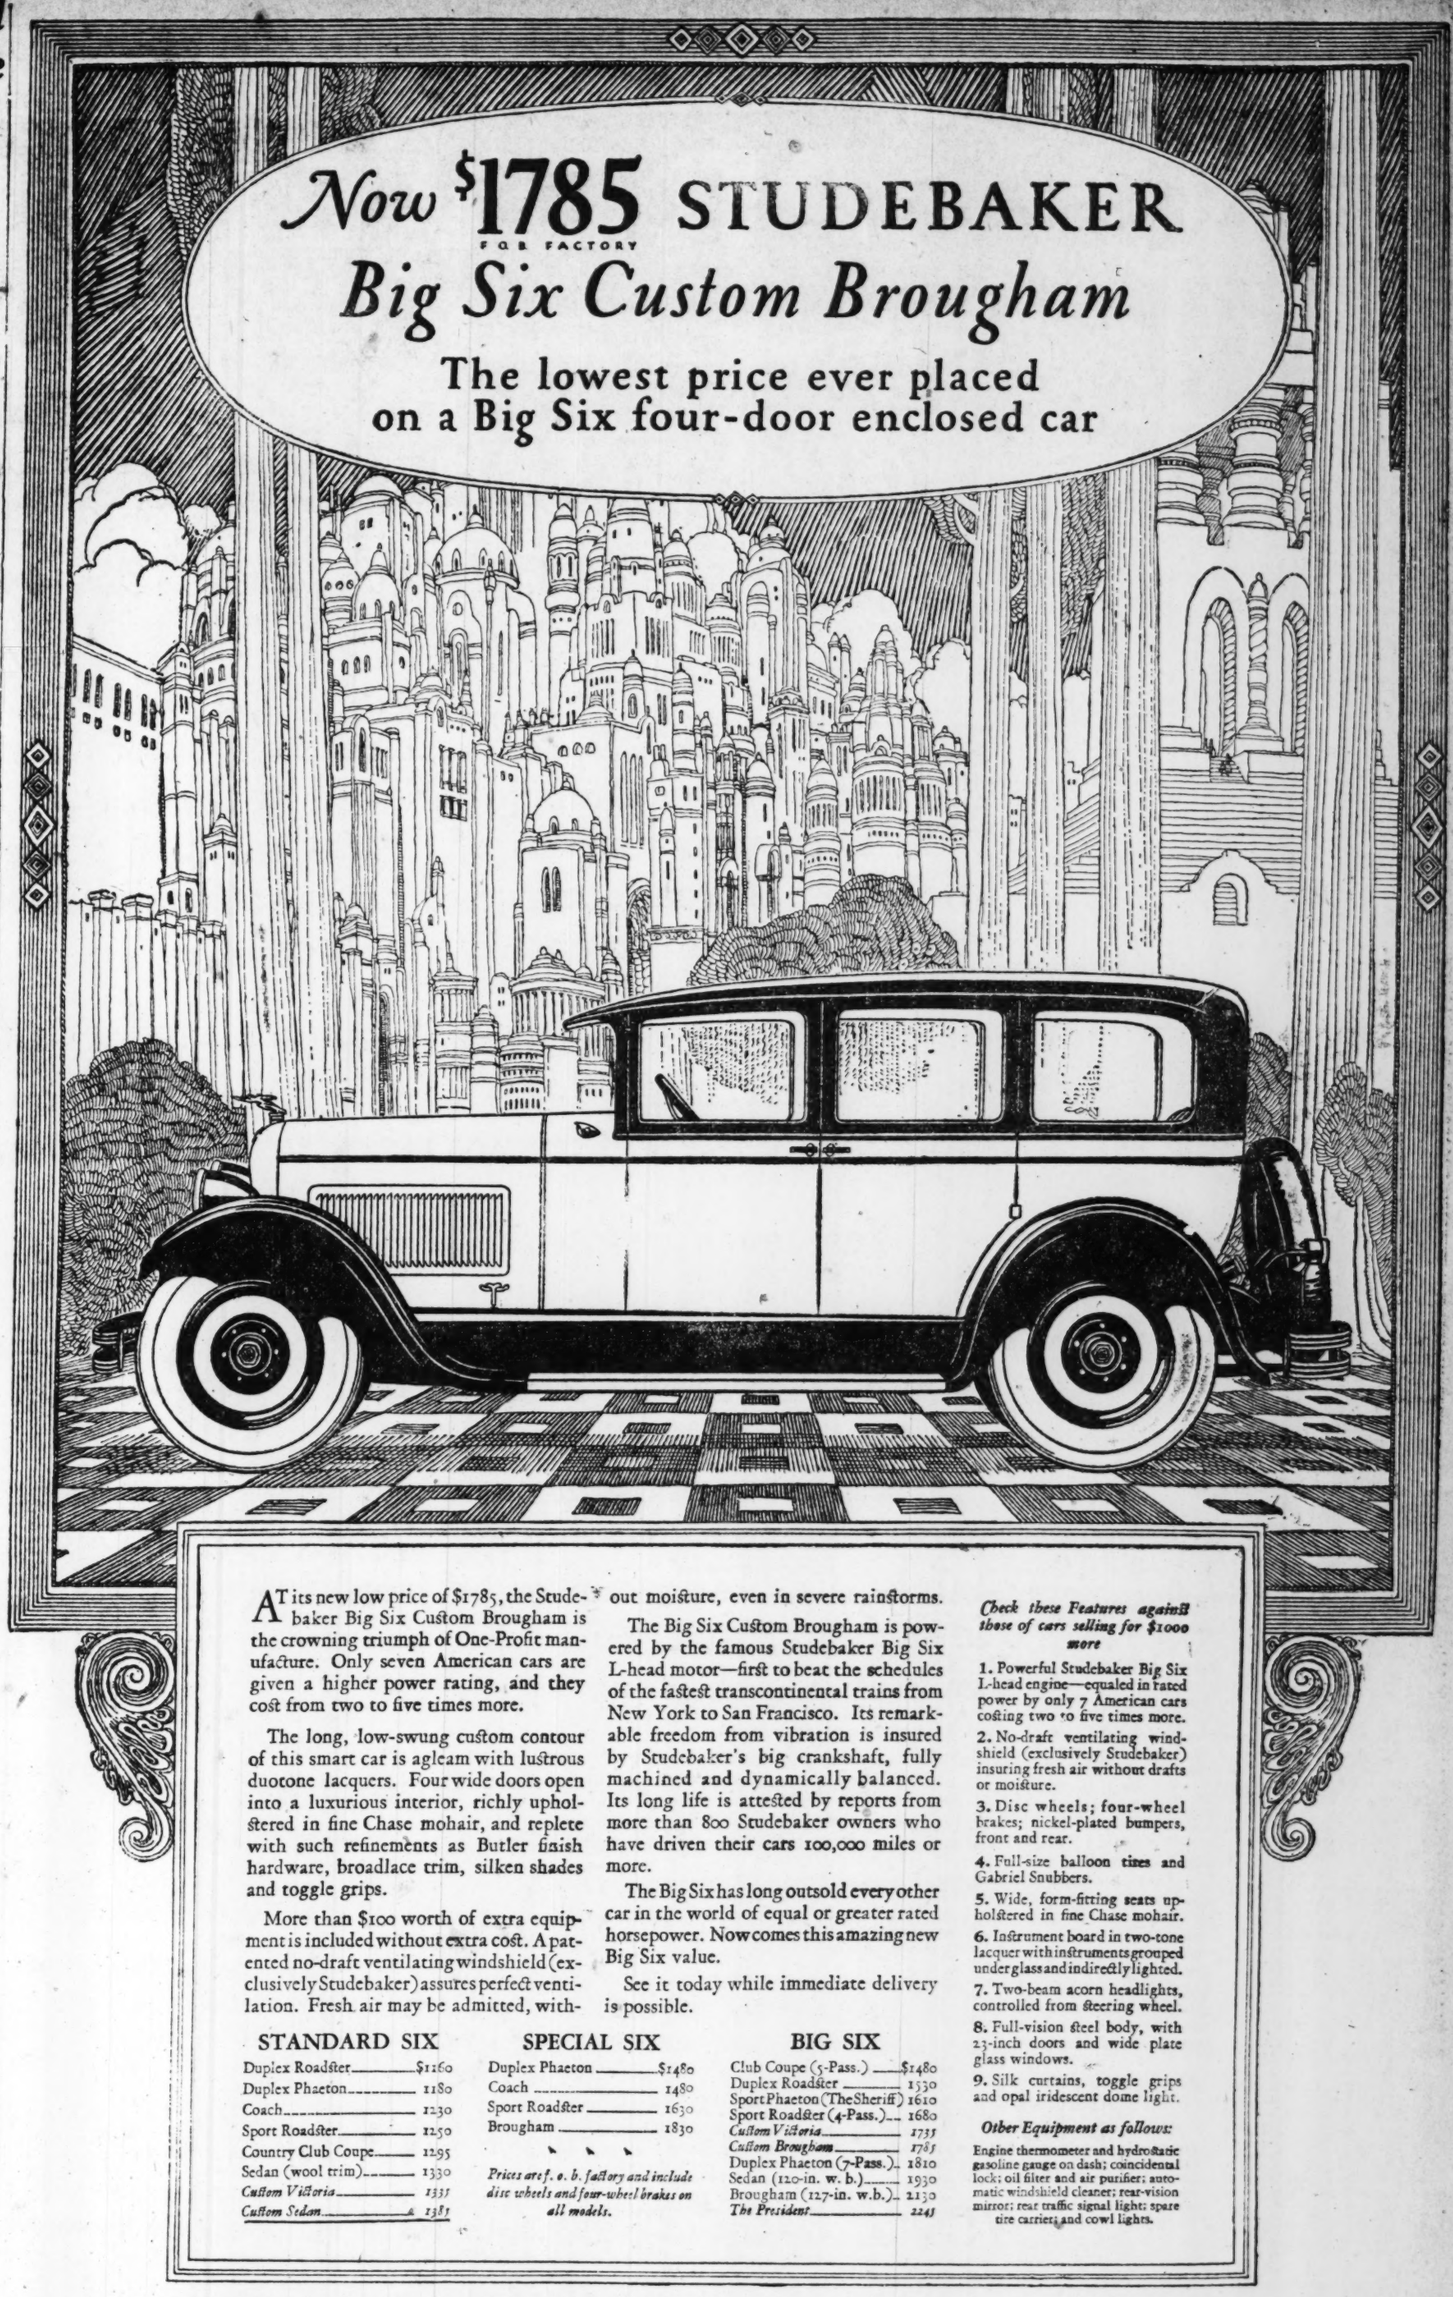

CHARLES B. ROGERS DIES AT RESIDENCE IN 53RD YEAR

Charles B. Rogers, a well-known business man, passed away at his residence, 693 Peeples street, Friday afternoon in his 53d year.

Mr. Rogers was a native of Nova Scotia, but has been a resident of this city for 30 years in the electrical business.

He married Miss Estelle Weinmeister, daughter of the late Carl Weinmeister, one of our pioneer citizens. He is survived by his wife and son, Charles B., Jr.

He was a member of the Church of the Incarnation, and leaves many friends who will mourn his death.

AT its new low price of $1785, the Studebaker Big Six Custom Brougham is the crowning triumph of One-Profit manufacture. Only seven American cars are given a higher power rating, and they cost from two to five times more.

The long, low-swung custom contour of this smart car is agleam with lustrous duotone lacquers. Four wide doors open into a luxurious interior, richly upholstered in fine Chase mohair, and replete with such refinements as Butler finish hardware, broadlace trim, silken shades and toggle grips.

More than $100 worth of extra equipment is included without extra cost. A patented no-draft ventilating windshield (exclusively Studebaker) assures perfect ventilation. Fresh air may be admitted, without moisture, even in severe rainstorms.

The Big Six Custom Brougham is powered by the famous Studebaker Big Six L-head motor—first to beat the schedules of the fastest transcontinental trains from New York to San Francisco. Its remarkable freedom from vibration is insured by Studebaker's big crankshaft, fully machined and dynamically balanced. Its long life is attested by reports from more than 800 Studebaker owners who have driven their cars 100,000 miles or more.

The Big Six has long outsold every other car in the world of equal or greater rated horsepower. Now comes this amazing new Big Six value.

See it today while immediate delivery is possible.

Fire Prevention Week---Oct. 4 to 9

LET THIS WEEK be a reminder to you of the great loss of life and tremendous damage inflicted by the powerful red destroyer FIRE. Each year millions of dollars' worth of property is destroyed. And aside from a great scourge of human suffering it caused there is a merciless death toll which answers to its call.

Think back and consider how much of this could have been avoided. Someone carelessly threw a lighted match, cigar or cigarette, someone left a pile of rubbish or rags ready for a flame to start a holocaust,

Yes, much loss could have been prevented.

Fire hazards are ever present but they are brought more forcefully to mind during Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 4 to 9.

It behooves each and every one of us to exert all the possible care, every minute of the day and night. But for your peace, confidence and safety, INSURE your home, your business, your factory and your life--to such an extent that if fire does visit you, you and your family will be as fully protected as possible.

Do not put off buying insurance---take an inventory of your belongings, property and things that you would lose if you were to have a fire and insure them---NOW! Procrastination in this case will be a greater criminal than a "thief of time."

Tech Beats V. M. I.; Bulldogs Wallop Virginia, 27-7

HIGH SPOTS IN TECH-V. M. I. GAME AS SEEN BY CAMERA

Tornado Greatly Improved

BY DICK HAWKINS.

Georgia Tech is convalescing.

Of that there can be no doubt. The Golden Tornado drove through the blue wall of the V. M. I. cadets Saturday afternoon for two touchdowns with a brand of football which was so foreign to that used last week that it seemed a different school was performing under the moleskins of Tech.

They have not fully recovered from the fever of misplays which smote them down in the first game when the lowly Petrels triumphed by means of inspired football only to crumble Saturday under the attack of Howard, but the punch is there and if they continue to improve as they have during the past week the Yellow Jackets can not yet be counted out of the conference race.

There is one point which must be clearly realized and which will be distorted by many casual observers—Tech was beaten last Saturday by Oglethorpe and this week the Petrels went down to crushing defeat before the Bulldogs of Howard but they were not the same Petrels who ran through the Yellow and White.

And we are thoroughly convinced that the Cadet team of Saturday is at least one touchdown better than the Oglethorpe team of last Saturday. The defeat of Oglethorpe by Howard does not mean that Tech lost to a poor team in the first game. It means that Oglethorpe burned out its fire against the Tornado and that Tech has improved at least two touchdowns during the past week.

In every department of the game except passing—Tech's annual weakness—they outplayed the Blue of V. M. I. on the offense and, what means more, they were able to drive the ball from midfield to the goal with a punch that was absolutely missing in the Tech-Oglethorpe game.

Tech was weak in two branches of the game where the Cadets were strong. The Jackets fumbled four times and they missed at least four tackles while the Blue linesmen were uncanny in their precision. V. M. I. failed to miss a single tackle during the day. Whenever Tech went for a long gain it was because the Tornado line was opening the holes for the ball carrier. As soon as a Tech runner came within reach of a V. M. I. tackler he was stopped.

V. M. I. also starred in the aerial game, starting six passes and completing four for a total of 51 yards while Tech started two and completed neither of these. One of the incomplete passes on the Cadet column failed by inches to mean a touchdown.

Sam Murray was the star of the Tech offensive with Carter Barron and Smith close behind in average yards gained from scrimmage. Tech gained 170 yards from scrimmage and V. M. I. ripped off 61 yards for six first downs while Tech made eight first downs. On punts, Tech was far better. The Tech average in ten kicks was 45 yards while V. M. I. averaged 37 yards in eleven kicks.

The second Tornado touchdown was a parade of football such as has not been seen on Tech flats this season. The Jackets started the play on their 49-yard line and made four first downs in succession with Murray, Barron and Shulman carrying the ball.

Shulman started the attack by carrying the ball twice through the line for seven yards and Murray made it first down off tackle. Barron then ripped off nine yards on a delayed buck over left tackle and Murray made it first down when he bucked through the line. Shulman added another six yards through guard and after Barron had been thrown for a two-yard loss by Moorman, Red again took the ball and carried it off left tackle for 17 yards for another first down. On another tackle play Murray pushed it seven yards and Red Barron skirted left end for a touchdown. Brewer failed to kick goal when the center of the line weakened momentarily and the V. M. I. wall blocked the attempt.

This march for a touchdown was made in the face of iron opposition. There was no crumbling of the blue line at any time. V. M. I. may not have a great offensive team but their defense was well-nigh flawless most of the time. It was just a brilliant example of old-time Tech football for a short period.

The first Tornado touchdown was partially the result of a V. M. I. misplay. The cadets had the ball on their own 25-yard line and when the Tech line broke through on a punt formation Walker, punting for V. M. I. hurried his kick and punted straight into the air. The ball fell dead.

Murray started the march with a seven-yard gain at center then added two more yards off tackle. Red Barron then made his first spectacular run of the game when he tore off 16 yards at left end for a first down. This left the ball on the Cadets' 12-yard line and Murray hit the blue wall

Gene Visits Scene Of Victory And Receives Medal

Philadelphia, October 2.—(AP)—Gene Tunney, recently crowned heavyweight champion of the world through his defeat of Jack Dempsey, today revisited Philadelphia and the Sesqui stadium, scene of his triumph. He came to receive from Mayor Kendrick a diamond studded medal, symbolic of the boxing championship, and to greet thousands of children invited to the stadium to meet him.

The champion, who now is a lieutenant in the marine reserve corps, entered the big bowl escorted by detachments of marines and sailors, Mayor Kendrick and prominent city officials and friends. The children were quick to let the titleholder know that he was their idol.

Tunney in a brief talk said, "I will feel well repaid, if I can get across to the youth of America the importance of good health and the method by which it may be obtained.

PHIL SHAFFER ENTERS RACES AT LAKEWOOD

Following the lead of Harold "Red" Grange, Suzanne Lenglen and several other sport stars, Phil Shaffer has deserted the ranks of amateurs and as a professional pilot will start in the auto races which climax the Southeastern fair Saturday, October 9.

Shaffer, while attending school at Chicago, participated in many amateur meets in and around Chicago, driving as an amateur at smaller meets open only to amateur drivers. He has been a steady winner in the amateur events run as preliminaries to the long distance professional races, and when he saw a chance to grab one of the Buggatti machines, he turned professional and secured his drivers' license. In the few starts since then, Shaffer has done better than his friends thought possible, but he is steadily gaining in experience and with the fast little machine in its best shape, he may make it hot for some of the veterans in the Atlanta meet.

Slight of build, with a small pleasing face, Shaffer is a typical schoolboy type and makes followers in every start. The diminutive pilot is backed by a well-known Chicago sportsman who owns the machine and is banking on Shaffer's driving skill.

Michigan Beats Oklahoma Aggies

Ann Arbor, Mich., October 2.—(AP)—Exhibiting the same smart offensive that swept her to a western conference title last year, but noticeable weaker in defense, the University of Michigan spent a summery afternoon in beating the Oklahoma Aggies, 42 to 3, today.

Oklahoma, last place team of the Missouri valley conference last year, offered stubborn resistance except in the early moments of play. It played its best game in the third period when it held a much-substituted Michigan team scoreless and took advantage of poor Michigan kicking to advance the ball close to the Wolverine goal line where Strack place-kicked for Oklahoma's score.

KENNEL CLUB BENCH SHOW OPEN MONDAY

The thirteenth annual bench show of the Atlanta Kennel club opens Monday morning at the Southeastern fair with an entry of 285 dogs from all sections of the country. Judging will commence at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, when all toy breeds will be rated by Frank H. Addyman, of Ardsley, N. Y. Airedales and collies will also be judged Monday afternoon, with a record-breaking class of Boston terriers, starting at 7:30 Monday evening.

Starting at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning Irish setters, Gordon setters, Cosker spaniels and bull terriers will be judged. During the afternoon of Tuesday shepherds and fox terriers will be rated, and the best English setter, pointer and bulldog will be picked Tuesday night. Wednesday morning will be given over to the judging of bloodhounds, wolfhounds, great danes and Belgian sheep dogs. Wednesday afternoon the variety groups will be judged, and from the five winners will be picked the best dog of all breeds in the show.

The attention of local people is called to the fact that their dogs must be at the show by 10 o'clock Monday morning. The one exception to this is that puppies less than 12 months old need not be brought until the morning of the day when their breed is to be judged.

Tech Makes Many Gains.

If we cast a glimpse over the statistics of the Tech-V. M. I. game of Saturday it is not difficult to see that Tech needed the services of Sam Murray in their game against Oglethorpe. The big ball-carrier had a badly injured foot last week and was able to get into the Oglethorpe game for only a few minutes and while he was in there was not able to play his real game.

Saturday he carried the ball 21 times for a total gain of 83 yards, or an average of four yards for every time he hit the line. Red Barron was next with an average gain from scrimmage of nearly three yards per try. The tiny Smith pulled his usual stunt of getting away for 17 yards on one end run but he carried the ball from scrimmage only four times and was stopped for small gains on three occasions.

Parham, who replaced Sam Murray in the final quarter, ran the ball twice and gained 16 yards on the two plays. One of these was the most perfect delayed buck that has been seen around these parts for many a year. The play went off like clock-work and it is a mystery to us why this play was not worked before and why it was not worked again dufing the game.

The Tech backs Saturday exhibited one failing for which there is no excuse. There is some explanation of a loss from scrimmage—there is even some excuse for signals going wrong but a fumble is inexcusable whether it be on the sandlot, on the high school gridiron or in the ranks of the colleges. Tech safety men fumbled four times and on two occasions, at

FURMAN BEATS CAROLINA, 31-0, IN LOOSE GAME

Raleigh, N. C., October 2.—(AP)—A purple clad Furman team, that could at will be a hurricane or a brick wall swept Reddick field like a West Indian hurricane here this afternoon, defeating North Carolina State college by the surprisingly large score of 31-to-0.

A titian-haired Schneider and a tow-headed Rawls were outstanding stars of the Furman backfield. Each intercepted State college passes for sensational runs that resulted in touchdowns.

A blocked punt early in the opening period gave Furman the ball on State's 25-yard line. A pass netted 20 yards and three linebucks carried the ball across.

Early in the second quarter a long return of a punt put State within the last white marker but two bucks could not gain three yards and the ball went over.

Fairly intercepted a State pass in the same quarter for a 10-yard gain and touchdown. A dropkick netted Furman three points in the same quarter.

Twice in the third period Furman backs intercepted State passes and made long runs to place the Purple team in scoring position. Most of these runs came dramatically as State started a drive that pushed far into Furman territory. A State pass found its way into the arms of Rawls near his own goal. He raced 90 yards before he was downed two yards from the State goal.

Bulldogs Vanquish Virginia

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY.

Charlottesville, Va., October 2. The most powerful football team the University of Georgia has sent after the southern title in many, many years smashed a hardy machine representing the University of Virginia here this afternoon by a score of 27 to 7.

The defeat was one of the most decisive the Bulldogs have ever scored over the Cavaliers and furnished additional proof that dopesters knew exactly what they were talking about when they nominated Georgia as one of the prime favorites in the Dixie conference title hunt.

The Bullldogs were never hard pressed. They scored a touchdown in each quarter and were leading by 21 to 0 before the Virginians passed their way to a marker in their third quarter, when they put up their best showing of the encounter.

The Red and Black line ripped huge holes through as game a bunch of forwards as the southland will see in action this season. The Georgia backs swept through and around and passed over the line for gains consistently and there was never any comparison at all in the offensive work of the opposing elevens.

Georgia's march for the initial touchdown was started late in the first quarter, after having made previously threat after threat, only to be turned back just when it seemed impossible to miss scoring. The parade started from Georgia's 35-yard stripe. On the first play Captain George Morton darted 15 yards around left end from punt formation. At this point Georgia drew one of the five-yard penalties which the officials were forced to call frequently against the Bulldogs. On the third play, Ike Sherlock passed 12 yards to Half Johnson and the latter ran 39 yards for the first score of the game. Johnson promptly kicked goal and the Bulldogs had a working margin.

Fifteen plays were required by the Bulldogs in scoring their second touchdown, the counter coming in the second quarter at the end of a long journey which began on the Red and Blacks' 44-yard line.

Boland and Sherlock in three smashes at the line netted 11 yards and first down and Captain Morton added three around right end. Boland went six yards and first down and Captain Morton added three around right end. Boland went six yards and first down through the line, placing the ball on Virginia's 35-yard tape. A forward pass, Morton to Sherlock, netted 23 yards. Sherlock and Boland hit the line four times for first down and Georgia had goal to go. Sherlock made a yard through the line and Georgia had a five-yard penalty. Sherlock went around left end to Virginia's two-yard line. Boland was held for no gain in a lunge at the line, but Morton, on fourth down, skirted right end for the needed two yards for touchdown and Johnson again kicked goal.

Boland's magnificent return of Virginia's kick-off at the start of the second half paved the way for Georgia's third touchdown. Catching the oval near his five-yard line, Boland crashed down Cavalier tacklers until he had reached Virginia's 35-yard line, where he was finally brought to earth. The run netted a total of approximately 60 yards.

Boland bucked out of bounds for no gain on the first play. Estes found left tackle for two and Boland hit the same spot for a yard. A forward pass, Estes to Hatcher, netted 27 yards and the ball was on Virginia's 3-yard line. Boland was held when he attempted to plunge through the center of the line, but Estes went around right end for two yards. Boland was not to be denied this time and a two-yard buck over center sent him over for Georgia's third touchdown and again Johnson kicked goal.

The Cavaliers, faced with overwhelming defeat and apparently fought out in attempts to stem the Red tide which had engulfed them, called for their last ounce of reserve strength as the third quarter drew to a close and sent over a touchdown on sustained attack.

They began on their own 35-yard line. Georgia was penalized 5 yards and Hushion hit center for 12 and first down. Hushion went over left tackle for 2 more and Freidburg gained 4 around left end on a triple pass.

A forward pass was grounded, but a pass of 13 yards was ruled completed on the next play due to interference.

Hushion netted 1 yard in two stabs at the line and a neat forward pass, Hushion to Abner, netted 15 yards over right end. The ball was in the shadow of Georgia's goal posts. Hushion was held at left tackle and Freidburg lost 8 on a crisscross when Jelly Rogers broke through. Hushion was held again, but he then flipped a forward pass 11 yards over the line to Freidburg. Captain Mackall kicked goal.

Virginia, frantic in its efforts to score, continued its desperate aerial

Coach Says Bill West Is Entire Line by Himself

"Bill" West, captain of Western Reserve university, one of the two Cleveland entries in the Ohio conference loop this season, is one man upon whom Gordon Locke, former Iowa flash and new Pioneer mentor, is banking upon heavily this season.

Bill is almost a line unto himself. West stands 6 feet, 3 inches in height, shakes the scales at 205 pounds and can step the century in 10.3 seconds with his football cleats on.

He's a tackle, and for the last two years an all-conference choice.

In the two seasons West has played on the Pioneer squad he has failed to miss a single minute of playing time and has never had time called out for any injury. Not only that, but he has attended every practice in those two seasons, which is quite some record.

KINSEY ALSO JOINS PYLE'S TENNIS TOUR

New York, October 2.—C. C. Pyle, professional sports promoter, has made another sortie into the amateur tennis ranks, emerging this time with Howard Kinsey, Pacific coast star.

Kinsey's capitulation follows closely Pyle's acquisition of Vincent Richards, who incidentally, will be Kinsey's opponent when Pyle's professional tennis matches open at Madison Square garden next Saturday.

Kinsey accepted Pyle's terms today following a long distance telephone conversation between New York and Los Angeles.

Pyle also announced that Harvey Snodgrass, Los Angeles professional, also recently signed, would leave today for New York.

"There will be more famous players, one being of exceptional prominence, who will in the next few days, follow the lead of Mlle. Lenglen, Miss Mary Browne, Vincent Richards, Paul Feret, Harvey Snodgrass and Howard Kinsey," said Pyle today.

Miss Lenglen and Miss Browne will meet in a singles match next Saturday. The French tennis queen also will participate in a mixed doubles against another noted woman player and two of the male stars. Men's singles and doubles will also be on the card. Pyle will name his entire list of players Tuesday.

South Carolina Beats Maryland

Columbia, S. C., October 2.—(AP)—Led by their dashing quarterback, Bill Rogers, the University of South Carolina Gamecocks today defeated the old liners from the University of Maryland, 12 to 0.

Carolina scored a touchdown in the first period and again in the second, failing each time in the try for the extra point. Maryland held the Gamecocks scoreless for the last half but threatened in the final period until Bill Rogers intercepted an old line pass in the shadow of his goal posts, and dashed back to the center of the field.

Crimson Tide Turns Back Vanderbilt, 19-to-7 Score

MRS. STETSON WINS NATIONAL WOMEN'S GOLF TITLE

Veteran's Steadiness Features Victory Over New Jersey Star

Haverford, Pa., October 2.—(By the Associated Press.)—Mrs. G. Henry Stetson, of Philadelphia, veteran of twelve playing seasons and mother of a debutante daughter, today succeeded to the vacant golf throne of youthful Glenna Collett.

Standing off a brave rally by her opponent on the last nine holes, she defeated Mrs. Wright D. Goss, Jr., of Short Hills, N. J., in the final round of the women's national championship over the links of the Merion Cricket club, 3 up and 1 to play.

But her unexpected triumph, the climax of a tournament which had been rocked from the start by a series of startling upsets, Mrs. Stetson became the fifth matron to take up the sceptre in the 32 years' history of the event. Mrs. Goss had ruled a strong favorite on the basis of her fine medal scores in the previous match play rounds, but in the crucial test today her putter failed her, and Mrs. Stetson was required to play only safe, conservative golf to score her victory.

Mrs. Goss showed only brief flashes of her best form. Close to par figures in all her other matches after qualifying with an 85, the New Jersey player today never seemed sure of herself, playing the morning round in a ragged 92, which found her trailing by three holes at the intermission, a handicap she was never able to surmount.

Mrs. Stetson's victory completes an outdoor season which has few parallels for dramatic dethronement of champions and unexpected defeats for favorites. Although she held a high place among golfers in the Philadelphia district, the new champion was given scant consideration by critics in the pre-tournament forecasts. But while goltdom was listening for the knocks of a host of youthful contenders on the throne room door, a woman who had not been in the quest for six years came through one of the strongest fields that ever gathered for the event to snatch up the fallen mantle of the former Providence title-holder.

Defeat virtually came to Mrs. Goss in the morning round, when she took no less than 44 putts on the 18 greens. On six she required three strokes to hole out, while on a seventh she needed four. Later in the match she was able to bring the truant club under better control, but Mrs. Stetson, realizing that she needed only to save her comfortable lead, played safely and carefully through Merion's maze of traps to hold her margin to the end.

Over the first nine holes, Mrs. Goss left a trail of missed putts which should have given her many a win where she had to accept a half. She began on the first green with three putts to lose the hole after Mrs. Stetson had given her an opening, by topping her teen shot, and three putts almost became the rule rather than the exception thereafter.

One down at the start, when she would have been out in front with the sound golf she had hitherto played at Merion, the New Jersey player was able to draw even at the fifth after both had visited the brook on their drives to play the par five hole poorly in a six and seven.

Mrs. Goss dubbed two shots to lose the next hole, escaped with a half after taking four putts at the seventh and then wound up the upward nine with three more putts to lose the ninth and become one down. This lead Mrs. Goss never overcame during the remainder of the round, poor work on the greens costing her the tenth, twelfth and fifteenth holes. Mrs. Stetson, whose success lay in masterful use of her iron clubs, was content to be outdriven by from 10 to 30 yards on nearly every hole for she made up in accuracy and steadiness what she lacked in power off the tee.

Mrs. Goss went bravely forth to the afternon test, but the boldness of her stroking, frequently taking her into trouble, failed to break down the short, but safe game of the Philadelphia woman, who increased her advantage to five up at the twenty-eighth.

Here the New Jersey woman made her last stand, winning three of the next four holes. Then Mrs. Stetson took command again to close with a win on the thirtty-fifth green for her victory.

STAGGMEN'S DROP KICKS BEAT 'GATORS

Chicago, October 2.—(AP)—Two well placed drop kicks was the margain which the University of Chicago triumphed over a fighting football team from the University of Florida here today. The final score was 12 to 6.

Ideal weather brought out a crowd of 30,000 which was well repaid in excellent football. A long pass, Marks to Apitz, accounted for Chicago's touchdown which came early in the game.

Late in the first quarter Florida took the ball on her own 35-yard line and with puzzling overhead attack combined with steady thrusts at Chicago's line carried the ball to Chicago's 15-yard marker. Bishop made four yards around end and then plunged through the line for first down on Chicago's ten-yard line. Bishop again plunged through the line putting the ball within inches of the goal. Townsend went over for the touchdown a moment later. Stanley failed to kick the goal.

In the second period Chicago pushed the ball within striking distance of the Gator goal but the southerners stiffened and Rouz dropped back to kick on the fourth down. He sent the ball sailing through the goal posts for a three point advantage.

Florida received to open the third period, but failed to gain and Bishop punted deep into Chicago territory. Chicago returned the ball to midfield, and Florida opened up an aerial attack, with Bishop alternating his passes to Oosterhoudt and Stanley. Chicago held under her own goal posts and worked the tackles back to midfield. Stanley failed in a gallant drop kick effort from the 38-yard line, after taking a pass from Larson when Gators regained the ball. Captain Marks captured a 28-yard pass to Apitz, who was downed on Florida's 13-yard line as the period ended.

The score, Chicago, 9; Florida, 6.

Shortly after the final period opened Rouse added three points to the Chicago lead with a 17-yard dropkick. The southerners' attack was stemmed twice when passes went into Maroon hands. Chicago once pushed the Gator line against the goal, where Florida held and sent the ball back to see-saw in neutral territory until the game ended.

Final, Chicago, 12; Florida, 6.

WINS, LOSSES OF SENATORS PICTURESQUE

New York, October 2.—(AP)—The winning and losing fights of the picturesque Washington Senators in the world's championships of the past two years have taken place among the most spectacular of baseball's classic title battles.

In the brilliant background they have added to diamond history the tall figure of Walter Johnson, the Big Train, stands out, alternately tragic and heroic.

Johnson pulled the Senators to their first championship in 1924 against the New York Giants by holding the fort dramatically in the final game after being pounded into defeat in two previous starts. Against Pittsburgh's rampant Pirates last fall, the Big Train was invincible in his two games, permitting only one run in the 18 innings, but in the gloom and mud of Forbes field he was shelled into defeat as the Pirates came from behind to take the seventh and final game.

As spectacles of tense dramatic interest, of shifting tides of fortune, of sensational uphill struggles and heart-breaking setbacks for rival contestants, these two championship conflicts of the last two years stand at the top of the list. In Washington, there was a background of unprecedented fervor in 1924 for the first championship the capital city has ever gained while Pittsburgh burst into fanatical flame over its first triumph since 1909.

These two series, incidentally, were among only four which have gone the full limit of prescribed games, variously fixed at seven and nine contests. The others were in 1909 and 1912.

TECH TRACK PROSPECTS HELD BRIGHT

BY JULIEN SAKS.

Prospects are exceptionally bright this year in both track and cross country at Georgia Tech. Coach Barron expects to turn out a very strong cross country team and probably the strongest and best balanced track team that Tech has ever turned out.

The prospects for cross country are extremely bright with Captain Dick Fickett III, Tom Wright, Ed White, Julien Saks, Roy Brewer, Hayden Ross-Clunis, Arthur Solomon, J. F. Beall, L. Q. Head, Felix Camp, Ben Peacock, Bill Cabiniss, Hart, West, Boyd, Turner, Hunt and others returning to school. All of these men have had cross country experience.

Four of the members of the team consisting of Captain Lindsey Roberts, Tom Wright, Dick Fickett III, Charles Stebbins, Ed White and Julien Saks, which last year won the S. I. C. cross country championship, have returned. Lindsey Roberts and Charlie Stebbins, lost by graduation, will be sorely missed. But with such a large squad of experienced men there is much hot competition for places on the team and no one is sure of a berth.

The team will participate in the S. I. C. meet held this year in Athens November 20 and the S. E. A. A. U. meet in Birmingham December 12. Negotiations are under way for dual meets with the University of Georgia and North Carolina.

Tech's track team should be the best that Tech has ever had. The freshmen of last year and the returning varsity fit in together perfectly, making the team extremely well balanced. In practically every event there is at least one exceptionally good man. Captain Ernest Kontz, placed sixth in the national collegiate 440 last spring, running his quarter in 49 seconds. Hamm, in the hundred, is a 10-second man and broad jumps over 24 feet.

"Papa" Hood, who at present holds the Tech relay and S. E. A. A. U. shot put records, and "Big Nick" Nixon, former record holder, will be a hard pair to beat. Hood is also mighty good at heaving the discus. There are Stewart and Nash, a couple of last year's freshmen who are topping the pole vault at 12 feet. Perkins and Nash are clearing the high jump bar at 6 feet. Jimmy Boyd, last year's freshman hurdler, won the middle Atlantic district 120 high hurdle championship at the sesqui-centennial this past summer. Dick Fickett III holds the state meet two-mile record and Tom Wright should be running the mile in the neighborhood of 4:30 or under.

The line-up of the Tech track team will probably be as follows:

100-yard dash—Hamm, Schwalb, Strickland.

220-yard dash—Schwalb, Strickland, MacRay.

440-yard dash—Captain Kontz, Cabiniss, Beall, Bishop, Turner, Head, Espedahl.

880-yard run—Jamison, Saks, Anatassis.

Mile run—Wright, White, Stien, Camp, Solomon, Hart.

Two-mile run—Fickett, Brewer, Peacock, Ross-Clunis.

120-yard high hurdles—Brewer, L. Boyd, Roberts.

220-yard low hurdles—Sprick, Strickland.

Shot put—Hood, Nixon, Rauber.

Discus—Hood, Nixon, Rauber, Holman.

High jump—Perkins, Stewart.

Broad jump—Hamm, Strickland, Boyd.

Javelin—Holland, Randolph.

Pole vault—Nash, Stewart, DeJarnette.

1-mile relay—Kontz, Cabaniss, Saks, Beall, Bishop, Jamieson, Boyd, Strickland, Turner, Anatassis, Espedahl.

The Tech track schedule for next spring includes dual meets with the University of Georgia, Vanderbilt, Auburn, and North Carolina. A team will be entered in the Tech relays, southern conference, Penn relays, Millrose games, the S. E. A. A. U. at Birmingham, and the national collegiates at Chicago.

The Tech chapter National Collegiate Society of Spiked Shoe organized last fall will again be very active in track work. This is a national society organized in 1923 for the furtherment of the interests of track, and now consists of ten chapters, Alfred, Auburn, Columbia, Georgia Tech, New York university, Pittsburgh, Rutgers, Syracuse and Western Reserve.

The Tech chapter consists of Coach Harold Barron, Olympic hurdler and holder of four national hurdle championships, Richard Fickett III, president; Cliff Schwalb, vice president; Julien Saks, secretary treasurer; Louis Brewer, Hugh Connally, Cecil Jamieson, Rauber, Percy Perkins, Ed White and Strickland.

Members of the society are elected from those lettermen and numeralmen who have passed into their junior year, who are outstanding in track and have shown a major interest in it.

The Tech chapter has been very active, sponsoring a number of track affairs, among which was an interfraternity track meet that was highly successful. It was won by the A. T. O.'s after a close contest.

Coach Barron has offered to donate a trophy, the statue of a man at his mark waiting for the starter's gun, to the society to be given as a prize, awarded as the society sees fit.

Tech Squad Improved But More Strength Needed, Says Staton

BY JOHN STATON.

In the brief space of seven days, the Tech team has come a long way, but there is yet much ground to be covered before the Gold and White can achieve that high place so coveted by southern college teams.

They can now stand on this small pinnacle of victory and look back into the dark places from which they have come, and with a look of hope, cast forward and upward to that place to which they aspire.

The victory proves that Tech is a team with glowing possibilities. It further proves that Tech still has that spirit, most admired in sports, of fighting through a discouraging situation

There still remains, however, a rough road over which the team must travel. Certain ragged features of the play must be eliminated, weak spots in the offense and defense must be bolstered up. And, most important of all, Tech must not stop to rest on its laurels. In succession now, Tech must meet teams, her equals or superiors. There is no time for rest.

Made Many First Downs.

The most encouraging feature of the whole afternoon was the drive which resulted in Tech's second touchdown. For the first time this year, the boys were able to add up consecutive first downs until they stretched into a touchdown.

You will recall that in the Oglethorpe game, Tech was never able to rack up more than two straight first downs. That second score was the result of four consecutive first downs. The Tech boys lugged the ball 56 yards on this drive and never faltered in their steady march for the goal.

Sustained driving attack is one of the most desirable of all characteristics for a football team to possess. It is very nice to see your team alert enough to take advantage of a break and push about 20 yards for a touchdown, but it is absolutely delicious to see your team take the ball on its own 44-yard line, and keep driving and end running until the goal line is crossed.

One feature of Tech's play stood out like a sore thumb at a party. This was fumbling. All the Tech safety men were afflicted with it. Fortunately, Tech recovered all the balls fumbled. But several times the safety men were absolutely cut off from an attempt at returning the ball, merely because they were unable to hold it.

A Pretty Play.

One of the prettiest plays of the afternoonn came in the first part of the game when Carter Barron made a right end run On this play, Randolph knocked one of the oncoming V. M. I. tacklers clean off his feet and high into the air. It was the best single piece of interfering done during the afternoon. Finlay McCrea looked mighty good, too, when he cut down a couple of men shortly after coming into the game.

On the short end runs, the Tech interference was more thorough in taking out the opposing end, and as a consequence the end running was immeasurably improved. Burton made several nice gains by cutting in just off tackle, after the end had been taken out and the tackle boxed.

Tech was very weak defensively in the center of the line. V. M. I. found this soft spot, and gained most of her ground through the center position.

In two departments, V. M. I. excelled; passing and tackling. The Cadets threw eight passes during the afternoon. Four were completed for a net gain of 53 years. Two were grounded, one was intercepted by Smith, another by Holland. Fifty per cent is a mighty good average to maintain in forward passing

Tech Tried Only Two.

Tech tried two. One was grounded, the other intercepted.

The V. M. I. tackling was as good as has been shown on Grant field in many a year.

The Cadets simply didn't miss tackles. The tackling was fierce, low, and superbly deadly. Let a Cadet touch a Tech runner and that runner was down, with both of his knees clicked together and feet swept out from under him.

Tech was not so particularly off in tackling, V. M. I. was just well nigh perfect.

What of the future? It's hard to say. But if Tech improves this week as much as she did last week, then Tech will surely beat Tulane in spite of the fine showing made by Tulane against Missouri.

Auburn Beats Clemson By Score of 47 to 0

Auburn, Ala., October 2.—(Special.)—Auburn, displaying their wares before a large home-coming crowd here this afternoon, gave Clemson a 47-to-0 defeat. Coach Morey started the game with men made up from the third team and at the end of the initial period the game was a scoreless tie.

Shortly after the second period got under way second string men replaced those who started the game and the outcome of the game was never in doubt from then on. Following a 42-yard sprint around left end by Pat Moulton, Allen ripped right tackle for the initial touchdown.

Auburn Improved.

Auburn showed a marked improvement in every department of play over that of a week ago when it played Chattanooga. Interference aided the backs, linesmen charged harder and tackling was more effective. Buck Ellis was a thorn in the visitors' defense. The diminutive halfback was going around the Clemson ends for gains ranging from five to 25 yards, and through the line for gains that often gave Auburn the necessary yardage for first downs. Ellis also figured in Auburn's aerial attack, that played havoc with Clemson. Ellis was on the receiving end of four passes that netted Auburn 80 yards.

Mike Fisher, although seeing service in only one quarter, made the stands rise several times with sweeping end runs and a return of an intercepted pass 25 yards for a touchdown. Fisher also scored Auburn's last touchdown after Tuxworth had returned a punt 40 yards. Moulton, Allen and Nelson starred in the Tiger backfield. Wood and Scarbrough were the mainstays in the Auburn front bulwark, the former playing a wonderful defensive game.

Eskew Bore Burden

Eskew bore the burden of the Clemson offensive and was easily the outstanding player for the visitors. His punts went for a good average and his passes, though many incomplete, were accurate. Pressley, sophomore, playing center for Clemson, played a magnificent game at the pivot position, getting his passes back with ease and accuracy. His defensive work at center prevented Auburn from sending many rushes over his sector.

Clemson had many penalties imposed on them for incomplete passes, while Auburn was getting away for large gains with a well-timed aerial attack. Coach Morey has a quartet of pass flingers that will aid Auburn in the conference race. Moulton, Shotts, Allen and Fisher figured in Auburn's air attack this afternoon.

Auburn had several regulars on the bench with lime burns that will probably keep them out of the line for two more weeks.

Bobby Jones Loses To Gunn in Exhibit

Lexington, Ky., October 2.—(Special.)—Missing a two-foot putt on the 17th hole caused the downfall of Bobby Jones and his partner, Gayle Alexander, in the exhibition golf match today at the Ashland Golf club. Watts Gunn and Leonard Loos won the eighteen-hole and match, one up.

On the fatal seventeenth Jones had double bad luck. His approach shot, after striking near the pole bounced and rolled off the green into the rough. On the first nine holes, Jones and Alexander led one up, Jones with a medal score of 35, one stroke below par. Loos and Gunn were each par at 36, but Alexander made a 39.

On the tenth hole Gunn and Loos evened the match play when Watts Gunn sank a beautiful putt. On the thirteenth hole Loos shot a birdie to beat Jones' par three for the lead in the match play.

This lead was increased to two up at the seventeenth, where Jones missed the two-foot putt. On the last hole Jones and Alexander each shot four to beat Gunn and Loos, five to give the latter the narrow victory of one up.

On the second nine holes Jones shot a 36 medal score, bringing his total up to 71, par for the course. Gunn shot a 77; Loos, 78, and Alexander, 77.

Team Examined And Grid Captain Passes With 104

Milwaukee, Wis., October 2.—(Special.)—Marquette university professors report that a grade of 100 in an examination is possible, but extremely rare, whereas a mark of 104 is absolutely unique.

And yet Donald Craine, captain and center on the Marquette Golden Avalanche football squad for 1926, created consternation in Hilltop athletic circles by making a grade of "104 out of a possible 100" in an examination on football rules and their interpretation conducted by Coach Frank Murray.

It all happened when Line Coach Freeman Fitzgerald graded the papers. Seven lengthy questions had been asked, and Fitzgerald decided to mark 15 points for each answer, instead of troubling himself with 14 and a fraction. Seven times 15 makes 105, and Craine's paper was so nearly perfect that it totalled a grade of 104.

CITADEL WINS VICTORY OVER MERCER, 12-7

Macon, Ga., October 2.—(AP)—With Mercer leading, 7-to-6, and with three minutes of play left, Doyle, Citadel end, picked up a fumble by Mercer on Citadel's 20-yard line and ran 80 yards for a touchdown. The try for extra point was blocked by Butts, Mercer end, making the final score, Citadel, 12; Mercer, 7. The Charleston team had scored six points in the first half on two goals from the field by Weeks on drop kicks.

After scoring six points in the opening quarter on two field goals, the Bears and Cadets battled on even terms for three quarters. Late in the fourth quarter, with seven and one-half minutes left to play, Phoney Smith, star Mercer halfback, ran 75 yards through the Citadel team for a touchdown. Smith also kicked goal, making the score, Mercer 7; Citadel, 6.

A few minutes later Mercer, after kicking off, received the ball from Citadel on an intercepted pass by Hammack, Bear center. Mercer started a drive toward Citadel's goal and carried the ball to the Cadets' 15-yard line on a 25-yard run around right end by Phoney Smith. A pass, Skelton to Butts, netted 15 yards. Smith shot through tackle for five yards and first down. On the next play, however, Barnes of Mercer, fumbled going through the line and Doyle, picking up the ball, ran for a touchdown behind good interference.

PREP TEAMS FACE TOUGH FOES FRIDAY

BY BEN COTHRAN.

Each Atlanta prep grid team, with the exception of Decatur, still has a clean slate, but this week-end's games will most likely tell a different tale.

The schedule for Friday follows: U. S. B. versus Columbus, at Spiller's.

Tech High versus Central High, in Cattanooga.

Boys' High versus Marietta, at Marietta.

Decatur versus Rome High, at Rome.

G. M. A. versus Monroe A. & M., at Monroe.

University and Marist will be the only teams to stay at home, while the others travel to foreign fields. Marist has not yet scheduled a game for Friday, but Coach Bean announced Saturday night that he was negotiating with several schools and expected to close a deal this week.

The Bluebirds face a tough assignment in the Columbus Blue Devils Friday. Columbus has a good team, according to all reports and the Bluebirds will have to show a better offense than they did Saturday against the Petrel Frosh.

Tech High has another hard game when the Gold team journeys to Chattanooga. The Smithies defeated Chattanooga City High here Friday, and will attempt to repeat their victory next Friday.

Boys' High will face a hard scrap with Marietta, but in the Decatur game Friday Shorty Doyal's team showed its power on both offense and defense. Breezy Wynn is at the head of the van on offense, and a veteran line from end to end gives the Purple a strong defensive machine.

Coach Morrow will work his Cadets hard this week preparing for Red Barron's Monroe Aggies on Friday. The team showed plenty of strength against Covington last Friday, and the Cadets are looking forward to a big year. The game with Monroe will probably be one of the hardest on G. M. A.'s schedule.

Decatur will be hard at work all week preparing for Rome High. The suburban team has shown itself to be full of fight, and will give the Romans a hard battle.

When rain prevented the Athletics-Washington final games it assured the Mackmen at least $300 extra, as it gave them a cinch on third place, which otherwise would not have been certain, as, if the Senators had won both games, they would have had a chance of supplanting the A's for third place. The Mackmen now count on getting $600 a piece.

Both Teams Stage Gruelling Battle Before Large Crowd

Nashville, Tenn., October 2.—(By the Associated Press.)—Alabama's Crimson clad warriors today defeated the Vanderbilt Commodores, 19 to 7, before one of the greatest audiences ever gathered in Dudley field.

The 1925 champions, displaying a flashing attack and a defense that held at critical moments with scattering exceptions, outplayed the Commodores through the entire four periods of play. Vanderbilt at times exhibited a savage attack that produced threats only except on the one occasion when the Black and Gold crossed the Alabama goal line after two sensational forward passes and a line buck for three yards.

In the early minutes of the play, the Commodores seemed to be on the way for the first scoring of the game when a forward pass that netted a gain of fully 50 yards was thrown by Spears, playing at quarter, and brought the ball within striking distance of the goal. Vanderbilt lost about 10 yards on an attempted end run and elected to try for a drop-kick. Alabama blocked the try and recovered the ball on their 25-yard line.

The tide of the battle early turned toward Alabama. On the third play after Vanderbilt's first try for a point had been smothered, the Crimson-clad Brown, playing at fullback, streaked across the field for 58 yards, eluding Commodore tacklers handily until he was forced out of bounds on Vanderbilt's eight-yard line. Penalized five yards on the next play, Alabama worked the ball to the nine-yard line by a series of smashes and then a beautifully executed forward pass, Winslett to Caldwell, brought the first touchdown for the Crimson but they failed to kick goal.

With a lead of six points over the Commodores, Alabama broke up Vandy's attempted forward passes and end runs and finally got the ball on her own 49-yard line. A pass and two line bucks brought the ball within 23 yards of Vanderbilt's goal and Barnes, with perfect interference, ran this distance for the second touchdown of the game. Caldwell added the point and the quarter ended with the score: Alabama, 13; Vanderbilt, 0.

In the second quarter, there was no scoring, although Vandy tried desperately time after time, to rally an attack that would drive the Crimson Tide to ebbing. Substitutions were frequent as Coaches McGugin and Wade sought to find the vulnerable spot to plug the gaps. Early in the fourth quarter, Barnes, of Alabama, punted to Spears, who signaled for a fair catch. Then the Vanderbilt quarter carried the ball around right end, shaking off numerous tacklers for 30 yards. A beautiful forward pass netted 22 yards and another sensational toss was incomplete, but Vanderbilt was awarded the ball because of interference by Alabama. Hendrix, playing at fullback, bucked through the three yards for Vanderbilt's only touchdown and Spears kicked goal.

Alabama, the next time she got the ball, drove through to her third touchdown, by a series of drives against the Vanderbilt lines and a 20-yard forward pass to complete the scoring Caldwell failed to kick goal.

With the score 19 to 7, Vanderbilt made a desperate effort to perfect several forward passes but they were grounded, the game ending as Winslett, of Alabama, intercepted a long toss by Vanderbilt in midfield.

NAVY DEFEATS PURDUE, 17-13, IN CLOSE GAME

Annapolis, Md., October 2.—(AP)—By the margin of a field goal and an extra point after touchdown, both the footwork of Tom Hamilton, middy quarterback, the Navy turned back the powerful Purdue eleven of the Western conference here today 17-to-13.

Both teams pushed across a pair of touchdowns, the sailors scoring first when Hannegan raced 25 yards through center for six points. Hamilton annexed a seventh counter.

Purdue answered the middie challenge by opening the second period with a touchdown. A 22-yard forward pass, Leichtle to Wilcox, and then a 10-yard dash by the latter, netted the westerners their first score. The try for extra point failed.

Purdue took the ball from the Navy on downs after the middies had marched 60 yards to the two-yard line, but Hamilton led the advance again and scored by way of a drop kick.

Another forward pass for 37 yards, Wilcox to Hutton, gave Purdue the edge as the second half opened, but the Navy surged ahead again with another, Hamilton to Lloyd, for 40 yards and a score. Neither side scored in the final quarter.

Great Ovation Given French Net Aces on Return

Paris, October 2.—(AP)—Henri Cochet and Jean Borotra, conquerors of "Big Bill" Tilden and "Little Bill" Johnston in the singles of the American lawn tennis championships, received a great ovation on their arrival at the Saint Lazaire station from Havre this afternoon.

"Tilden was unlucky; watch him next year," Cochet told the newspapers.

"I was very lucky to beat Johnston," Borotra declared, adding:

"We had a remarkable trip. The Americans treated us fine, even when we defeated their champions."

Some disappointment was expressed by the crowd at the absence of Rene LaCoste. It was explained that the new holder of the American championship was driving from Havre in his motor car. He is to resume the uniform and duties of a private soldier in the French army Monday.

Captain Gillou, of the French Davis cup team, reiterated his intention to recommend to the French Tennis Federation that France compete in the American zone instead of the European zone in next year's play for the cup.

"What are the chances of your turning professional?" Borotra and Cochet were asked.

"Not one in the world," they responded in unison.

"Mr. Pyle (with whom Suzanne Lenglen signed her professional contract) is a very nice chap," volunteered Cochet. "I had lunch with him several times, but could not accept his offers."

Neither of the French stars would discuss the action of Vincent Richards, third ranking American player, in turning professional.

That Johnny Cooney, of the Braves, is likely to turn his talents to first basing instead of pitching considering what he has done for the Boston Braves this season. His fielding was a feature in the final games with the Phillies. John, should he switch, will then follow in the footsteps of Babe Ruth, who switched from pitcher to the outfield, with an occasional whirl at first base.

Notre Dame Wins Over Beloit, 77-0

South Bend, Ind., October 2.—(AP) Notre Dame romped over Beloit here this afternoon, 77-to-0. Coach Knute Rockne used 60 men during the play. It was the second largest score ever rolled up by Notre Dame in an opening game.

The Vikings held Notre Dame last season to a 19-to-3 score. Two touchdowns were made from the kickoff and the others were the result of long runs.

Yankees Take First Game of World Series, 2 to 1

Babe Ruth, Gehrig Star at Stickwork; Pennock Is Superb

characteristic batting explosions. Gehrig, however, was thrown out at third and Severeid hit into a forced-out after Lester Bell, Cardinal third sacker, had juggled Dugan's smash, failing either to make the throw to first or tag Lazzeri at the far corner.

The first Yankee run, in the opening inning, was a gift, for Sherdel, unable to control his slow ball, walked Combs, Ruth and Meusel to fill the bags with only one out. Combs crossed the plate on Gehrig's infield rap that forced Meusel at second base.

Sherdel settled down after this spasm and successfully checked the Yankees until the sixth although he was frequently on the border line of danger as the American leaguers got men as far as second base in the second and third innings. A snappy double play, engineered by Thevenow and Hornsby, checked off a Yankee spurt in the fifth.

Pennock meanwhile cast a spell over the Cardinal batters. His crossfire had the National leaguers' heavy artillery completely silenced from the second inning on until the ninth, when Bottomley gained his second hit of the game, a single to right that did no damage.

Big Guns Fail.

Such big guns as Rogers Hornsby, Bob O'Farrell and Lester Bell failed at any time to get the range of Pennock's slants. Hornsby, St. Louis leader, got the ball out of the infield only once in four attempts. Still visibly grief-stricken by the recent death of his mother, Hornsby gamely battled for every advantage but the zest and dash so characteristic of his individual play was missing.

Pennock had brilliant support, too, on the few occasions he needed it. The famous Yankee "kid" infield distinguished itself in every department of play. Mark Koenig, young shortstop, pulled the most dazzling fielding stunt of the game in the second inning when he raced back to bag Hafey's sharp hit and threw the runner out at first with a marvelous bullet-like throw.

"Columbia Low" Gehrig's bat struck the blows that resulted in both Yankee runs, while Tony Lazzeri, second baseman and third of the infield recruits, handled himself like a veteran.

Support Is Great.

Then again, when Herb Pennock, in his only wavering moment, issued two passes in the eighth, Earl Combs, fleet young Kentuckian, dashed in from center field to make a brilliant catch of a short fly by Holm, pinch hitting for Southworth.

Hornsby rushed reserves to the front in rapid fire order, but without avail, as he sought to take advantage of this eighth-inning opportunity. A pass to O'Farrell started the rally and a sacrifice bunt by Thevenow put the catcher on second base. Flowers, batting for Sherdel, hit to Pennock, and O'Farrell was run down between second and third. Douthit walked, but Combs' catch of Holm's blow ended the inning and blasted the last real Cardinal hope.

Outside of the first and eighth, the Cardinals got men on base in only two other innings. Bell walked but got no further than first base in the fourth inning, while Bottomley, singling with one out in the ninth, likewise was stranded.

FIRST INNING.

CARDINALS — Mayor Walker threw out the ball and the game was on. Pennock warmed up in the box while a flock of photographers were chased from the playing field. The crowd gave a great cheer as Babe Ruth and his mates trotted on the field. Douthit up, ball 1, high and wide. Strike 1, called. Ball 2, high. Foul, strike 2. Pennock was working his big curve. Foul. Douthit got a two-base hit into right. Douthit is ordinarily a left field hitter. Southworth up. Strike 1, called. Foul, strike 2. Southworth fouled the ball into the rightfield stands. Foul. Ball 1, outside. Lazzeri threw out Southworth at first, Douthit going to third.

Hornsby up. The crowd cheered the Cardinal leader. The Yankee infield came in on the grass. Foul, strike 1. Pennock threw out Hornsby at first and Douthit was held at third. Bottomley up. Ball 1, outside. Douthit scored on Bottomley's single just over Dugan's head.

Bell up: Strike 1, swung. Ball 1, it was a pitchout. Foul, strike 2. Bell drove a long foul into the left field stand. Ball 2, high. Ruth came in and took Bell's fly. One run, two hits, no errors.

YANKEES—Combs up: Ball 1, outside. Strike 1, called. Ball 2, low. Ball 3, inside and low. Combs got a base on balls, the fourth pitch being inside. Koenig up. Foul, strike 1. Foul, strike 2. Koenig tried to bunt but fouled the ball. Ball 1, outside. O'Farrell tried to pick Combs off first. Koenig flied out to Southworth. Ruth up. The crowd gave Ruth a big hand and the St. Louis outfielders backed out against the fences. Ball 1, inside. Sherdell fed Ruth a slow one. Ball 2, outside. Ball 3, low and inside. Ruth got a base on balls, and the crowd hooted Sherdel. Meusel up. Sherdel tried to pick Combs off second but Combs beat the throw to the bag. Ball 1, inside. Strike 1, swung. Ball 2, outside. Ball 3, high. Hornsby came in and talked to Sherdel. Meusel also walked and the bases were filled. Gehrig up. Strike 1, called. Ball 1, outside. Combs scored when Gehrig forced Meusel, Thevenow to Hornsby, Ruth going to third. Lazzeri up. Ball 1, low. Foul, strike 1, strike 2, called. Ball 2, outside. Ball 3, inside. Thevenow threw out Lazzeri at first. One run, no hits, no errors.

SECOND INNING.

CARDINALS — Sherdel worked nothing but a curve on the Yanks all during the first inning, but his control was bad. Hafey up. Foul, strike 1. Hafey tried to bunt. Ball 1, outside. Foul, strike 2. Koenig made a wonderful play on Hafey's seeming hit and, with a long throw, got him at first. O'Farrell up. Ball 1, low. Koenig also threw out O'Farrell, coming in fast to take O'Farrell's slow roller. Thevenow up. Strike 1, called. Strike 2, called. Pennock had his old drop hook working. Lazzeri took Thevenow's hopper and threw him out at first. No runs, no hits, no errors.

YANKEES—It was very gloomy, and hard to follow the course of the ball. Dugan up. Ball 1, outside. Strike 1, called. Foul, strike 2. Ball 2, low. Dugan shot a single into leftfield for the Yanks' first hit. Severed up. Strike 1, called. Severeid flied out to Hafey. Pennock up. Strike 1, called. Pennock sacrificed Sherdel taking his bunt and tagging him on the line. Combs up. Ball 1, outside. Ball 2, outside. Strike 1, called. Douthit took Combs' short fly. No runs, one hit, no errors.

THIRD INNING.

CARDINALS—Sherdel up. The Yankee outfield played a shallow outfield for Sherdel. Strike 1, swung. Strike 2, swung. Sherdel struck out on three pitched balls, swinging wildly for the third. Douthit up. Pennock took Douthit's bunt and with a fast throw nailed his man at first. Southworth up. Ball 1, high and inside. Southworth sent up a high foul to Severeid, who took the ball near the screen. No runs, no hits, no errors.

YANKEES—Koenig up. Koenig sent a sharp single to left. Ruth up. Ruth tried to sacrifice but forced Koenig, O'Farrell to Thevenow, Meusel up. Strike 1, called. Ball 1, outside. It was a pitchout but Ruth held first. Sherdel threw out Meusel at first, Ruth going to second. It was the hit and run play. Ruth slid into second and time was called until his wearing apparel could be mended. This gave the crowd a big laugh. Gehrig up. Strike 1, called. Strike 2, called. Sherdel fooled Gehrig on two wide curves. Ball 1, high, and inside. Sherdel tried to catch Ruth off second, but Ruth slid back to the bag safely. Hafey took Gehrig's towering fly. No runs, one hit, no errors.

FOURTH INNING.

CARDINALS—Hornsby up. And again he got a big hand. Koenig threw out the St. Louis manager at first. Bottomley up. Strike 1, swung. Foul, strike 2. Bottomley struck out on three pitched balls, letting a third strike sail over with his bat on his shoulder. Bell up. Ball 1, outside. Ball 2, inside. Foul, strike 1. Bell tried to hit a cripple but fouled the ball. Ball 3, outside. Bell got a walk. Hafey up. Koenig tossed out Hafey at first, Gehrig making a nice pickup of Koenig's low throw. No runs, no hits, no errors.

YANKEES—Lazzeri up. Strike 1, called. Foul, strike 2. Ball 1, low and outside. Lazzeri struck out, missing a curve by three feet. Dugan up. Ball 1, outside. Strike 1, called. Ball 2, low. Ball 3, outside. Thevenow threw out Dugan. Severeid up. Ball 1, low. Severeid sent a fly out to Hafey. No runs, no hits, no errors.

FIFTH INNING.

CARDINALS—So far the pitchers had the upperhand of the batters. O'Farrell up. Ball, inside. Foul, strike 1. Ball 2, outside. Meusel gathered in O'Farrell's hoist. Thevenow up. Foul, strike 1. Severeid took Thevenow's bunt and tossed him out at first. Sherdel up. Meusel took Sherdel's pop fly back of short. No runs, no hits, no errors.

YANKEES—Pennock up. Pennock got a hand. Strike one, called. Ball 1, outside. Thevenow juggled Pennock's grounder but threw him out. Combs up. Strike 1, called. Ball 1, outside and wild. Ball 2, low. Strike 2, called. Combs singled into left. Koenig up. Ball 1, outside. Strike 1, called. Koenig hit into a double play, Thevenow to Hornsby to Bottomley. No runs, one hit, no errors.

SIXTH INNING.

CARDINALS—Douthit up. Ball 1, low and outside. Joe Dugan took Douthit's grass cutter and threw him out. Southworth up. Ball 1, low and outside. Strike 1, called. Southworth flied out to Meusel. Hornsby up. Ball 1. Ball 2, inside. Strike 1, called. Ball 3, inside. Strike 2, called. Dugan made a nice play on Hornsby's difficult hopper and tossed him out. No runs, no hits, no errors.

YANKEES—Ruth up. Ruth singled past Bell, the Yankee hitter choking his bat. Meusel up. Meusel sacrificed, Sherdel to Bottomley, Ruth racing for second. Gehrig up. Ruth scored on Gehrig's sharp hit to right. Lazzeri up. Ball 1, outside. Lazzeri singled past Thevenow and when Gehrig tried for third he was thrown out, Hafey to Bell. Lazzeri went to second on the throw. Dugan up. Ball 1, high. Bell juggled Dugan's grounder, Lazerri sliding safely into third. It is now beginning to rain again. Severeid up. Strike 1, called. Ball 1, outside. Ball 2, outside. Severeid forced Dugan, Thevenow to Hornsby. One run, three hits, one error.

SEVENTH INNING.

CARDINALS—The crowd stood up and began rooting for the Cardinals. Bottomley up. Foul, strike 1. Bottomley went out to Gehrig, unassisted. Bell up. Ball 1, high. Bell sent up a foul which Severeid snared. Hafey up. Foul, strike 1. Foul, strike 2. Ball 1, high. Hafey struck out, swinging weakly on a low curve. Pennock was pitching magnificent ball, not a hit being made off him since the first inning when two were made. No runs, no hits, no errors.

YANKEES—Pennock up. Strike 1, called. Pennock went out, Thevenow to Bottomley, Combs up. Strike 1, called. Ball 1, low. Hornsby made a nice play on Combs' roller and tossed him out. Koenig up. Koenig shot a fly to Hafey. No runs, no hits, no errors.

EIGHTH INNING.

CARDINALS—O'Farrell up. Strike 1, called. Ball 1, inside. Strike 2, swung. Foul. Ball 2, outside. Ball 3, low. O'Farrell got a base on balls, the fourth ball being wide. Thevenow up. Foul, strike 1. Thevenow tried to sacrifice. Thevenow sacrificed, Dugan to Gehrig. Flowers batting for Sherdel. Flowers up. Strike 1, called. Pennock took Flowers' grounder and O'Farrell was run down, the play being Pennock to Koenig to Dugan. Flowers went to second on the play. Douthit up. Ball 1, outside. Ball 2, high. Ball 3, low. Douthit got a base on balls.

Holm batted for Southworth. Holm up. Ball 1, high. Foul, strike 1. Ball 2, high, and inside. Combs made a fine catch of Holm's short fly. No runs, no hits, no errors.

YANKEES—Ruth up. Ruth limped a little as he came to the plate. Meanwhile there was a delay as the St. Louis pitcher walked across the field from the bull pen. Haines now in the box for St. Louis. In the dark light Hornsby called upon a fast-ball pitcher. Haines warmed up a bit in the box. Ball 1, inside and low. Ball 2, outside. Strike 1, called. Ball 3, inside. Haines is using nothing but a slow ball. Bell threw out Ruth at first. Meusel up. Foul, strike 1. Ball 1, inside, Meusel had to step away from the ball. Ball 2, Meusel had to sidestep another one. Ball 3, inside. Strike 2, called. Meusel got a ticket to first. Gehrig up. Strike 1, called. Gehrig flied out to Hafey. Lazerri up. Ball 1, high. Haines tried to catch Meusel off first. Lazerri grounded out to Bottomley who touched him as he dashed to the bag. No runs, no hits, no errors.

NINTH INNING.

CARDINALS—Holm played right field for the Cardinals in the last inning. Hornsby up. Hornsby flied out to Combs. Bottomley up. Bottomley singled into right for his second hit. Bell up. Ball 1, outside. Foul, strike 1. Strike 2, swung. Foul. Ball 2, high, and inside. Bell fanned, swinging for a third strike. Hafey up. Ball 1, low. Lazerri took Hafey's weak roller and threw him out. No runs, one hit, no errors.

PILOTS IN BASEBALL'S PREMIERE

HORNSBY HUGGINS

The two great managers of the major league champions of this season, who are matching wits in the world's series in New York for the honors of baseball. Rogers Hornsby, pilot of the St. Louis Cardinals, who put his team on top of the league to win the pennant of the National league after getting away to a poor start, is shown on the left. Manager Miller Huggins, skipper of the Yanks, American league champions for the fourth time, is shown on the right.

Hundred Shooters Gather for Atlanta Gun Club Tourney

Monday morning a hundred of the best trapshooters in 13 southern states will begin shooting in the third annual Powwow of the Five Tribes of Southern Indians at the traps of the Atlanta Gun club. A liberal supply of sterling silver trophies are on hand to reward the efforts of the shooters with, and $2,000 in cash will be added to the event money. Most of the trophies are useful around the house, and they are all of the very highest quality.

The event money for the class championship, which comes on the first day, will be divided into six parts, and each class will shoot for an equal amount of wampum. This makes the contest more even, and rewards the shooters of lesser ability as well as the sharks. Cups will be given to the winners and runners up in each of the six classes. Money will be divided on the 4, 3, 2, 1 basis.

The Ansley hotel trophy will be given to the man making the highest aggregate score on all targets, and the other hotel trophies will be awarded as follows:

Atlanta Biltmore trophy, high on all doubles.

Winecoff hotel trophy, high on combined handicaps.

Henry Grady hotel trophy, high on all singles.

Robert Fulton hotel trophy, winner of Great Indian handicap.

The Ansley cup is the only one that has been won twice by any one man, and two men claim this distinction. Dr. N. H. Alford and Harold McKenzie, both of Atlanta, have this to their credit.

In all singles contests there will be 25 targets to the event, and in doubles they will alternate with 10 and 15 pair.

On Tuesday the annual meeting of the association will be held and officers for the next year and a place to hold the next shoot will be chosen. The present officers are Dr. N. H. Alford, Atlanta, high chief; vice high chiefs, J. H. Noel, of Nashville; U. R. Brooks, of Columbia; B. A. Schroeder, of Birmingham; D. H. McCullough, of Charlotte; T. J. Aycock, of Jacksonville; keeper, of the wampum, Hal Hentz, of Atlanta.

Some of the stars who will be here for the shoot are W. B. Arey, the North Carolina champion; W. R. Beckwith, of Tampa; Harry Johnson, of Haines City; Dr. T. K. Johnson, and L. S. Lossing, of Tallahassee; T. K. Lee, B. A. Schroeder, Joe Morgan and Person Moore, of Birmingham; T. R. Crovatt, of Thomasville, and Uncle Andy Hill, of Dawson, Ga., the biggest trapshooter in the world. He is an excellent shot, despite his advanced age and 350 pounds.

A fresh stock of powders and shells has been received and are on sale in the shell room for this tournament. They will be sold at $1 per box and targets will be thrown at three cents each. Shooting will begin at 9 o'clock every morning.

TENNESSEE U. EASILY BEATS TAR HEELS

Knoxville, Tenn., October 2.—(AP)—University of Tennessee started its Southern conference campaign by swamping North Carolina here today, 34 to 0.

The Tar Heels gave less resistance than the Carson-Newman gridders did the week before and Coach Neyland used his second string men throughout the second half.

The Notre Dame and the Army system met, with all the glory for the latter. Coach Chuck Collins, of Notre Dame, had instructed his men in the famous Notre Dame style of play, but it had not been sufficiently mastered and but for a few passes in the last half, their gains were negligible.

Used Deadly Attack.

On the other hand, Coaches Neyland, Parker and Britton, all West Point men, had trained their men for a style of play against which the North Carolinians were helpless.

Hardly had the game started before Jimmy Elmore, the flashy little halfback, sprinted around end for a 27-yard gain, a moment later, a pass, Harkness to Rice, netted the first counter.

Following on the heels of this, Elmore plunged over for a touchdown after the Tennessee backfield had taken the ball from the kickoff straight down the field on first downs.

Then Jimmy Elmore raced around end for 30 yards for the third counter in one quarter and the Vol coach began sending in substittues.

A fourth touchdown came in the second quarter and another in the fourth.

The St. Louis Cardinals have decided that field seats will not make up for the risk of possibly losing a world's series and consequently the fans will have several thousand fewer seats to scramble for. It was figured that there were too many in Yankees' "murderers' row" who might plaster the pill in the field seats.

ROSENBLOOM GETS BATTLE WITH FLOWERS

New York, October 2.—(AP)—Tiger Flowers, world's middleweight champion has been signed for a bout with Maxey Rosenbloom, of New York, at catch wights in Boston, October 12. Negotiations also are expected to be closed shortly for him to meet the welterweight champion, Pete Latzo, in a 12-round no decision match at Newark, N. J., October 21, in which Flowers could lose his title only on a foul or by a knockout.

A title contest between Flowers and K. O. Phil Kaplan, of New York, at Madison Square Garden, November 19, also is pending.

Babe's Bat Proves Fatal To Cardinals In Opening Struggle

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)
BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

New York, October 2.—The mighty bat of the magnetic Babe Ruth spoke only gently today. But it spoke effectively and when it did there was started on its way a run that gave New York's Yankees victory over the Cardinals in the inaugural clash of the world's series classic.

When nine rounds of tense struggling had been concluded, and when a vast turnout of 63,000 had relaxed, the American leaguers were in possession of a 2-to-1 triumph and the deceptive long arm of the aged Herb Pennock was rivaling the batting cunning of the man who was deemed a maker of home runs but who brought on the break of the struggle by shoving a single past third where he seldom hits.

Babe Comes Through.

It was that extraordinary hit, not a matter of luck, but of skill employed when Babe saw an opening that shifted the tide of atatck for the victors, but it was the painfully accurate hurling of Pennock that reduced the vaunted Cardinal sluggers to a state of helplessless. Three hits, one clean, was all they amassed.

This was a battle so stern and stiff that it seemed methodical. Bill Sherdel was almost as good as Pennock, but not quite. No home runs went humming beyond the wall to bring the multitude up a-roaring. Of startling stops there was only one. Even long flies dangerously close to the barriers were absent. And over this scene of relentless but calm struggling hung a gray, misty atmosphere that intensified the drabness of the spectacle. In the language of the players it was a day made for pitchers, not batters.

There was only one point along the nine-round route where there was a sign of the big scoring that had been promised by the free-hitting squads. That point was the initial inning. Luck was against the crafty Pennock and a couple of undramatic hits sent home what proved the only Cardinal tally. But luck reversed itself in the Yank half of the inning because Sherdel was nervous and wild. He fell into the traditional lefthander's trick by losing control. He walked three, gave the Yanks a run without a hit. From then on the battle progressed evenly and smoothly until Ruth came up in the sixth.

Everything Perfect.

If the inexperience that runs through the respective forces is to play an important part in the eventual outcome of the event, it has yet to make itself evident, at least so far as the Yanks are concerned. Today they were the personification of confidence behind their willowly southpaw pitcher. There wasn't so much as even a momentary fumble and Mark Koenig, the lad whose stamina was questioned, contributed the sole thriller. He made a beautiful stop and threw from deep short on Hafey in the second inning.

The Cards were not the same easy performers. The squeamishness of Sherdel at the outset was the first sign of mental irritation. To carry him safely through that first inning, to prevent his utter ruination right there, it was necessary for Manager Hornsby and the smiling Bob O'Farrell to talk to him between every other pitch. Another indication of weakness was Lester Bell at third. He fumbled a few but escaped with one error and he made a fatal mistake when he thought Ruth was going to bunt, rushed in and had the ball shoved past him.

The pitching of Pennock means that the world's series records must be revised to make room for another masterpiece. Two hits in the first inning and those the kind of fluke hits that are the most disconcerting. This inning gave him a bad start. But there was no hesitancy on his part thereafter except in the eighth inning when he deliberately pitched wide as a matter of strategy. In those few moments the game hung in the balance but he pulled over the treacherous spot and went his way with only a single in the ninth to delay him arriving at his goal.

Tight Pitching.

That belated single off the frail Yank portsider in the final frame was the first made by the Cardinals since the opening inning. It was a clean drive to right where Ruth was doing patrol duty and Jim Bottomley was the hitter. And this same single was one-half of the balls actually hit squarely by the National leaguers. The other half was the hard Hafey bounder on which the inexperienced Koenig made his great stop and throw in the second chapter. At other times the Cards hoisted easy chances into the air or tapped Pennock's slow curves and "downers" to machine-like infielders.

The pitching of Pennock removed all the drama from Rogers Hornsby's hitting. Probably borne down by the heart ache over a mother dead at Austin, Texas, the National league's great right-handed hitter didn't come close to anything. He was up in the first inning with a runner on third and pointed a feeble bounder at Pennock. In his next time up Koenig threw him out on an easy chance. Then in the sixth he was easy for Joe Dugan's throwing arm and he led off in the ninth with a fly that Combs smothered. Ruth also was there to take it but Combs waved him away.

The Babe himself, the man for whom 63,000 were waiting, wasn't much better than Hornsby but the difference was enough. Sherdel walked him in the first inning and it did not appear intentional. But the crowd came to life and booed. In the third he tried to sacrifice but his bunt accomplished only a force out. Then he showed himself baseball wise when he pushed that hit past third in the winning sixth and in the eighth when Jess Haines was pitching. Ruth tried the same trick again, but this time Bell pounced on the ball. He had learned his lesson and didn't run in.

Colonel Ruppert, of the Yankees, certainly has the laugh on his fellow magnates. When he built the Yankee stadium many thought he had a white elephant on his hands. If he had a park twice as large he would be unable to accept all the reservations for the world's series. Also the seating capacity will make it a free scramble for 38,000 seats which will be sold each day.

Howard College Trounces Oglethorpe by 23-0 Score

Bill Bancroft Stars As Howard Bulldogs Defeat Petrels, 23-0

BY ALTON REDFEARN.

Birmingham, Ala., October 2.—The Howard college Bulldogs soundly trounced the Stormy Petrels here Saturday in one of the season's greatest upsets, the score being 23 to 0. It was a clean-cut victory for Howard, yet the Petrels fought valiantly with dogged persistence throughout the contest, and on several occasions played brilliant football.

William Bancroft was the indomitable halfback who made the going rough for the Oglethorpe gridders. He ran with the ball when in open field like Everett Strupper, one of Georgia Tech's greatest backs. He passed and punted also better than the average backfield man. In fact, from all appearances Saturday he did everything one football player could do except catch his own passes. He did every bit of it and weighed only 138 pounds. pounds.

Petrels Flashed Form.

At times Oglethorpe showed signs of the brilliant football playing that carried them to victory over Georgia Tech in the initial contest of the season, but the Birds just could not get going; erratic football playing, no fight and Bancroft spelled defeat for last year's S. I. A. A. champions.

The game began with Howard kicking off to Oglethorpe over the goal line. It was the Petrels' ball on the 20-yard line.

Two attempts at the line failed to gain, and Campbell punted to Bancroft who returned for a 10-yard gain. Howard made a first down in three attempts, but had to kick on the next series of downs. At this stage of the game both teams were fighting hard, with Oglethorpe besting Howard in the exchange of punts, placing the oval deep in the Bulldog territory. Howard, however, was not to be outdone and began the contest with renewed vigor. The Bulldog backs negotiated two first downs, placing the ball on Oglethorpe's 50-yard line. Two attempts at the line gained five yards for Howard, and then on the third down with five to go for first down, Bancroft stepped back and threw a beautiful pass to Wilking, Bulldog right end, who raced the remaining distance for a touchdown. Bancroft drop-kicked the goal after touchdown. Score, Howard 7, Oglethorpe 0. The first period ended a few minutes later, neither team doing any further damage. The second stanza was a repetition of the first period, the Petrels fighting hard but could not get going.

Bell Works Hard.

Bell, the halfback who scored on Tech for Oglethorpe, was injected and he immediately made two first downs for Oglethorpe. The Birds apparently had found themselves, and were well on the way to the Howard goal. A pass from Garlington to Campbell, however, was intercepted by a Bulldog halfback who raced to the Stormy Petrels' 15-yard line. After three attempts to gain through the Oglethorpe line, Bancroft standing on the 25-yard marker, booted a perfect drop-kick. The score, Howard 10, Oglethorpe 0.

The third quarter found both teams battling furiously. Bell continued his brilliant running, making several nice runs for Oglethorpe. Bancroft for the first few minutes in this period was completely smothered. The Petrel forward wall stopped him without gain consistently. He was a hard man to hold, though, and he proved it when he darted off Oglethorpe's left tackle for 45 yards and a touchdown. It was a beautiful run. He side-stepped several would-be tacklers.

The goal was kicked after the touchdown, making the score: Howard, 17; Oglethorpe, 0.

The fourth period found the Bulldogs still plugging away at the Petrel line, Lollar, big fullback for Howard, doing most of the damage. Howard finally succeeded in placing the ball in the Petrel territory again, and once more the prodigious Bancroft rose to the occasion, and on a perfectly executed double pass he dodged and twisted his way for 15 yards for the final score of the day. He attempted to drop-kick the goal, but failed when the oval struck out of the uprights. The score: Howard, 23; Oglethorpe, 0.

Birds Were Game.

Things at this juncture were going back for Oglethorpe, but let it be said here the Bird's never gave up and they still fought on. Bob Shepherd, Ed Garlington and Lindsey Vaughn were plunging the line for nice gains. The final Petrel threat ended when Oglethorpe fumbled, and Howard was acclaimed the conquerors of Oglethorpe for the first time since the two schools began playing each other.

In the ground gained, excluding the runs of Bancroft, Oglethorpe was the equal of Howard. Howard negotiated nine first downs to the Stormy Petrels' eight. The punts from the shoes of Campbell and Bancroft traveled for the same distance. Without a doubt Bancroft spelled defeat for Oglethorpe.

The Bulldog line, however, was functioning perfectly, for it was its brilliant work that made the runs of Bancroft possible. On most occasions the Howard line outcharged the Oglethorpe line. The Oglethorpe line functioned far below its performance against Tech. The boys in the line were sluggish, only playing in spurts. At times Goldsmith, Carroll, Hardin and Cousins displayed excellent charging.

The Petrel backfield functioned well at times, too. Bell, Shepherd, Garlington and Vaughn were the best bets for the Petrels in this department.

three times and the last buck carried him across by inches. Smith then kicked goal.

V. M. I. threatened to score but once and though they worked a beautiful piece of strategy on this play the magic passing combination failed for once and the chance was gone.

They started with the ball on Tech's 47-yard line and here Gfroerer, the diminutive quarterback of the Cadets, proved himself as hard to stop as his name is to pronounce. The tiny field general started the drive by ripping off nine yards at right end after Walker had been held for no gain. Walker then drove across the line for one yard and first down. Gfroerer hit the line again for four yards and after Walker had failed at center the Cadet general heaved a pass to Moor which netted 13 yards. Moor made two yards at center and Gfroerer skirted left end for another first down. This brought the ball within Tech's 15-yard line and here Gfroerer made a play which seemed foolish, yet was not. It was third down with about nine yards to go and instead of using the other down on a line play as would be expected, Gfroerer pulled a surprise play by hooting a pass across the goal but the pass was none too accurate and it was incomplete. The great chance of the game for V. M. I. was lost, but that does not alter the fact that the strategy of throwing a pass on the third down nearly worked. The receiver of the pass was in a fine position to gather in the ball but the pass was not sufficiently accurate.

In conclusion it might be said that Tech certainly did show some definite improvement over the week before but must still improve as much more if she is to defend her goal against the attack of such teams as Georgia, Alabama, or even Tulane.

Bulldogs Beat Virginia, 27-7

attack in the fourth quarter. Blackshear Smith, giant Georgia center, intercepted one of them and ran 10 yards to Virginia's 45-yard line before he was brought down, then Georgia started after its final touchdown.

Morton hit right tackle for 1 and skirted right end for 8 more. McCrary went through the line for 5 yards and first down, and Sherlock skirted left end for 18 yards and still another first down 11 yards from Virginia's goal. On the next play Captain Morton, with Johnson getting the Cavaliers' out of his way dashed around right end for the needed distance. Johnson failed to kick goal. That's the story of the scoring.

The Virginias took a man-sized licking like men. They were not to be compared in skill with the Bulldogs, but their eternal fighting spirit, for which their teams are noted, kept the game from being lobsided and uninteresting.

Virginia presented a well drilled line, sadly lacking in weight when contrasted with the magnificent specimens from the Empire State who opposed them, but making up in good old-fashioned fighting what they missed in heft.

The power of the Georgia forwards was put to a severe test by the splendid work of the Virginia linesmen. They were beaten down in the long run, but it was not until after they had given the Bulldogs a battle they will remember for some time to come.

The brawn behind the lash as it is applied by Georgia was felt last week by Mercer; it was Virginia's time today, and if the eastern Bulldog isn't as careful as a man who is fooling with dynamite, Yale is going to feel it when Georgia visits the bowl a week from today.

Georgia's margin, wide as it was, should have been wider this afternoon. Three touchdowns do not measure the difference between the strength of the two teams. Time after time penalties knocked away the Red and Black from splendid chances to score, and in addition opened an inviting thoroughfare upon which the Virginians smashed to the first touchdown that has been scored against Georgia this season.

Georgia lost a grand total of 130 yards through penalty, while Virginia was taxed but 30 yards. The Bulldogs were all deserved, too, for their anxiety to tear into the opposing line sent them over many times before the ball was snapped and ruined a number of promising opportunities.

Georgia performed just as expected with the exception of the horrible toll exacted through penalties. The plays were run off with the precision of clockwork, rough spots on offense and defense were few and far between and those who are interested in Georgia's record this season may have every reason to be very proud of the work that has been accomplished by Coach George Woodruff and his associates.

Georgia showed a few great ground-gaining plays today, some of them constructed for especial use against the Virginians. The plays were well masked and the forward passes carried every element of deception.

An idea of the staunch defense thrown out by the Georgians is given on the fact that Virginia, possessing such sterling backfield men as Johnny Hushion and Quintus Hutter, was held to less than 100 yards of ground gained. The figures show five Cavaliers netted 108 yards from scrimmage, but 13 yards were awarded when a forward pass was ruled completed.

Virginia, introducing a number of tricky plays, which made the Georgians stay on their toes throughout the game, earned only four first downs while an equal number were donated through Georgia's penalties. Georgia gained 311 yards from scrimmage, which netted 15 first down, all well-earned affairs, and scored in the face of a heavy rain. The Bulldogs gained approximately one-third of their territory through the air, but their principal gains resulted from mad plunges through the Virginia line and wide sweeping runs around the flanks.

Noted principally for the flashy offense they have displayed in recent years, this writer is firm in the belief that the outstanding performance against the Virginians came in the splendid work of the Georgia forwards. From end to end the line impressed me as being the very best the Bulldogs have had since the days of old when line play brought the triumphs Georgia achieved.

Luckie, all-conference tackle last year, is better than ever this season. Virginia tried his side of the line in the early stages of the encounter but soon gave up the ghost. Luckie smeared plays right and left, breaking through time after time to down runners for big losses.

Shivar and Nash, Bulldog flankmen, were models at their positions, and Smith, center, gives every promise of being one of the south's best prospects at the pivotal position this season.

Boland, Georgia fullback, played one of the finest games of an honorable career. With Sherlock and Morton he shared honors in ground-gaining for the Bulldogs, and has apparently struck a stride which will make him a most important factor in Georgia's grid prospects.

Captain Mackall, at guard; Cardwell, at tackle, and Friedburg, right end, were Virginia's outstanding players in the line. Hushion gained most of the ground for the Virginians, but Fullback Hunter was contributing his share until he was forced out early in the third quarter.

Johnson, Georgia quarterback, displayed splendid judgment through every minute of the game. He was cool throughout the proceedings, and selected plays wisely in every tight place. He will be very valuable to the Bulldogs this year.

As is customary, Coach Woodruff called upon a large number of players to take part in defeating Virginia. Among the backfield men sent into action, in addition to Johnson, Morton, Sherlock and Boland, who started, we find Hatcher, Estes, McCrary, Hooks, Fleming, Broadnax and Dudley.

Bobby Hooks, the Americus youngster who showed such splendid form last Saturday against Mercer, entered the fray in the final quarter and handled the ball three times. His first effort was at the throwing end of a forward pass which netted 10 yards; given the ball a second time he swept around right end for 23 yards, and on his third effort made 2 yards through left tackle. Fleming impressed the fans as being one of the fastest halfbacks in southern football, and in the few times he handled the ball today this young gentleman never failed to record a gain.

Three Trojan Grid Games May Draw Near 200,000

Three games alone on the 1926 gridiron schedule of the University of Southern California are expected to draw a total of more than 200,000 fans. The first will be the California-Southern California game at Berkeley, on October 23, and should be viewed by 60,000. A week later Stanford plays the Trojans at Palo Alto. Seventy-five thousand at least will see this game, it is estimated. On December 4, Southern California should attract between 70,000 and 80,000 at the game with Notre Dame.

Minnesota Wins OverNorthDakota

Minneapolis, October 2.—(AP)—Minnesota celebrated the opening of the 1926 football season by smashing and passing its way to an easy 51 to 0 victory over the University of North Dakota in the memorial stadium today before a record opening day crowd of 25,000 fans. The Gophers used straight line plays for the most part behind the line smashing of Herb Joesting, veteran fullback, who piledrived his way through the Nodaktas for three touchdowns. Bob Peplaw, speeding halfback, totaled two touchdowns in addition to booting a beautiful drop kick from the 30-yard line in the second quarter and successfully completing four goals after touchdowns.

PRO VS COLLEGIATE

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

There will be so much professional football this year that it's said the supremacy of the college sport will be challenged.

Nothing in it. The college games draw their own crowds, and will as long as football is played. People may go to see a fight because it is a thrilling spectacle, because there's fun in making a little bet on it, because everybody else goes, because the newspapers print pages about it for a month before hand. A championship fight can draw over a hundred thousand spectators from all over the world. But people aren't going to travel a thousand miles to see one of many professional football games, as they'd travel to see a fight.

Professional football isn't baseball, a game that can be played every day in the week without wearing out a team. The games are bound to lag and lack excitement, and there never will be the clean-cut rivalry of college teams. A college player thinks nothing of a leg or a collar bone. Professional players won't risk injuries in reckless and spectacular play. Everything will run smoothly and scientifically, and when a game is too smooth and scientific it loses its thrill. The colleges won't have to close their stadiums just yet.

least, the loss of time on these misplays cost many yards on returns.

For the first time this year the Tornado players really appeared to be on speaking terms with each other when signals were called. Against Oglethorpe there was never a combination in the field which could run more than one or two plays without some evidence of a loose cog in the machinery becoming apparent. Saturday Tech ran a series of plays for four first downs without a hitch in the machinery.

One brilliant spot in the game was the work of Randolph in blocking a V. M. I. end when Barron was circling that extremity. He clipped perfectly and never was a better example of valuable blocking. His work added fully 10 yards to Barron's run. The other Techsters would do well to take an object lesson from that play.

Another Star Rises.

Saturday was not without its upsets in all sections. The greatest surprise, perhaps, was the fall of Oglethorpe before Howard. All the dopesters, large and small, had predicted an easy victory for the Petrels after their defeat of Tech last Saturday. The outcome of that game at Birmingham can mean but one thing—the Petrels pointed to the Tech game and they burned the candle at both ends to bring forth that glorious victory with the result that they had no reserve for Howard.

Judging from the report of the Howard-Oglethorpe game there is one youth who is destined to make his mark in large letters in the S. I. A. A. records this year. Billy Bancroft, 138-pound quarterback of the Howard outfit, sang a solo of the famous defeat song to the Petrels Saturday. Billy made 17 of Howard's 23 points and gained 206 yards of the 320 total logged by his team. As Alton Redfern, our correspondent, expressed it, Billy did everything but receive his own passes.

Mercer was defeated by the Citadel in another upset of the S. I. A. A. circuit, though the outcome of this game was not so definitely predicted as was the Birmingham encounter.

"Bo" McMillin, erstwhile star of the tiny Centre college team which invaded the "big three" with dire results not so many years ago, is now coaching the Geneva eleven and that "unknown" school sprang suddenly into the limelight Saturday when they defeated Harvard by a score of 16 to 7.

These are a few of the upsets in the grid schedule which came to light on Saturday. Now if Georgia could go northward and trounce Yale—well this is a good year for Georgia to start that kind of thing.

Tulane and Missouri Battle To 0-to-0 Tie

Memorial Stadium, Columbia, Mo., October 2.—(By the Associated Press.)—Battling Tulane university to a scoreless tie, the Missouri Tigers formally opened their new memorial stadium here today on a field ankle deep with mud.

Neither team threatened to score until late in the fourth quarter when Tulane, by a series of line plunges and a long punt by Morgan, forced the Tigers back to their own 10-yard line. The Missouri line held fast, however, and the Green Wave's hope of crossing the Bengal goal line was blighted.

Punting by both teams featured the classic with Tulane holding the advantage in yardage gained. Missouri had 12 punts for a 32-yard average and Tulane 10 for a 38-yard average.

Three passes for the Tigers were incomplete, while Tulane completed two of their five attempts for 10-yard gains.

Scrimmage plays by the Tigers netted them a total of 135 yards while Tulane gained 117 yards.

A crowd of about 10,000 spectators witnessed the game. Rain which began falling heavily two hours before the starting whistle, prevented a record attendance.

Missouri started the game sensationally by crowding the Green Wave down the field with a series of line bucks and end runs.

The Tulane line tightened, however, and the Tiger offense was checked. Flamank, Clark, Stuber and O'Sullivan featured in carrying the ball for Missouri in the early part of the game.

Menville, Browne, Morgan and Seeuws were the outstanding players in the Green Wave with Morgan's punting bordering on the sensational.

Twice during the last half of the game he kicked 50 yards over Missouri's goal line.

Prior to the starting whistle ceremonies attending the formal opening of the stadium were held amid a downpour of rain. The cadet band of the University of Missouri struck up the national anthem as the Stars and Stripes were raised on a flagpole at the southern end of the mammoth concrete bowl. An artillery detachment of the reserve officers' training corps fired a 21-gun salute and the teams flashed onto the field for the battle.

Ohio State Beats Wittenberg, 40-14

Columbus, Ohio, October 2.—(AP)—Ohio State defeated Wittenberg today, 40 to 14, in the opening football game of the season in the Ohio stadium before 23,000 fans. The Wilcemen developed a powerful attack in the first half and a second team took the field. Wittenberg scored twice in the last quarter and the Ohio State first team was returned to face the onslaught. Maurer, Wittenberg fullback, made the feature run of the game, a dash of 62 yards for a touchdown.

TUSKEGEE WINS OPENING GAME BY 24-3 SCORE

Tuskegee, Ala., October 2.—(Special.)—Tuskegee got away to a brilliant start here today, in the opening game of the season, when the twice southern colored champions defeated Knoxville college, 24 to 3. As soon as the visitors were able to shake off their very evident nervous strain, they upset all pre-game predictions by their marvelous playing and successful ground-gaining ability.

Knoxville was able, again and again, to open up wide holes in the Crimson forward wall, and snag the Tuskegee back in their tracks, but could not do anything on offense.

Tuskegee's only showing in the first quarter was a touchdown by the shifty Stephenson, made six minutes after the game began. He added the extra point by a place kick.

In the third quarter Knoxville worked the ball to Tuskegee's one-yard line, but was not able to carry the ball over when the Tuskegee line tightened up.

Contos Adds Another Big Bout to Mat Show

Another link in the all-star chain of wrestling at the auditorium Wednesday, October 13, was forged Saturday by Promoter Contos when he announced that George Kotsonaros, 195-pound Texan of Greek nationality and rival of Douglas Fairbanks and Thomas Meighan and other movie stars, has signed his contract for a match with Charles Rentrop, Little Rock veteran.

This heavyweight pair gives Contos two bouts already arranged, the other involving Dick Daviscourt, the two-fisted Californian, and Tony Divitchi, of Philadelphia, who accepted terms Friday.

One more big bout between heavyweights and the promoter will have the stage set, all save for possibly one smaller preliminary to serve as an appetizer.

An All-Star Show.

Contos makes it quite clear that this is an all-star show and that neither of the above events is listed in the main slot as yet. After completing arrangements for the three big battles he intends to burn the midnight mazda in an effort to arrive at a conclusion as to which of them to give the star's dressing room.

It is a very alluring and wholesome program with which the Hellenic promoter will resume his wrestling operations here. During his previous stay he left nothing undone in his efforts to give Atlanta the best the mat world could afford, bringing in such high-powered entertainers as Jimmy Londos, Joe Stecher, Stanislaus Zbyszko, Dick Daviscourt, The Masked Marvel, Dan Koloff, John Paxos and a dozen other well-known athletes. And this season, he promises, will be bigger and better than ever.

Championship Matches.

Starting with an all-star show, he hopes to expand his activities from week to week and bring the winter season to a close with a couple of high-class championship events to top off the most pretentious wrestling schedule ever arranged for any southern city.

Men who will be available this winter are those same sterling performers, Stecher, Londos and Zbyszko, and there will be added Strangler Lewis, Wayne Munn and probably Ivan Poddubbny. Besides, he plans a boxing contest featuring Monte Munn, brother of the wrestler who has been battering his way through the heavyweight ranks around New York.

In signing Kotsonaros and Rentrop and Daviscourt and Divitchi, Contos has already assured the fans of a sparkling, bitterly contested series of events on the 13th. Daviscourt and Rentrop are well known here as conscientious, clever wrestlers, while Contos declares that there are no two more promising young grapplers to be found than Kotsonaros and Divitchi.

U.S.B. Bluebirds Beat Oglethorpe Rats, 13-0

A fast running, hard hitting halfback, by the name of John Carey Hungsinger, paved the way to a victory over the Petrel freshman by the University school at Spiller's Saturday morning, 13 to 0.

Hungsinger scored both of the U. S. B. touchdowns, kicked a point after goal, was usually mixed up in every tackle, and made himself useful generally.

University displayed its ability as a defensive team, but was woefully weak on the offense. The first touchdown resulted from a blocked kick, when Hungsinger picked up the ball and raced 85 yards to a touchdown, in the first quarter. The second touchdown came near the close of the game, when Oglethorpe fumbled on its own 20-yard line and straight bucks by Hungsinger carried the ball over.

Made Poor Showing.

The freshmen played a very poor game, and made many costly fumbles. Their gaining was spasmodic, and they never threatened the Bluebirds' goal line, except one occasion when the frosh attempted a drop-kick from the 15-yard line, that was blocked by Hungsinger and carried to a touchdown.

Pup Phillips has taught his boys how to tackle and tackle hard, as was demonstrated Saturday. Hungsinger broke through time after time, and nailed freshman backs before they could reach the line of scrimmage. "Pea" Greene and "Becky" Speaks played a good game in the line for the winners.

Pup Phillips expressed himself as well pleased with the defensive game that his boys put up, and stated that they would be worked hard on offense throughout the coming week.

ESSENCE OF CONFIDENCE IS MAGIC IN PRIZE RING

Old-Time Trainer Exponent of Applied Psychology

BY C. F. THOMPSON.

The old-timers who have followed the prize-ring since it was the staid, if somewhat rough, boxing game through the years that witnessed its transformation into the highly specialized and remunerative pied-ear industry may gaze with amazed askance at a world's champion who designates adam-apple with the eruditely Grecian word, Oesophagus—or calls a skirt-shy male a misogynist, but they have yet something to learn.

In Atlanta there lives a promoter, manager, trainer, Captain Billy Lotz by name, who is as great a student of applied psychology as any man that ever seconded a leather-pusher.

Now Captain Billy wouldn't call it applied psychology. Captain Billy hails from a school that antedates what the moderns call psychology by a long shot. But sometime, somewhere, he learned that if a trainer played strongly on the imagination of the trainee, he could convince said trainee of most anything that was sanely practical, providing of course that it was his object.

Probably his biggest stock in trade is his "Essence of Confidence." Though it may be stretching possibilities a bit to say that if Captain Billy had personally administered a few drops of his prize essence to the dethroned king of fistiana at the end of the first round there would have been a different story emanating from the press gallery on that historic night at the sesqui-centennial exposition not long past, it is not altogether impossible.

"Essence of Confidence" is guaranteed by Captain Billy to make the most badly whipped fist-flinger imaginable wade right back into his opponent with all of the pep-potash and passion of the Jack Dempsey who vanquished Luis Firpo. Provided Captain Billy administers the potion.

"Essence of Confidence" is a simple formula. A teaspoon of alcohol together with a teaspoon each of two patent medicines, it doesn't make much difference which two are used as long as their virtue lies in alcoholic percentage, thrown in a pint of water and presto, you have made "Essence of Confidence." It is Captain Billy's formula and he vouches for its effectiveness.

Now for the line he hands the bruised bruiser panting in a corner between rounds while a few swallows of the formula trickles belly-ward. "Go out there and sock him before he gets set. Get a couple of good rights" or lefts as the case may be, "in before he knows what it's all about and the fight's yours. But you gotta keep fighting. Here, take a couple swallows o' this (confidence) then you won't be able to feel his punches. They can't hurt you when you drink this stuff."

Nine times out of ten, the beaten bruiser becomes the beating bruiser and all on account of what? "Essence of Confidence," quite obviously.

But Captain Billy's ring generalship extends beyond his favorite essence. If you don't believe that he is a past master at this here psychology game ask any of the boys how he handles a pair of deuces in peep-poker setto.

Another example. When Chick Miller fought Hollis Sullivan in Atlanta not so long ago, Chick put up such a good fight that the decision was awfully close. Hollis Sullivan was in top form, and had the best of the fight from the go, but the sports writers all said next morning that Sullivan wasn't in such fine shape. Here's what happened.

Chick piled off an empty chair of a "rattler" about five hours before the fight altogether unconscious that he was going to fight Hollis Sullivan that night. Sullivan was originally billed to trade clouts with some bozo whose name has momentarily slipped, and at the last minute something or other made it imperative that a substitute be found to meet Sullivan. The promoter found Miller and engaged him for the bout.

Meanwhile, Miller had proceeded to stuff his insides after the manner of most any hungry man and he went into the ring

Outcome of World's Series Will Depend on Pitchers

Huggins Strengthens Yanks With Shocker And Dutch Ruether

The outcome of a world's series depends in a large measure upon the pitching which marks the event. It has long been agreed that pitching constitutes about 75 per cent of the battle. If the box work is wobbly or off color, the team behind it, as a rule, must suffer accordingly. Just what the man does on that little strip of rubber in the center of the diamond, creates the opportunities to win or lose, especially when the score is close and the situations are tense.

The Yankees' bats have been the big noise in their pennant drive this summer. This fact makes their pitching secondary, and therefore an exception to the rule that cites hurling as the dominant factor of a ball game. When the Yankees piled up their successive flags in '21, '22 and '23, the club boasted of such stars as Mays, Hoyt, Bush, Shawkey, Pennock and Jones, but time has changed that order. Mays and Bush are missing, and several new faces have been added to the picture.

After part of his star corps displayed unmistakable signs of deteriorating, Miller Huggins sanctioned the deal that brought Shocker to the Yankees. With this sterling slant slinger in the fold, Huggins believed he had a chance to top the league in 1925. The dream of the mite manager, however, became a reality this year, which has found Shocker dividing the honors with Pennock in keeping the Yanks in the coveted spot.

Huggins made his last move in preparation for the coming series when he added Dutch Reuther to his pitching parcel. Ruether left Washington with a record of 13 wins and five or six losses. A four-hit game against the Athletics marked his debut in a Yankee uniform, and his form to date tabs him as one of the best southpaws in the business.

At this stage, the Yankees' best prospects appear to be Pennock, Shocker and Reuther, with Hoyt, a right-hander, in the background, ready to shoulder the burden as a starter or a finisher. This makes it almost certain that the National league champions must face plenty of southpaw pitching in the coming series. Braxton is also a lefthander who may have an opportunity to show his wares if Pennock and Ruether get off in the right direction.

Jones, Shawkey and Thomas are the righthanders who seem booked to fill relief roles, and will only be selected to go the route in case the cream of the staff finds the going too stormy. Young Beall's chance to step on the rubber can arise only through the failure of his stellar mates to keep the ash-attack at a low figure. Such emergencies have happened in the big tussle before. "Babe" Adams was tossed into the breach against the Detroit Tigers in 1909, when the veteran Pirate pitchers broke under the strain. Adams, by winning three games, virtually copped the series single handed.

A pennant winner usually sports the better pitching staff, but that does not hold good in regard to the Yankees, or the champions of the elder loop. Cincinnati easily dominated in hurling class and strength early in the season, but reverses suffered by Luque and Donohue transferred the honors to the Cubs and Dodgers. Hank O'Day, the National league umpire, told me the other day that the Cubs' pitchers showed surprising improvement after the season was half spent. The Cleveland curvers are rated highest in the American league. Still, any club with a quartet composed of Pennock, Ruether, Shocker and Hoyt, loom up as powerful factors in a short series.

New York, October 2.—(AP)—The five-star pitching staff, that carried the New York Yankees to victory in 1921, '22 and '23 has undergone several changes since the American league last faced the National league opponents in a world's series. The New Yorkers will place their main dependence in the seven-game series on Herb Pennock and Urban Shocker, aided by Waite Hoyt and Dutch Ruether. Bob Shawkey and Sam Jones will probably share the relief work.

Pennock is generally conceded to be the best left-hander in the big leagues today. With over 20 victories to his credit the slender slinger of the Yanks has rounded out his best year in baseball. His control has been uncanny and he has pitched several games without giving a base on balls, something rare for a southpaw. Pennock employs a spinning curve that breaks down and in to right-hand batters and keeps them popping the ball in the air. He requires at least four days of rest between games and will doubtless face the National leaguers in the first game. He beat the New York Giants two games in the world's series of 1923.

Shocker came to New York from the St. Louis Browns in a trade for Joe Bush. Shocker showed little last year because of illness but this season found him again the cunning spitballer that made him so feared when with St. Louis. Shocker is a right-hander and will doubtless be selected to pitch the second game of the series. He has won about a score of games this year. He has never been in a world's series.

Waite Hoyt started the season in a blaze of glory but an injured elbow threw him back and it was not until this month that he flashed his early season's form. Hoyt has been through the world's series fire in the campaigns of 1921-22-23. His best record was in 1921 when he faced the New York Giants in three games and held them to two runs in 27 innings of play. A bad error let in one run. He lost his only game when his mates failed to score a run, the contest going to the Giants, 1 to 0.

Dutch Ruether came to the Yanks from Washington by the waiver route the latter part of this season. His winning record was good with the Senators but there was a belief that he had reached the end of his effectiveness. Joining the Yankees Ruether pitched several good games and Huggins hopes to use him in the series. Last year he was not started against the Pittsburgh Pirates in the world's series either because of lack of training condition or the accepted belief that the Pirates were poison to left-handers. Ruether pitched for Cincinnati in two games of the 1919 world's series, winning one and losing the other.

Sam Jones has been through the world's series mill. In 1918 he pitched the fifth game for the Boston Americans against the Chicago Nationals and was beaten, 3 to 0. Jones only appeared for a couple of innings in two games of the world series of 1922 when he pitched for the Yankees against the Giants but in the following year he faced the Giants in the October fray and lost a well pitched game, 1 to 0. Jones held the Giants to four hits but Casey Stengel's home run beat him. In the final year Jones pitched the last two innings but the victory of the Yankees was credited to Pennock.

Seen on the Streets of Atlanta the Past Week

At the wheel of this 1903 model Reo sport touring is C. E. Eldridge, assistant sales manager for the Reo Motor Car company, who was the guest the past week of Reo's distributor here, the Reo Atlanta Motors, Inc. Upon his arrival Mr. Eldridge was introduced to the ancient but still good Reo and nothing would do but for him to arrange a sightseeing tour in this car. Shown above is his party on this occasion, at the wheel Mr. Eldridge; front seat, C. O. Caniff, Reo factory representative; rumbler seat, the gentleman in the grey suit, E. Russell Baldridge, secretary and treasurer of the Reo Atlanta Motors, Inc.; at his right is C. D. Taylor, vice president and general manager for the same concern. At the conclusion of their tour Mr. Eldridge stated that this is probably one of the oldest cars still in service in America, and was very enthusiastic over its performance.

RUTH, UHLE AND SHAUTE CUT WEIGHTS

BY GEORGE MORIARITY.

Reduction of weight has played a vital part in comebacks that are being waged by several star ball players this season. The most noteworthy case, of course, is the one that has enabled Babe Ruth to pound out home runs in the style which made him the greatest gate attraction in the history of the game.

Next in prominence come three pitchers, George Uhle and Joe Shaute, of the Cleveland Indians; Waite Hoyt, of the Yankees. Previously each of these men was rated as a stellar light in the box. The most noticeable change came last year when Uhle, Shaute and Hoyt were found among the steady losers throughout the campaign.

Apparently, these pitchers were going through the same motions, and throwing the same curves, but the results were different than they had been formerly. To the average fan, it probably looked like they were having a run of tough luck, but the manager of a ball club does not dismiss the matter with that viewpoint. If a player isn't ill, or in a natural stage of decline from lengthy service, both the manager and the player himself is aware that he is the victim of superfluous weight.

Obesity is a terrible drawback to a ball player. When the hips and waistline begin to bulge, the warning is at hand. Weight is a serious question in the spring training camps after a winter of relaxation which may lead to flabbiness. The players who are naturally thin, escape the strenuous workouts and necessary diets that the more rotund athletes must adhere to. A weighing machine is placed where the player of excess weight can step upon it conveniently after his two or three-hour grind in a rubber shirt.

Small Scores Decide Most Games Between Contenders For Title

Today the nation is asking, "What's the score?" The chances are that the figures will not be 13-2, yet that, once upon a time, was a world series score: the Athletics put it over John McGraw's Giants by those figures to bring the 1911 series to a finish.

More likely the score will be 2-1 or 3-0, since these combinations have already turned up no less than 14 times each at the end of series games. No other particular score has been recorded more than nine times, that many games having been decided by scores of 3-1 and 4-3.

In more than half the series games played to date—131 of them—the loser has either not scored at all, or managed to get but a single run across the plate. Blank scores lost 32 games and one run lost 37 more. So you see, more than half the games in the big classic have been won on real pitching.

That the losing team also has some pitching to boast of is shown by the fact that in 55 games the winner scored but one, two or three runs. One hundred games were won six runs or less, leaving only 31 in which the winner made seven or more runs. Ten runs or better stand to the credit of but seven game victors.

When the Giants shut out the Athletics 9-0 in the third game of the 1905 series they ran up the highest shutout figure in world series history, and when the Senators were defeated 9-7 in the final game of the 1925 series, Harris' men had to their credit the highest figure ever made by a team on the losing end of a big series score.

The average score for all series games is 4.76 to 1.77, nominally 5-2.

The highest score usually breaks out in the sixth or seventh game, when one of the teams is worn ragged, while the tightest average score characterizes the second game, in which usually, the team losing the first game is making a most strenuous effort to make the series even.

Brilliant Performance and Greatly Improved Gas Mileage

Performance like Hudson's" has long been the goal of fine car builders.

Only the costliest approach its brilliancy of action, smoothness and effortless power. The lesser cars talk of everything except performance when Hudson is mentioned.

Now with even greater performance the new model Hudsons give vastly improved gasoline mileage. They are even smoother. Power is increased. No car surpasses Hudson's reputation for acceleration, speed and flexibility. Yet fuel consumption compares with light cars of no performance distinction.

These great Hudson results are not accidental. They are the sum of years of alert pace-making leadership.

The famous Super-Six principle eliminates vibration and makes possible sustained top performance without injury to the car.

Hudson introduced oil ventilation. Easy adjustments take up chassis wear. Roller tappets give longer, quieter operation. The balanced propeller shaft eliminates noise and rumbles.

With its greater chassis, greater performance and greater economy the new model Hudsons are more beautiful in line, colors, and appointment. They are the greatest values in Hudson history.

BEAUTY DOMINATES IMPROVED JEWETT

A completely changed line of Jewetts, with beauty as their dominant characteristic, is presented today by the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company, which describes them as "the second most beautiful car in America"—thus adapting the well-known Paige slogan to the smaller car as well.

Emphasis is laid upon good looks in every item of the new Jewett's ensemble. Each model carries color, trim, finish and appointments that formerly would have rated it as "de luxe" and the makers announce that they will no longer build both "standard" and "special" models of identical body types, all models now carrying full de luxe features.

A four-door sedan, a type not previously included in the line, has been added, and is regarded as the leader. The popular brougham is, of course, continued, but with changes that clearly set it apart from the former model.

Both the brougham and the four-door sedan are unusually graceful, the straight line effect of the preceding models having been eliminated entirely. The new bodies were designed expressly to achieve beauty, and to be fully up to the standards that have always been attained by the costlier Paige cars in this respect. The Jewetts are chiefly striking for the consistent use of the curved line of beauty. Ball corners, rounded edges, sweeping roof and visor lines, better stream lining, and curved window outlines, in combination with lower running boards, graceful fenders and larger tires having revolutionized the Jewett.

The new line also reveals several important mechanical improvements, chief of which is the increase in size and power of the engine and the adoption of the air cleaner as standard equipment.

In concentrating its production on models de luxe, the Paige company announces, it is meeting the public demand as determined by the company's own experience in recent years. Its sales records show that the American buyer is giving more and more attention to appearance, style and comfort, as evidenced by the fact that the Paige company's de luxe models have led in sales over the plainer models.

Engine and Chassis Changes.

The new Jewett engine has a bore of 2 7-8 inches and a stroke of 4 3-4 inches, the bore having been increased one-eighth inch. The enlarged cylinder gives 185 cubic inches displacement, as against 169 of the former engine, with resultant horsepower of 45 as against 40 formerly. The cast-iron pistons, despite their increase in diameter, are lighter, weighing but 15 1-2 ounces, as against 22 ounces in the previous engines.

An AC air-cleaner is standard equipment on the new engine. It is mounted vertically in front of the carburetor.

Instead of the plain die-cast main bearings used previously, the new engine has bronze-backed main bearings of the interchangeable type, as used in the larger Paige engine, with a great gain in accessibility and servicing operations.

Tire size has been increased from 29x4.75 to 30x5.25, for better wear and riding qualities, with incidental improvement in the appearance of the car, augmented by the lower running boards, which have been dropped 1 1-2 inches.

New Brake Service Co. Here

The past week officials of the Spring Street garage, 142 Spring street, announced the opening of their new brake relining department, which is one of the most complete in this section of the country. Their plan is an entirely new one and since its inauguration many motorists have been relieved of brake ills. The above is a view taken in their shop and shows the efficient arrangements that eliminates a lot of lost time.

MANY FIRMS USE DRIVURSELF CARS

In an effort to discover the extent to which large public service and other big concerns make use of rent-a-car automobiles, the Hertz Drivurself corporation, of Chicago, recently made a study among Hertz licensed operators in four representative sections of the country.

The disclosures were surprising even to the officials of the corporation because of the number of nationally known corporations, but public utility and industrial organizations which were making use of cars rented on a mileage basis to supplement their own fleets, to broaden the activity of their employees and otherwise increase the flexibility of their motor transportation.

Four of these public utility organizations have their agencies in virtually every city in the country. A dozen others are preeminent in their fields in their respective areas. Eight of the important railways were found to be numbered among rent-a-car users, and their lines reach into almost every corner of the country.

In the field of big industrial corporations, the patrons of drivurself stations showed an even greater range, some thirty distinct commodity classifications being shown among corporations with capitalizations of from $2,000,000 to $400,000,000.

From the standpoint of numerical representation, the banks, finance and investment companies, and insurance companies, food products firms, and oil companies. It was also discovered that at least four big detective agencies, two with branches in every large city, were frequent users of Drivurself service.

"We attribute an increasing use of the Drivurself vehicle," said John Hertz, president of the Hertz Drivurself corporation, "by the commercial and financial world to the spread of the traveler's courtesy card among business and financial men who travel, and who find a saving in time when away from home through the use of these cards. The fact that the traveler's courtesy card is issued by the American Credit Letter Corporation of New York along lines similar to the Hotel Credit plan makes it a matter of decided convenience to the traveling public."

"Many of the larger corporations are asking for scores of commercial idenification cards for their employees, and big business is recognizing that the Drivurself car is a distinct phase of transportation and has a field all its own."

HUDSON, ESSEX'S BUILT FOR SAFETY

Safety in automobiles—a higher degree of safety—is one of the public's chief demands in motor cars. Traffic conditions have brought this about, and will carry the movement still further, according to C. H. Becker, of the Goldsmith Becker company, Hudson-Essex distributor.

"We felt this sentiment," said Mr. Becker, "as soon as Hudson-Essex placed on the market their new cars of steel construction. Men have been highly interested to see what remarkable strength and ruggedness the cars have, while women enjoy a car which so easily absorbs all the jolts and jars of present-day traffic.

"The strength of the Essex and Hudson coaches is almost unbelievable. Weights of three and a half tons have been placed on the roof with no effect whatsoever, so far as can be seen. If the strain from such a burden were to take any effect, one of the first results would be around the windows and doors. But as a matter of fact there is no binding or distorted effect whatever.

"While this safety is important, the construction is desirable, too, because it does away with body noises, which so often have proved annoying in cars of less modern design. Other safety features are the remarkably clear vision, due to the windshield construction and the general reliability and ruggedness of Essex and Hudson construction.

"Both Hudson and Essex are far in advance of the times in general design. Both have the practical and dependable gasoline strainer built into the vacuum tank, incoming air is both cleaned and heated before it enters the carburetor, oil is kept clean and free from dilution by the action of the motor.

"The results are obtained in the basic construction of the cars, rather than by the complication and expense of added accessories."

MOTORCYCLE POLICE HURT IN COLLISION

Motorcycle Officer E. R. Harbin received a fracture of the left hand at noon Saturday when the motor he was riding crashed with a truck at Whitehall and McDaniel streets.

According to Officer Harbin's report to Captain J. L. Gordon, the collision took place as he started forward after stopping beside a street car while passengers got on and off the car. He did not learn the name of the truck driver, he reported. Officer Harbin was given treatment at Grady hospital.

Charles Dingeldein, of 265 Merritts avenue, narrowly escaped injury about noon Saturday when struck down by an automobile driven by D. E. Brown, of 399 Peachtree street, at Pice street and Dayton place.

According to a report to police by Brown, Dingeldein left a street car and started to cross the street. Brown blew his horn, which seemed to confuse Dingeldein, who ran in front of the moving automobile. No case was made.

The Stubborn Problem of 31 Years Solved in the Rubber-Silenced Chassis

1 The Harmonic Balancer—built into the Oakland crankshaft—eliminating torsional vibration.

2 Close-up section of engine mounting, showing rubber cushion and complete rubber insulation between motor support and frame side-member.

4 New, heavy cross-member for the Oakland frame, completing a super-rigid support for the entire power-plant and body assembly.

Oakland has conquered the problem that has defied automotive engineers for 31 years—the elimination of perceptible vibration . . . Four vitally important features, plus the perfect coordination of every working part, render the greater Oakland Six, with Rubber-Silenced Chassis, practically vibrationless at all speeds.

First—The Harmonic Balancer, pioneered by Oakland and built into the Oakland crankshaft, prevents any twisting of the crankshaft under repeated piston impulses and eradicates torsional vibration.

Second—Rubber supports for the Oakland engine form a cushion between power-plant and frame and effectually silence any vibration in the frame due to the torque reaction of the engine.

Third—The Rubber-Silenced Drive—not only does the Oakland engine ride on rubber, but it also drives through rubber, by means of this entirely new and exclusive development, which erases all body rumbles and vibrations communicated from the rear wheels, drive shaft and transmission.

Fourth—A new, extra-heavy cross-member, added to the frame, completes a super-rigid support for the entire power-plant and body assembly, and constitutes the final step in the conquest of vibration.

These features—found in their entirety only in the Greater Oakland Six—impart a smoothness and quietness of operation and a freedom from closed car rumble, unsurpassed by any other automobile, regardless of price.

CHEVROLET SALES IN SOUTH DEMAND EXPANSION PROGRAM

Atlanta Is Named As Headquarters For Southeast

Company Will Spend More Than Ten Millions in Additional Factory Facilities.

TURN OUT 1,000 MORE CARS DAILY

L. S. Costley Appointed Assistant Regional Sales Manager Supervising All Southern Branches.

Due to greatly increased business in the south and the desire on the part of the Chevrolet Motor company to better serve its thousands of owners in this territory, the company has recently established regional headquarters in Atlanta, whose territory will embrace the states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida and east Tennessee, with zone offices at Charlotte, Atlanta, Birmingham and Jacksonville.

This movement on the part of the company is in line with the expansion of production which is now taking place, the company spending in excess of $10,000,000 in additional manufacturing facilities, which will place them in position to build 1,000 more cars per day after January 1.

Mr. L. S. Costley, formerly sales manager of the Atlanta branch, has been promoted to the position of assistant regional sales manager, supervising the branches as mentioned above—his office reporting direct to the southeastern regional manager, M. D. Douglas, located in the Norwood, Ohio, factory. Mr. Costley is a native Georgian, having been connected with the Chevrolet Motor company for the past 11 years, serving first in the Atlanta branch as assistant sales manager, later as sales manager of the Dallas, Texas, office, returning to Atlanta the early part of 1925 as sales manager of the local office. He will maintain headquarters in the Chevrolet building in Atlanta but will spend considerable time with the different zone offices located throughout the south, as well as building up a close contact between the home office of the company in Detroit and the southeastern territory.

New Sales Manager.

E. E. Riley, formerly assistant sales manager of the Dallas, Texas, office, has been appointed sales manager of the Atlanta branch, succeeding Mr. Costley. Mr. Riley has been connected with Chevrolet for the past six years, and is especially qualified to serve the dealers and owners in this territory in view of the fact that all of his experience has been in the south, and comes to Atlanta after having made a very remarkable record in Dallas.

Chevrolet sales in the southeast territory have made wonderful strides, necessitating the opening of an additional branch office in Birmingham, effective May 1. The company has under consideration, at the present time, the subject of opening further branches in southern territory, which plans will in all probability materialize before the first of the year.

Conditions in South.

In speaking of conditions throughout the south Mr. Costley, who has been in close touch with developments in this territory, states that from his observation the south has never been in a more prosperous condition than at the present time. There is a splendid supply of money for all the legitimate business requirements, for the movement of crops, for industries, for every line of business and for the steadily increasing number of new enterprises that are coming into the south. Cotton is showing a good yield and is moving rapidly, and gauging conditions of the entire southeast predicts that even greater progress will be made in the coming year than in the past 12 months.

All Chevrolet branches throughout the southern states have for the past year and a half been greatly behind in filling their orders. It is expected when the company's new production schedule goes into effect whereby they will receive an additional 1,000 cars per day that they will be enabled to better serve the demand that has been created for Chvrolet. The company is working along the lines of constantly improving the quality of their product, using the enormous purchasing power of the General Motors corporation, which enables them to put out the very best of quality at very low prices.

OLDS CUTAWAY CHASSIS ON DISPLAY

A liberal education in modern automotive mechanics and engineering is to be had from an inspection of the cut-away Oldsmobile chassis, which is one of the interesting exhibits at the Southeastern fair. It shows every working part of an automobile in operation and a detailed description of every function in the present day automobile with its many features is given by G. Bingham Bache, sales promotion manager of the Olds Motor Works, Atlanta branch.

Sections of the exterior of the engine, clutch, transmission, axle and all other important units have been cut out and plate glass inserted in place of the steel removed. This glass forms windows through which the action of all working parts are plainly disclosed as the engine is slowly operated.

The cutting of the metal and insertion of the glass is in itself an excellent example of fine workmanship. This cutting into the heavy and hardened steel of the various parts requires extreme care and accuracy. Special precision instruments are used to insure the incisions being so accurately made that there will not be the slightest roughness left. The necessity for this great care is due to the fact that all parts must fit so accurately that the engine can be run at slow speeds without the benefit of the usual lubrication. One of these cutaway demonstration chassis costs approximately as much as three finished Oldsmobile de lux sedans. The exhibit of the chassis, together with the explanatory talk made by the attendant makes clear to the automobile owner everything that happens under the hood and beneath the floor boards of this Oldsmobile from the time he puts his foot on the starter button until he returns from his drive.

The motorist observes how centrifugal force removes all dirt from the air before it is drawn through the air cleaner at the carburetor intake. The plate glass windows permit him to view how the air moves with gasoline vapor and how this vapor is heated and then evenly distributed to the six cylinders by the high velocity hot section manifold. How the turbulance of the mixture is retained by the dome-shaped combustion chamber can be readily seen.

The onlooker can also see the intake valves rise to permit the flow of gas into the cylinder as the downward stroke of the piston creates a vacuum and how the gas is compressed in the combustion chamber by the upward piston stroke. It is at the peak of this stroke in operation that the spark plugs fire and explode the gases sending the piston on its downward power stroke. This action can be followed by the eye, showing the piston, through the connecting rod, transmits this vertical power stroke to the revolving crankshaft. The next upward or exhaust stroke of the piston, which clears the cylinder of burned gases, also is shown as is the action of the camshaft automatically lifting the intake and exhaust valves at proper intervals. Other cut-away units, such as clutch and transmission, that transmit the power from the motor to the driving gears are plainly displayed.

The oiling system, with triple safeguards that have reduced the necessity of oil changing to but from three to four times a year, is one of the interesting features on this Oldsmobile chassis. Through the windows the path of the pressure oil flow can be traced from the pump along its "three-way" course through the crankshaft, with its harmonic balancer to counteract vibration, and to every principal engine bearing, lubricating every point of contact, thence to the oil filter where all foreign substances are removed and then back through the pump for another round of duty.

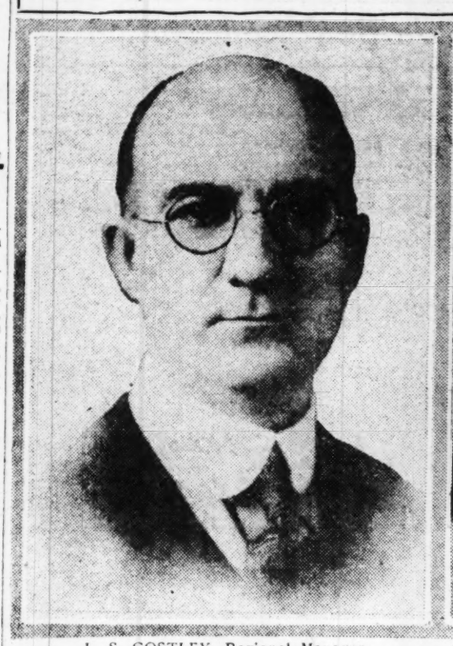

In connection with the lubrication is depicted crankcase ventilation which by vacuum draws air through a second air cleaner attached to the breather post on the left side of the engine. The course of this air as it sweeps through the crankcase removing dilutant, such as raw gasoline and water vapor, can also be followed.

Another feature is the two-way cooling system which incorporates the best features of the two accepted types—pressure and thermo-siphon. To those points where greatest heat is generated around the valves, valve seats, spark plugs and combustion chambers, the cooled water is pressure driven by the centrifugal pump. Cylinder walls do not heat as much as the valves and upper parts of the engine, therefore, this circulation is restricted to the slower thermo-siphon type in which the rate of circulation is governed by the amount of heat to be dissipated.

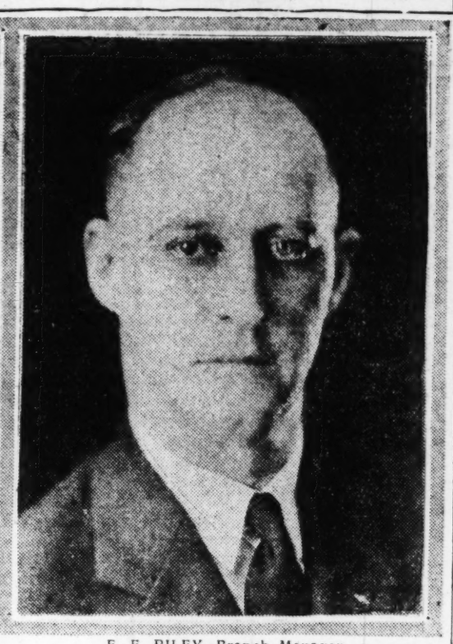

The electrical system is fully shown in the cut-away chassis. The plates and assembly of the battery can be seen, while the openings in the generator disclose the workings of the automatic spark plug control device and thermostatic control of the charge rate.

This exhibit of the Oldsmobile cutaway chassis provides an interesting and instructive entertainment for every automobile owner, and gives an insight into the high degree of science required in the design and manufacture of the modern motor car.

Chevrolet's Regional and Branch Manager s Here

L. S. COSTLEY, Regional Manager

E. E. RILEY, Branch Manager.

Among the important announcements from the automobile industry the past week was establishment by Chevrolet of the southeastern regional district, with headquarters in Atlanta. The above shows, left, L. S. Costley, former branch manager here, who was named regional manager, and his successor, E. E. Riley, who will take over the responsibilities of the Atlanta branch. Mr. Costley has been identified with the Chevrolet company for the past several years and under his supervision the Atlanta territory has become one of their largest. Mr. Riley comes to Atlanta from Dallas, Texas, where he has for the past few years been manager for Chevrolet's branch there.

CHANDLER MAKES FINANCIAL REPORT

BY SID BLACK,
Vice President and General Sales Manager, Chandler-Cleveland Motors Corporation.

The remarkable expansion of the Chandler motor organization proves the fact that success rarely comes to any commercial enterprise unless its fundamentals are sound.

Formed early in 1912 to build a car of wide public appeal, a car that was sound mechanically, light without sacrifice of strength, powerful without waste, and luxuriously appointed—the company has grown consistently until it is now one of the conspicuous successes in the automotive industry.

In January, 1913, the "plant" of the Chandler organization was a small plant on a side street in Cleveland, Ohio.

On January 1, 1926, Chandler and Chandler-owned affiliations had an investment of more than ten million dollars in land, buildings and equipment, and a total of 885,761 square feet of floor space on a land area of over 31 acres!

The physical size of the Chandler institution, however, does not even begin to show Chandler's important position in the automotive industry.

Statistics make dull reading at times, yet they are vitally necessary to show how the Chandler company has grown, and what its remarkable expansion has meant to the city of Cleveland, home of the Chandler organization.

Since the beginning of the business, car sales have yielded the company the vast total of more than $282,000,000.

Export business—the sales of the company's cars in foreign countries—has accounted for over $20,270,000.

Stockholders have prospered as the company prospered, by receiving $15,515,488 in cash dividends—and the Chandler organization is proud of the fact that it has never passed a dividend since the inception of the business.

Today Chandler is in an enviable financial position. Our company not only has no bonded indebtedness, no mortgages, no liens, no bank loans or outstanding notes—but also remarkable strength of assets over liabilities.

Despite its prosperous past and exceedingly fine present sales and financial conditions, the future holds even greater promise for the Chandler car.

The announcement of the 1927 Chandler models at the big distributor and dealer convention early in August created a sensation, even among seasoned motor car merchants.

The current sales figures show that the great motoring public, too, is appreciating Chandler value in increasing numbers.

New dealer appointments show a 63 per cent increase in August, 1926 as against August, 1925.

Our manufacturing facilities have been expanded to a point where the 1927 Chandler is built and machined 95 per cent complete in our own factories.

The strong financial condition of the Chandler organization makes it possible for us to buy materials advantageously, and the strategic location of our factories near the great steel, rubber and important raw material centers, insures the minimum freight expense.

TO PLAN ANNUAL MEETING THIS WEEK

During the coming week, President C. M. LeRoux, of the Atlanta Automobile association, will appoint and announce committee that is to make arrangements for the annual meeting of the association, to be held the first Monday in December, at which time officers for 1927 will be elected. The nominating committee will also be appointed and announced during the coming week, it being the custom for the nominating committee to suggest and recommend officers at the annual meeting. The meeting this year is to be of a most extraordinary and unusual character, and entirely different from any ever staged by the association. It will be a most complete surprise party in every respect, and the members are looking forward to it with great interest.

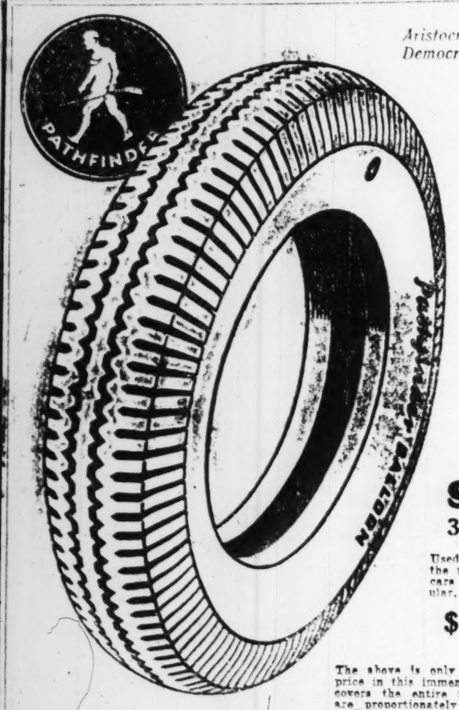

SALES AND SERVICE MANAGERS TO ORGANIZE

A most enthusiastic meeting of sales managers and service managers of the Atlanta Automobile association was held Friday, noonday luncheon, at the Capital City club, for the purpose of organizing separately a sales managers' association and a service managers' association in Atlanta. The meeting was addressed by Captain D. Risley, Jr., general sales manager of the Craveroiler company, of Philadelphia, Pa., who is president of the Service Managers' Automotive association of Philadelphia, one of the most successful organizations of its kind in America. Captain Risley brought out many striking and telling reasons why associations of the kind mentioned would be of inestimable benefit to the sales managers and the service managers. The result was that definite resolutions were passed by those present, with a view to immediately forming permanent organizations of the kind mentioned, in Atlanta. The Atlanta Automobile association is sponsoring the idea, and the secretarial work and general business management of these two new associations will be handled by the secretarial office of the Atlanta Automobile association, although each association in itself will be separate and distinct from the Atlanta Automobile association, so far as its operation is concerned, having separate officers and separate board of directors.

The general opinion was expressed on all sides that the automotive industry has taken a real step in organizing these associations here. Further announcements regarding them will come shortly from the secretary's office of the Atlanta Automobile association. President C. M. LeRoux presided.

Cleaning carbon~Grinding valves~~Excessive upkeep~ periodic lay-ups~~the sleeve-valve-engined Willys-Knight gets rid of them all ~~~~~~

Abolish carbon troubles . . . Do away with valve grinding . . . And you add years to the life and usefulness of your car . . .

In the same process, you save your share of the $420,000,000 tax which American owners must pay, this year, for the correction of damage done by these twin evils inseparable from all poppet-valve cars.

Carbon has no harmful effect on the Willys-Knight Great Six. Nor are there any valves to grind. Its sleeve-valve engine-construction, patented exclusive—does away with both . . .

As a matter of fact, the presence of carbon in this car is a desirable condition. It serves to seal compression—to prevent power-waste. Instead of hampering and harming, and putting you to the endless inconvenience and expense of removing it, carbon literally helps the Knight engine to perform.

Willys-Knight Great Six Touring $1750; Roadster $1850; 4-passenger Coupe $2195; 5-passenger Sedan $2295. New "70" Willys-Knight Six, 113¼-inch wheelbase—companion car to the Willys-Knight Great Six—from $1295 to $1495. Prices f. o. b. factory and specifications subject to change without notice. ATLANTA'S GREATEST SOUTHEASTERN FAIR

A. M. Robinson Co. To Have Extra Attractions This Week

The wholesale firm of A. M Robinson company, of 59 North Pryor street, are giving the merchants of the southeast an added inducement to visit the Southeastern fair all this week as they will put on a large exhibition themselves at their store which will be well worth coming miles to see.

During fair week their big store will be specially decorated with the finest grade of high-class merchandise that could be found under one roof in this part of the country. Special sales talks and window displays will take place every day, showing the up-to-date 1926 and 1927 way to sell and display merchandise.

"The wholesaler of today," states C. J. Williamson, "is always thinking and trying to solve the problems of the retail trade and we no longer think that all the merchandise we buy will suit all retailers alike, so we study conditions in all parts of our territory and then stock up with merchandise which we know will be suitable for every section of the southeast.

"The live, progressive retailer of today is the man who keeps up with the times—1926 methods and merchandise would not interest the buyers of 1926 and a visit to our stores and an inspection of our enormous stock of seasonable goods is ekually to a post-graduate course in modern merchandising for the average retail merchant.

"What is true of the retailer is also true of the wholesaler. We could not stay in business long if we did not keep step with the march of progress and sometimes we lead the van ourselves with innovations which enable us to help our retail merchants to make selections of that kind of up-to-date merchandise which will enable them to make quick and profitable sales.

"There will be plenty of money to spend this fall and winter," continued Mr. Williamson, "and the stores that have the most attractive 1926 and 1927 merchandise, the best displays, will secure the largest volume of trade. We will go a long way to assist old and new friends among the retailers to get their share of fall and winter business.

"We are proud of our Southeastern fair and believe that if every retail merchant in the southeastern states would take advantage of the cheap railroad rates to come to Atlanta and after seeing the many attractive features at the fair, visit any one or all of the eight large, dependable wholesale dry goods and notion houses of Atlanta and see the mammoth stocks of the world's best merchandise on display, each and every one will have seen and heard much that will repay them for the time and money spent in coming to Atlanta.

"We join with our fellow Atlanta citizens in welcoming them to Atlanta at this time. The house salesmen have been looking forward to this fair week with keen anticipation for some time and visitors to our store will find a cordial welcome here. The firm of A. M. Robinson renders service in all that the name implies.

MANY MERCHANTS WILL VISIT ATLANTA DURING FAIR WEEK

Southeastern fair week, October 2 to 9, is expected to be the best week for business in many years for Atlanta manufacturers and wholesalers. In years past hundreds of merchants have attended the fair, but from all indications from various wholesale houses the number of visiting merchants this year will be the largest in the history of business done during the annual fair week.

Many wholesale houses have called in their salesmen and are prepared to offer a different and better service, and better prices than ever before. Special displays are being arranged, making for easier selections by visiting merchants. Merchants will be given every attention and ample opportunity to visit the fair.

Urged to Register.

The Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers' association has urged all visiting merchants to register in the offices of the association in the Walton building, and receive railroad fare refunds in accordance with the amount of the purchases made.

A survey of the stocks of the wholesale houses in dry goods, shoes, millinery, furniture, hats, caps and ready-to-wear shows one of the largest assemblages of standard quality merchandise ever offered by the Atlanta market. This phase of Atlanta's growth as a market center has attracted no little attention from merchants throughout the entire southeast. Hundreds of merchants who formerly bought their stocks from other markets are now making several buying trips a year to Atlanta because they have been convinced that they can get the goods they want here, at the right price, with big savings on transportation charges. These elements have helped many merchants to do a larger annual business than they ever before realized, when buying elsewhere.

Merchandising Miracles.

In the Southeastern fair number of The Southern Merchant Trade Journal, official organ of the Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers association, the following paragraph, from the editorial, has caused considerable favorable comment from merchants from many sections of the south:

"Time was when the merchandising miracles happened only in the larger cities, among the larger merchants. Their new methods, new stores rolled up for them tremendous volumes of business. The world of merchants looked on with wonder in their eyes. But merchandising has moved on and up, and no longer has the larger merchant any possible monopoly on the big profits, nor on the merchandising principle of securing the maximum sales from his territory."

Miller's Tire Service Co.'s Buckhead Station

The Miller Tire Service, dealers for the popular Goodyear product in Atlanta, has opened at Buckhead a very modern and up-to-date tire station for their patrons of that section. The above photo shows this new station and the cars shown is evidence of the appreciation by motorists of their service.

REO CONQUERS ARCTIC CIRCLE

Pohjoismaiden Auto Tuonti—no matter what this combination of words may seem to mean to you, it really is the name of a company dealing in automobiles in Finland. This company decided recently to drive a Reo bus from Abo on the Baltic sea to Pitkajarvi, the most northern point reached by a Finland highway. Beyond lies the Arctic ocean and continual ice. On the morning of July 21 the bus left Abo and steadily traveled north along the shore of the Gulf of Bothnia until at Kemi the route headed directly toward the Arctic ocean. The Kemyoki river was crossed at Rooamemi and from the hill called Ounasvaara back of the town could be seen the splendor of the midnight sun. The Arctic circle was entered at Apukka and from there on for 420 kilometers, or 225 miles, the bus was in the polar regions until the end of the trail was reached at the little village of Pitkajarvi. From there on it was dog sleds or nothing. The trip was in the nature of a test of reliability under actual Finland road conditions for a sustained period and the bus came through with a perfect score. Various weather conditions were encountered from mild nippy air to the severe cold of the frozen north, but no mechanical adjustments were made, no repairs needed, demonstrating fully the feasibility of motor transportation and the dependability of the American made motor bus. No attempt at speed was made and an average of 29 kilometers, or 18 miles an hour, was maintaned for the entre trip, which was excellent, considering the roads. At the different villages stops were made to exhibit the bus and the folks crowded around to see the vehicle made in far away America. The return from the northern point was made in six days and the bus arrived at Abo on August 3 with all the passengers enthusiastic for bus transportation and ready to praise the easy riding qualities of the Reo. The actual time was 290 1-2 hours and the road running time 102 hours and 10 minutes. The distance covered was 2,987 kilometers, or 1,856 miles.

TRAFFIC REMEDIES OUTLINED IN REPORT

Some outstanding remedies for present day traffic problems are contained in a report received by the Atlanta Safety council from the National Safety council, which has had a series of surveys made by trained engineers in different cities scattered throughout the country.

Suggestions include education of the public in traffic safety rules and regulations; more efficient synchronized movement of all classes of traffic (both vehicular and pedestrian) along main thoroughfares and in densely populated districts, by the installation of more means of traffic control, either uniformed officers or automatic signaling devices; the liberal use of signs and pavement markings designed to instruct the general public in the proper movement of vehicular and pedestrian traffic at specific locations—street intersections, curves, railway grade crossings, etc.; the laying out, constructing and maintaining of streets in condition for safe traffic movement; the providing of adequate playground and recreation centers, properly supervised, to discourage children from playing in the streets, especially in densely populated districts; strict enforcement of laws and ordinances; compilation of reliable statistics relating to accidents which will show what causes crashes, so that preventatives may be devised, and state legislation to conform to the uniform laws on operation of motor vehicles recommended by the second national conference on street and highway safety.

FIVE SOLDIERS ARE EXCHANGED FOR ONE COLONEL

Managua, Nicaragua, October 2.—(AP)—Read Admiral Julian L. Latimer, head of the American naval forces in Nicaraguan waters, today supervised the exchange of all prisoners taken in recent fighting on the east coast between the government forces and the liberal revolutionists. The exchange was made under the terms of the recently signed armistice. Five soldiers were exchanged for a colonel. Dispite the armistice there has been some sporadic fighting.

Dougherty-Little-RedwineCompany To Keep Open House for Visitors

At 92-94 South Pryor street is located the old reliable firm of Dougherty, Little and Redwine company, and the officials of this large wholesale dry goods and notions firm have made preparations to act as hosts to great numbers of out-of-town friends and customers who will take advantage of the low rates and attend the Southeastern fair.

J. R. Little, the president, says "this season finds us with the greatest stocks of high grade merchandise we have ever carried and every large or small retail merchant, whether he buys or not, is welcome to come in.

"We understand further," stated Mr. Little, "the fair this year is going to be even larger than in former years. This being the case, it presents a splendid opportunity for our southern merchants to see a worth while fair, all the interesting sights around Atlanta and at the same time, make great savings in buying merchandise that will be a credit to their stores.

"The small town and country merchant," continued Mr. Little, "cannot afford to lag behind the times in this fast age, with its ever-changing styles and modes and a visit to Atlanta by a merchant at this time would add to his storehouse of knowledge and profits upon his return home.

"A large fair like we are fortunate in having in Atlanta at this time is a school of commerce and the educational value is of much and lasting benefit to wide-awake people. The vast stores of selected stocks suitable for southern trade as seen here in the several large dependable wholesale houses are commodities that the southern merchant makes his living by selling and the retail merchant who takes advantage of this occasion and comes to Atlanta at this time, cannot help but profit more by coming than by staying home.

"As our stores and salesrooms are so favorably located relative to the fair grounds, with street cars to Lakewood passing our doors every five minutes and a large public garage across from us, we have just the right place for out-of-town visitors to meet their friends and make themselves at home with us while in Atlanta.

"The Southeastern fair is an outstanding ocasion and the largest fair held annually in the southeast, and we believe that the attractions this year will be entertaining and instructive, not only to merchants and others interested in the exhibits in a business way, but to the public as well and we join with city and fair officials in extending an invitation to all to visit the big fair this week."

STANDARDIZED QUALITY DEFINED BY CHRYSLER

There is a great interest amongst motor car owners and builders in the announcement by Chrysler of a decidedly new application of the fundamental principles of engineering and unique methods of manufacture, summarized in two words—standardized quality.

In response to many requests for more detailed information regarding it, the following statement is made:

"Standardized quality, as this company has defined it, bespeaks the use of materials which will withstand, beyond peradventure, the most wracking service to which they could possibly be subjected. It demands rigid adherence to the highest ideals of precision and exactitude in manufacture, constant vigilance in inspection, and tests that might well incapacitate any ordinary mechanism.

"As a result accomplishments of Chrysler and Chrysler cars which are today being characterized as 'amazing' and 'phenomenal' are simply an inevitable consequence of standardized quality.

"Our conception of quality has actually converted what might otherwise be only ordinary, commonplace automobile factories, turning out motor cars one after another, into huge laboratories, where each individual unit is scientifically designed, manufactured and tested with unvarying accuracy and precision, unhampered by the exigencies of such varying circumstances as rushing production, inequality of materials or any one of the thousand other factors which commonly beset the producers of automobiles.

"This is but an essential development incident to attaining the new and unique type of quality which is standardized—inexorably—in Chrysler manufacture.

"This genius for engineering originality and constructive forward thinking initiates a new cycle in the trend of motor car manufacture, the effects of which are apparent wherever you turn. We are not dealing in traditions or in the past—no matter how glorious those traditions or that past may have been. We are in the enviable position of emancipation from traditions, conventions and declining theories. We are manufacturing the cars we are building today for today's needs and wants, and are constantly and consistently on the alert to take advantage, immediately, of those changing needs and wants, and to improve, where improvement is possible, on present practice and present motor cars."

HUPMOBILE MOVES TO HANDSOME NEW PEACHTREE HOME

Announcement is made by Mr. T. E. Cauthorn, head of Thompson-Cauthorn Motor company, Atlanta distributors for Hupmobile sixes and eights, of the opening of the company's new building at 433 Peachtree street, cornor of Pine. This new home for the well-known Hupmobile car is destined to be one of the most complete and finest in the city and comprises two complete floors and basement of immense floor space. The retail sales showroooms will occupy the main floor frontage extending from Pine street corner about 150 feet north on Peachtree street and will be faced with a broad expanse of plate glass, forming one of the handsomest displays of motor cars in this section of the country.

In moving the effects of the company from the old home at 471 Peachtree street many items of service department machinery and accessories have been discarded and replaced with brand-new equipment. Nothing has been left undone that can in any way enhance the service work on the large number of Hupmobile cars owned in Atlanta. The wholesale department will have in the new building ample facilities for warehousing cars and a large stock of all models will be kept on hand by the company. The parts department will have complete stocks of all parts and large and scientifically designed quarters for the adequate servicing both of the local customers and the wholesale trade that comes from the out-of-town Hupmobile dealers operating under this distributorship.

It is stated by T. E. Cauthorn that Hupmobile sales and service from this point forward will make even longer strides to the forefront than this old line company has made in the past. With every department organized for efficiency and every facility present to back up the efforts of the organization, the future of Hupmobile and the Thompson-Cauthorn company has a decidedly optimistic aspect.

ONE SOLID WEEK OF EXHIBITS, RACING, ETC.

HUPMOBILE SIX SCORES AGAIN

A standard Hupmobile Six touring car placed first in a road race through Holland and northern Belgium over a distance of 1,250 miles. Entries in the race included both European and American cars, especially those advertising as high speed, and consequently priced much higher than Hupmobile, states a message received by the Hupp Motor Cor corporation from its European representatives.

"The number of contests won by Hupmobile stock cars this year clearly demonstrates its ability to maintain a steady high speed without any danger to its mechanism," T. E. Cauthorn of the Thompson-Cauthorn company, Hupmobile dealers here, points out in commenting on this recent victory. "The reliability race covered a course of 1,800 kilometers, or 1,250 miles, greater than the distance from New York to Chicago, which among American tourists is considered an exceptionally long continuous run."

Only Standard Cars Can Enter.

"The rules of the contest emphasize the fact that only stock cars can compete. The Hupmobile Six with its 64 1-2-pound crankshaft, vibration damper and extremely durable construction is a smooth car to drive at all speeds, and foreign drivers have been eager to drive the Hupmobile entry for this reason. Its ease of handling enables the driver to go the limit speed throughout the race without tiring. The low hung construction, 9-inch road clearance with adequate spring length and spirited motor gives it an advantage over other cars.

"It is this 'racing car endurance,'" continues Mr. Cauthorn, "that has merited great popularity for this car here. This is shown by Hupmobile sales figures which so far this year have surpassed every preceding year in the company's history. More than 38,000 sixes have been shipped since the car's announcement setting a new record for any new model that Hupmobile has produced."

FEATURES OF FAIR TO BE BROADCAST BY SEARS-ROEBUCK

Entertainment and educational activities will "hum" throughout the entire Southeastern fair from the Sears-Roebuck agricultural foundation glass-front radio studio in the automobile building, according to George C. Biggar, secretary of the foundation. Mr. Biggar has announced that various features will be offered to fair visitors several times each day, starting a 9:30 each morning and lasting until late at night. Most of the programs will be made available to thousands of radio listeners throughout the nation by a relay broadcasting arrangement through station WSB.

Among the leading features of the week will be the broadcasting of the Georgia state-wide spelling bee Monday afternoon; an operatic program arranged by Signor E. Volpi Monday night; Joe Basile's Madison Square Garden band and carnival attractions Monday night; a radio old-time fiddlers' contest Thursday night; a negro spiritual program by Bethel choir Friday night; a homemakers' half hour at 10 o'clock daily; Georgia College of Agriculture farm features at 11:30 o'clock daily; and Mark Goff's Pennsylvania orchestra in a dinner concert at 6:30 each night. Visitors at the fair may hear each of these programs through the loud speaker system arranged in the Sears-Roebuck exhibit space.

The Georgettes orchestra, directed by Mrs. Reynolds Clark, will play several afternoon concerts during the week for the entertainment of fair patrons. The agricultural foundation has also arranged to have Earl Johnson and Arthur Tanner, the "Fiddlin' Wampus Cats," perform each morning from the radio studio. These men were champion fiddler and banjo picker, respectively, at the recent fiddlers' convention at the auditorium. In addition to these features, many radio stars of Atlanta and vicinity will be heard from the foundation studio throughout the week.

Modern Covered Wagon Traverses Ancient Trail

Brother in spirit, at least, to the hardy pioneers wending their way westward, but with the magic of gasoline robbing the trip of its slow-crawling monotony, Melvin L. Vining, field inspector in the United States immigration service recently moved his family and 2,000 pounds of household goods across three states and the Continental divide, in an old, 1916 model, Franklin touring car.

From Helena, Montana, down through Boulder, Butte and Deer Lodge to the Bitter Root range of the Rockies, on across Idaho and into Washington, penetrating the coast range at Snoqualmie Pass and turning north through Granite, Mount Vernon and Bellingham, this modern Forty-Niner in a second-hand car, delivered his wife and baby safely to their frontier destination with no greater mishap en route than a punctured tire.

Writing the experience of his trip, Vining says: "The performance of the old car was remarkable. I loaded it with about 2,000 pounds of household goods, carrying a large phonograph box 5 feet by 2 feet by 2 feet on the trunk rack. The car was so full that I had to take the cushion out of the rear seat, placing it upside down on the radiator hood, where it served as a holder for straps that bound on five suit cases loaded to capacity. On the right running board was a folding baby buggy weighing 75 pounds, a five-gallon can of gasoline and a box of tools about the size of the can. Average speed for the 1,100 miles was 20 miles the hour, driving eight hours per day."

MANY RATTLESNAKES KILLED NEAR SPARTA

Sparta, Ga., October 2.—(Special.) Rattlesnakes are said to be numerous in this section as the fall days give signs of winter coming on in the near future, this time of year seemingly being the best time for killing this species of snakes. They are now preparing to go into their winter quarters and are more vicious than at any other time of the year.

Numbers of the reptiles have been killed by lumber haulers and other workers in the woods over this county. Up to the present time not a single person has been bitten by a rattlesnake this year, although some have experienced narrow escapes.

World's Largest Horse Collar Makers Welcome Visitors

"Never in the history of Atlanta has the Gate City of the South attained as high a position as a market for the buyers of the south as at this present time," says Fred M. Couch, president of the Atlanta Tent and Awning company.

"Wholesale merchants and manufacturers of Atlanta are all pulling together for the common good of all and everybody is getting some benefits of the other fellow's boosting of Atlanta.

"Take our lines as an illustration. The canvas men of Atlanta all work for Atlanta, Georgia and the south, as well as for themselves, and every dollar that can be spent in the south helps directly or indirectly every other firm in Atlanta or the south, whereas money sent to far distances is gone out of our territory and its usefulness is lost to the south," Mr. Couch continued.

"The large Southeastern fair, which is Atlanta's privilege to hold annually at Lakewood park is, as we understand it, the third or fourth largest annual fair held in America, and provides through low rates a splendid opportunity for people of the entire southland to come to Atlanta to see the big fair and at the same time see the extra large stocks of merchandise on display at this time of the year.

"While, no doubt, most everybody knows that our firm is the largest manufacturers of tents, tarpaulins and awnings in the southeast, yet everybody may not know that we operate the largest cotton horse collar factory in the world. For more than 30 years we have been making cotton horse collars and we have been shipping them to every country on the globe.

"Our big factory," continues Mr. Couch, "is not over two miles from the fair grounds and we extend a most cordial invitation to every large or small dealer in any kind of farm supplies to come over and see how we make the celebrated Lankford cotton horse collar."

Uniform Traffic Regulations Urged by Safety Council

"Speeding under particular conditions existing at the time and place in question is a contributing cause of a great many accidents," declared J. L. Edwards, vice president of the Atlanta Safety council. "There are times when it is safe to drive 50 miles an hour and there are other times when it is not safe to go 15 miles an hour. The old saying that 'circumstances govern cases' is indeed true when it comes to the question of how fast it is possible to drive a car safely.

"Statistics compiled by the National Safety council," said Mr. Edwards, "show that speeding faster than the law allows resulted in thousands of fatalities during the past year. Yet often people who are exceeding the speed limits do not become involved in accidents, while drivers who are not going faster than the law allows do get into smashups. There are certain hours in the early morning when it is perfectly safe to speed along Fifth avenue, New York, or Michigan avenue, Chicago, although during most of the day it is dangerous to proceed more quickly than the law specifies.

"The question of speeding probably received more consideration and was the subject of more discussion than any other problem that confronted the 1,000 delegates who attended the second national conference on street and highway safety at Washington last March, when Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover presided as chairman.

Difference of Opinion.

"There were speakers at the Hoover conference who honestly believed that it was essential to speed up traffic in order to facilitate the handling of transportation, while there were other safety advocates who were just as convinced that speeding was one of the three chief causes of automobile accidents.

"When the conference finally adjourned, the delegates had agreed on certain recommendations which will be submitted for the consideration of the Georgia conference on street and highway safety, called by Governor Walker for October 7 and 8. The National Safety council, with which the Atlanta Safety council is affiliated, believes that every legislature should enact and enforce these uniform model laws that have been suggested after having been given consideration by representatives named by governors throughout the country, who have only the safety of all the people at heart.

"The measure, which will be up for passage in the legislature at its next session, declares that any person driving a vehicle on a highway shall operate the machine at a careful and prudent speed not greater than is reasonable and proper, having due regard to the traffic, width and surface of the thoroughfare and of any other conditions then existing, and operators of motor vehicles shall not drive at such a speed as to endanger the lives, limbs and property of other motorists and pedestrians.

State Laws Vary.

"At present the laws of the various states vary considerably. Enactment and enforcement of the recommendations of the Hoover conference, points out the National Safety council, will simplify matters for drivers throughout the country. No longer will they have to study rules and regulations of scores of communities through which they intend to tour en route to Maine, California, Florida or Canada. Passage of the suggested measure should make motoring more pleasant and safer for all drivers and passengers as well as protecting pedestrians and would be welcomed by the thousands of tourists coming to Georgia every year.

"Provision for the protection of school children is provided in the act, which says that motorists shall not exceed a limit of fifteen miles an hour when passing a school during school recess or while children are going to or leaving school during opening and closing hours. Last year approximately 7,000 boys and girls were killed by automobiles. Too many drivers fail to slow down when nearing school houses.

"Under the provisions of the proposed law motorists shall not exceed twenty miles an hour on any highway in a business district when traffic is controlled at intersections by traffic officers or stop-and-go signals. Motorists will be allowed to drive only fifteen miles an hour on all other highways in a business district.

Penalty on Conviction.

"The safety council has repeatedly called the attention of motorists to the importance of not driving too fast in residential districts, where thousands of children play in the streets, because often there are no nearby lots, back yards, playgrounds or recreation centers in which to romp. In many instances children have stepped suddenly into the streets and have been killed or injured by approaching automobiles whose drivers did not have time to stop before striking the youngsters.

"The new law states that motorists shall not go faster than twenty miles an hour in a residence district.

"Any person who drives a vehicle upon a highway carelessly and heedlessly in willful disregard of the rights or safety of others, or without due caution and at a speed or in a manner so as to endanger any person or property, shall be guilty of reckless driving, and upon conviction shall be punished as provided in the act."

ICE CREAM FIELD ANNOUNCES MEET OF MANUFACTURERS

Addresses on subjects of interest to ice cream manufacturers of Georgia by prominent manufacturers and other business men will feature the 26th annual convention of the National Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers, which will be held in Detroit October 11 to 14, according to the tentative program appearing in the October number of Ice Cream Field, Atlanta publication. This program has just been completed and distributed to the trade journals through Fred Rasmussen, executive secretary of the national association, with headquarters in Harrisburg, Pa.

Speakers at the convention sessions will include Secretary Rasmussen, President W. W. Campbell, of Shreveport; Dr. C. W. Larson, chief of the bureau of dairying of the United States department of agriculture; Merle Thorpe, editor of The Nation's Business, and V. F. Hovey, former president of the National Association of Ice Cream Manufacturer and president of the General Ice Cream corporation, Schenectady, N. Y.

Ice Cream Field will be represented at the Detroit convention by D. A. Loyless, publisher; W. B. Savell, editor; J. M. Gibson, associate editor; Guido Janes, cartoonist, and advertising and subscription representatives.

CLINCH INTERESTED IN REFORESTATION

BY J. O. RODGERS.

Homerville, Ga., October 2.—(Special.)—Development in Clinch county is staying apace with the best in south Georgia. More naval stores are produced in Clinch county than any other county in the United States. A recent survey by parties in Pennsylvania shows that the yellow pine is reproduced faster here than any other part of the country. Plans for reforestation on a large scale have already begun, and it is quite interesting to view a few tracts of 25,000 or more acres and observe the difference in the woung pines where fire has been kept off. The majority of the wealth of the county lies in her naval stores, lumber crossties and cattle.

Homerville is growing rapidly. A $40,000 bond issue was recently voted and the town will soon have a water and sewer system. Plans are being made to bring the hydroelectric line from Waycross to Valdosta into the city by January.

The sidewalks are being built of concrete and several new houses are being erected. Landlords are building whole blocks of houses for rent and people pour into town faster than houses can be provided. The influx of population has been so rapid that a new school building will have to be erected on the campus of the Homerville High school at once to accommodate the pupils.

An ice factory is running on a 24-hour schedule. The local Masons have just let a contract for a new Masonic building, which will cost about $10,000. Real estate is leaping. Fifty feet square was sold a short time ago for $4,000. This was purchased for a gasoline and service station. Another corner lot sold for $5,000. It is very probable that a new hotel will be erected upon this lot.

At DuPont one of the best school buildings in south Georgia is now being completed. This is a consolidated school and is a credit to the people of that community. It would do honor to towns much larger than DuPont.

We are told that the Superior Pine Products company, with home offices at Kalamazoo, Mich., and with offices at Fargo, will center their activities south at Fargo, and will make a $500,000 improvement at Fargo. This will mean much to the town and to Clinch county. The local school board at this place is now considering a bond issue over the consolidated district for a new school building.

On route No. 38, from Homerville to Valdosta, which is a part of the proposed Wilson highway, a contract has been let for grading a road bed from Homerville to DuPont. Two miles have been graded and the right of way for the remainder has been opened. There is a splendid gravel road on the same route to Waycross.

A new highway is contemplated from Douglas to Lake City. This highway passes through Clinch county via Homerville and will open one of the best territories in the wohle state. The road has already been graded and is in fine shape for further improvement.

GIRL TEACHER SELLS DRIVE-UR-SELF AUTO TO PAY HER BILLS

Cambridge, Mass., October 2.—A 25-year-old schoolmarm was held for the grand jury here Saturday as an alleged automobile thief.

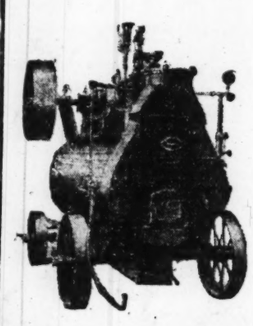

The defendant, Miss Alice May, is charged with hiring a "Drive-Ur-Self" automobile and selling it for $200.

Police told the court the young woman had admitted the charge, explaining she sold the hired machine to raise money to pay some bills.

HARRIS AIDS MOVE TO LOCATE HOME FOR VETS IN SOUTH

Senator William J. Harris Saturday assured Sam C. Crane, secretary of a committee seeking establishment in the south of a national soldiers home for veterans of all wars, that he is making every effort to secure the passage of a bill which he has introduced in congress to appropriate a million dollars for the location of the home in or near Atlanta.

Senator Harris told Mr. Crane that he is heartily in favor of the movement to locate the home here, and will do everything in his power to that end. Mr. Crane pointed out the immediate need for the home in the south, stating to Senator Harris that records at Washington clearly show there are now 3,500 disabled Spanish war veterans entitled by law to enter such a home in the south, and that they desire a home here because of the dangers of a colder climate.

Are You Coming to Visit Atlanta's Great Southeastern Fair?

If you are, you may want to see some things not at the fair. You may be thinking of buying a new engine, saw mill, or other lines of machinery. If so,

The Malsby Co., 49 East Mitchell St. has been operating a high class machinery business in Atlanta for over 35 years. They have thousands of satisfied customers all over the south.

We Invite Everybody to ATLANTA'S GREAT SOUTHEASTERN FAIR

OPENS OCT. 2ND—CLOSES OCT. 9TH

Also we desire to call your attention to the fact that we now have an exhibition of Fall and Winter Dry Goods, Notions and Novelties that will make all our merchant buyers appreciate our selections and our buying ability. It will be to their interest to give us a consideration before closing on all fall purchases. We would rather show you than tell you, so please give US a visit during your visit to Atlanta.

Southeastern Fair-Time Is the Time To Buy

Retail Merchants of the Southeast are invited to attend the Southeastern Fair, Atlanta, October 2nd to 9th. The ATLANTA MERCHANTS & MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION are prepared to help visiting merchants combine pleasure with business, during the week, to the advantage of every buyer.

The Fair will be well worth seeing with its 146 different units, each providing a prize competition and a show complete within itself---and this year more than 260,000 people will "take in the fair . . . with wonder in their eyes."

We'll Pay Your Fare

To Merchants living within a radius of 200 miles of Atlanta whose purchases amount to $1,000 or more railroad fare both ways will be refunded. To Merchants living more than 200 miles from Atlanta whose purchases amount to $1,500 or more railroad fare both ways will be refunded. On purchases of $750 one way will be paid. Less than the above amounts 1 per cent will be paid.

More Than "Just Merchandise"

Atlanta offers something more. Buying from this market assures you---

1. Merchandise especially selected for your needs---priced so that you can turn it quickly at a good proft.
2. Prompt Service---overnight delivery for almost any point in the Southeast. This enables you to carry small stocks and turn them quickly.
3. Save on freight and express. Transportation charges run up big in a year's time. Save on this item now . . . And have the satisfaction of trading at home, keeping your dollars South.

The Odds Are In Favor of Atlanta!

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

The history of Cleone Knox's "Diary of a Young Lady of Fashion" is a story in itself. When first published it was apparently a real diary of the eighteenth century days it told of. If some of the reviewers were a little doubtful of its authenticity, they were all agreed on its vastly entertaining qualities. The next act in the little drama of the book's history was when the front page headlines in the papers revealed that it was the work of a young Irish girl named Magdalen King-Hall, who at the age of 20 had played this delightful prank on the world. The diary has been a best seller from the start and the publishers now report that it is selling better than ever. The truth is that the qualities of entertainment that this witty Irish girl has incorporated into her book are inescapable. As Stuart Sherman said, "The Diary of a Young Lady of Fashion' is as exhilarating as champagne." (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

Magdalen King-Hall, who, under the pen name, "Cleone Knox," wrote "The Diary of a Young Lady of Fashion."

NEW FICTION.

I Want to Be a Lady. By Maximilian Foster, author of "The Whistling Man," etc. This is another western story-romance with Judy Caswell as its heroine—Judy whose hands and heart, too, was full of many things—the memory of the things she had done and those that were looming up big in the future.

Judy came in from her home in a ranch house on Cayuse creek to Pinto to live in a small room second floor back because she wanted to learn more than was possible back in the foothills—among the things that she wanted to be was a lady like those whom she had seen from the east and that was one of the hard lessons she was studying. Another was to make a man out of the town loafer, an easterner, who had touched her heart, but even on the strength of losing him she would not stop, for she was as anxious for him to be a man as she was to be a lady.

"Here's a love story, live and strong as the cathedral's rocky spires under the loom of Painted Horse." (Lippincott's, Philadelphia.)

The Master of the Microbe. By Robert W. Service, author of "The Spell of the Yukon," is another story that is filled with thrills as are only experienced by writers like Mr. Service. The story has Paris for its location and yet he is giving his readers an entirely new plot: "Sinistra." Who is he? What is he? The mystery which surrounds the three chief characters in this thrilling story of Paris life is filled with action, a conspiracy to blot out the map of France, a story so filled with the things that make up a mystery story that the reader will regret its close. (Barse & Hopkins, New York.)

Short Turns. By Barry Benefield, author of "The Chicken Wagon Family," who will find his many readers waiting for another interesting contribution from his pen. It was H. L. Mencken who said that when he and Nathan were editing a popular magazine he could not get enough of Benefield's short stories.

There are fourteen short stories in this book, gay, whimsical, sentimental and humorous—all touching upon life as it is—simple and real. "Mr. Benefield writes sparingly. He writes finely. Three, at least, of the stories in this book are masterpieces." (The Century Co., New York.)

Orpheus With His Lute. By W. M. L. Hutchinson, is the story of Orpheus and Eurydice and how Orpheus came to be the greatest minstrel of all time.

Illustration by Dugald Stewart Walker for "Orpheus With His Lute." Miss Hutchinson, the author, was for some years an associate of Newnham college, Cambridge—a body of forty-eight elected from past students of Newnham calculated to advance education research or learning. While in Cambridge she specialized in Pindar and Tacitus. She is also the author of "The Golden Porch," illustrated by Dugald Stewart Walker. (Longman, Green & Co., New York.)

The War God Walks Again. By Captain Britten Austin, whose stories tell in vivid words what is likely to occur when nations clash again. The author served through the great war in the British army. The question is asked "Will the art of dealing out death show the same advance over the great war as the great war did over the civil war?" (Doubleday, Page & Co., New York.)

Her Mother's Daughter. A powerful romance of social struggle, by Nalbro Bartley, who writes romances of great appeal and very frankly describes the social life of America's cities and towns in the present day. The story is filled with human characters and it carries an appeal that will not fail to interest.

There are three outstanding figures in the story—the mother, who left her country for America longing for freedom; her daughter, on whom was lavished every luxury, every wish was granted, and Tag, purely masculine, who plays an important role in this story. (Doran's, New York.)

The Women of the Family. By Margaret Culkin Banning, whose books have always received a warm welcome from her many readers. Of this story it is said: "The book has two great appeals. It is a story of deep emotional power." The author whose deep understanding of men and women, especially of the problems of love and marriage, has based her new story on the problems that are to be faced by the women in each family of each generation. Can this problem be averted? Can happiness be saved? Can a successful marriage be brought about for each member of a family? These are the questions that Mrs. Banning has selected on which to build a real and fearless story. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

The Valley of Adventure. By George W. Ogden, who has located this splendid story in California in the days of the missions. He writes of the time when this wonderland was opened by Padre Junipero Serra and his heroic band of "Little Brothers of the Poor." It is a splendid story by the author of "Trails End." (A. C. McClurg & Co., New York.)

The Big Mogul. By Joseph C. Lincoln, author of "Rugged Water" and several other splendid stories that have made him one of the most popular writers. This story is woven around the village magnate who was called the Big Mogul. His home was the only mansion in the little town, and he stood out as the leading citizen though he was a well mixed combination of selfishness, generosity, tyranny, kindness, etc. This describes Captain Foster Townsend, who had risen to his position of wealth and influence through many days of hard work and many sleepless nights.

It is a real drama. The chapters are filled with humor, understanding and real interest, and then comes romance which surrounds the Big Mogul's charming niece. It is one of the best stories of the year and no better weaver of successful romance can be found than Mr. Lincoln. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

Lief, the Lucky. By Clara Sharpe Hough, whose novel of the great Norse explorers is history. The setting is 500 years before Columbus started out on his searching trip. The central figure in this most interesting story is Lief, the Lucky, son and heir of Eric, the Red, and Gudrid, whom Lief loved.

It was a deep conflict between Lief and his brother Thorwald, and the author has never written a story of more force, action and unrest than in her description of the Norse explorers who set their prows toward the unknown ocean. (The Century Co., New York.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

The Spokesman's Secretary. Being the letters of Mame to Mom, by Upton Sinclair. Just at this time it will be thoroughly enjoyed as it tells of American political life from the inside. Published by the author. Pasadena, California.

One of The Family. A comedy in three acts. By Kenneth Webb, a playwright who comes of a theatrical family. The play has won success on Broadway. D. Appleton & Co. New York.

200 Tricks You Can Do. By Howard Thurston, the magician, and it is written for the beginner in magic. George Sully & Co. New York.

What the Queen Said. And further facetious fragments. By Stoddard King. George H. Doran Co. New York.

Singing Rawhide. By Harold Hersey, with drawings by Jerry Delano. These are ballads of ranch life and lonely trails, which have been chanted over camp fires and fire-place logs for many years and will be for many years to come. Doran's.

Winnowed Wisdom. By Stephen Leacock, author of so many interesting and humorous sketches that he is called the Canadian Mark Twain. Some one has said that a new book by Leacock "is a joy forever."

No more interesting, original and humorous sayings have ever been written than is expressed by the author in "Winnowed Wisdom." It is up to date, for he describes the foibles and follies of 1925-1926, especially, and then come the English tourists, the English visitors, the real use of the dandelion, proverbs, etc. Dodd Mead & Co. New York.

Parties That Are Different. By Ethel Owen, who has just written the kind of book of instructions that a big girl and even a little girl needs. There are 12 parties described, each of which will mean an occasion of much pleasure. There are three illustrations in color, all being an original feature that will add interest. The Abdingon Press. New York.

Prose and Cons. By Irvin S. Cobb, another great humorist in whom the people delight. His sayings are original, and so full of humor that they are never forgotten but serve a good purpose as fillers from the private stag party to convention hall.

First, Irvin Cobb describes the Prose which is a collection of entertaining stories in which our old friend, Judge Priest, makes his reappearance.

Second, he says, are the "Cons," which represent "bits of serious foolishment," among them being a few sayings on "Long Pants—Shakespeare's Seven Ages—and Mine." George H. Doran Co. New York.

The Book of Pioneers. By Everett T. Tomlinson, whose stories of "True Adventures of Famous American Pioneers" will be read and remembered for they tell the story of the hardships endured by our American forefathers as well as the courage and bravery which laid the foundation for America—it covers the scouting, the trailing, the working, all of which tells of the colorful and active life of the pioneers of America. D. Appleton & Co. New York.

THIS BELIEVING WORLD.

This is a simple account of the great religions of mankind. It is written and illustrated by Dr. Lewis Browne, a well-known Hebrew writer, who wrote "Why I Am a Spiritual Vagabond," etc. (MacMillan company, New York.)

RELIGIOUS BOOKS.

A Practical Faith. By Rev. Harold Anson, who is rector of the well-known church, St. Martin's-in-the Fields, London, and he has also been a select preacher at Cambridge university. He also frequently preaches for Maude Royden at the Guild House, Eccleston Square, London. (The Century Co., New York.)

Scientific Spiritual Healing. By William T. Walsh. Foreword by Rt. Rev. Arthur Selden Lloyd, D. D., Bishop Suffragan, Diocese of New York. (Appleton.)

Religion and Morbid Mental States. By H. I. Shou, M. D., a lecturer at Copenhagen university as well as at the head of nervous diseases at a well known place in Denmark. He has written a series of articles for Danish and other scientific journals. (The Century Co., New York.)

Troubadours of Paradise. By Sister M. Eleanore, who tells that the golden age of the troubadours was the Middle Ages. The author who has written a number of books is dean of English, St. Mary's College, Notre Dame, Indiana. She is also a regular contributor to magazines on literary and religious subjects, and she has "brightened these pages by the simple religion of living." (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

A HISTORY IN VERSE.

The sesquicentennial celebration now in full sway in Philadelphia has recalled the history of our country in many ways, even to the mind of the average person who is more than apt to live solely in the present.

One of these ways is in calling our attention to the various phases of American verse, which not only in colonial times but as recently as the late world war, has found its most inspiring source in patriotism!

Frederick Lawrence Knowles' volume, "Poems of American Patriotism," has long been the standard collection of poems inspired by the Revolutionary war, the war of 1912, the war with Mexico, the Civil war and the war with Spain. But now, with the present edition, the work rises to a higher sphere of usefulness by the inclusion of a whole section devoted to verse portraying the part played by this country in the world war. (L. C. Page & Co.)

Magdalen King-Hall, who under the pen name, Cleone Knox, wrote the "Diary of a Young Lady of Fashion," when asked about the raveled looking dog with her in her first photograph to reach America, replied, "Blaney, the Kerry Blue is a great pet. He looks in the photo as if he had written the 'Diary'. I expect it would have been much cleverer if he had, as he is awfully intelligent. His only faults are that he is inclined to be snobbish and takes offense too easily. I have also a ginger Irish terrier to whom I have just this moment given a bath, much to his disgust. A very good natured little fellow generally, but rather cross at the moment. I think the picture is a good likeness of me, though I never come out very well. It makes me look quite a brunette, while in real life my complexion is very fair."

Sinclair Lewis in Minnesota. Sinclair Lewis has established himself in a small bungalow on the shores of a fresh-water lake in Minnesota while he is gathering together material for his next novel. In this new work he will return to the manner of "Main Street," "Babbit," and "Arrowsmith."

Mrs. C. K. Ogden, the editor of the International Library of Psychology, Philosophy, and Scientific Method, published by Harcourt, Brace & Co., has returned to England from a visit of several months' duration in the United States, where he has been investigating scientific activity. While in Europe he will attend the British association meeting at Oxford and the International Psychological congress at Amsterdam. He will return to the United States in September.

High Speed Cable, Germany-New York Reaches Azores

Berlin, October 2.—(AP)—The cable ship Neptune today reached Fayal island, in the Azores, completing the Emden-Fayal stretch of the new high speed cables from Germany to New York. The two ends will be connected about October 16.

The cable will be operated by the German Atlantic Telegraph company in conjunction with the Western Union and Commercial Cable interests.

EMORY DEBATE SEASON TO OPEN OCTOBER 29

BY SANDY CLOWER.

Emory University, Ga., October 2. (Special.)—As the cutrain raiser to what is expected to be the geratest debate program ever planned by the debate council of Emory university, three of Emory's best debaters, picked by the faculty committee on public speaking, for the second time will clash with three of Oxford university's most brilliant performers in a classic forensic tilt on October 29 at Emory. The three men picked by the committee to meet the Englishmen are David A. Lockmiller, of Athens, Tenn.; Glenn M. Elliott, of Fayetteville, and Warren Cox, Emory, son of the president.

Composing the Oxford team are Gyles Isham, of Magdalen college; Patrick Monkhouse, of Trinity college, and Michael A. E. Franklin.

The debate with the English university will be held under the rules of the Oxford union which leaves the decision as to the winner of the debate to the vote of the audience. Last year the audience voted in favor of the side upon which there were two Emory debators and one Oxfordian.

According to Professor Nolan A. Goodyear, chairman of the debate council of the university and the faculty committee on public speaking, debates have already been arranged with the University of Florida, Furman, the University of North Carolina, University of Tennessee, Southern Methodist university, University of Alabama, Duke and Tulane. An eastern trip to be made by a team of Emory's best debators to be chosen later is under consideration. The terminus of this proposed trip would be either Princeton or one of the other large eastern universities.

At a meeting of the debate council of the university today, Glenn M. Elliott was elected as secretary of the debate council and David A. Lockmiller was chosen vice chairman.

Emory's debate record last year was excellent, the Gold and Blue teams having won 12 debates and lost only five to their opponents. With the majority of the old members of the debating squad back this year, and much new material from the freshman class of last year having shown much promise, optimism in favor of an even greater debate record for this year is quite prevalent.

RANGE IN NEW ORLEANS COTTON.
New Orleans, October 2.—Cotton futures closed barely steady at a net decline of 52 to 55 points.

May	13.88	13.90	13.58	13.58	14.12

New York, October 2.—(AP)—The trend toward increased estimates of the crop and the continued heavy movement of cotton in the south were reflected in further declines of about half a cent in the market today. December contracts sold off to 13.27, or 51 points net lower and nearly 5 cents a pound below the high level of September 8, the market closing easy at new declines of 48 to 52 points.

The opening was easy in a decline of 5 to 27 points under a renewal of general selling inspired by the relatively easy showing of Liverpool and belief that the southern selling reflected continued free offerings of spot cotton in the southern markets. There was a good deal of trade buying on scale down orders and considerable covering by recent sellers, who appeared to be taking profits at the lower level of prices.

Demand was readily supplied on slight bulges, however, and the lowest prices of the day and movement were reached in late trading, when October sold at 13.40 and January at 13.33, active months showing net losses of 48 to 52 points.

Another private crop report estimated the condition 58.2 and the indicated yield 15,446,000 bales. This was below the official mid-September indication, but showed an increase over the figures issued by the same private authority two weeks ago and seemed to increase confidence in the larger estimates of the yield.

Liverpool cables attributed the decline in the market there to increased hedge selling and liquidation caused by reports of more favorable weather in the south.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 235,000 bales against 102,000 the same week last year, but the prospect for large exports next week seemed to attract little attention. The market appeared to be quietly influenced by reports of continued heavy hedge selling against the new crop movement.

SPOTS IN NEW YORK.
New York, October 2.—(AP)—Cotton spot quiet, middling 13.70.

TRADING HEAVY AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, October 2.—(AP)—The short Saturday session was a very attractive affair, trading being heavy and prices experienced an important decline which at one time amounted to 60 points or $3 a bale compared with the close of yesterday. The depressing influences were the continued favorable weather in the belt, increasing crop views and heavy hedge selling against the expanding movement of cotton in the interior. As cables were lower than due at the start and as the weather as shown by the map was favorable, the market opened 16 to 22 points down and prices continued on the downgrade throughout the session with only brief rallies on trade buying, until near the close prices showed losses of 54 to 60 points. The close was near the bottom and called barely steady, showing net losses for the day of 52 to 55 points.

First trades here were at 13.45 for October; 13.60 for December and 13.62 for January, and these initial prices proved to be the highs of the day. Within the first half hour October dropped to 13.36; December to 13.46, and January to 13.57, or 27 to 30 below the previous close. The market then rallied 4 to 7 points but soon eased off again to 13.28 for December, or 48 points down, from which there was a rally of 10 points which did not hold.

All the active months made new lows near the end with October at 13.03; December at 13.22 and January at 13.27, or 54 to 60 points under the previous close. The close was within a few points of the bottom.

SPOTS IN NEW ORLEANS.
New Orleans, October 2.—(AP)—Spot cotton closed steady; quotations revised. Middling 50 points down. Sales 9,806; low middling 10:43; middling 12.93; good middling 13.43.

CURB RETAINING UPWARD TREND

New York, October 2.—(By the Associated Press.)—While the upward movement was continued in the main list of securities on the curb exchange at the opening today and quotations in a few instances lifted 3 to 5 points, there were sharp reactions elsewhere and selling in others modified early advances.

The widest movement was a drop of 32 points in the opening trading in Ford Motor of Canada. Warner Brothers Pictures lost about 3 points. Prominence on the upturn consisted of a 3-point advance in Du Pont new, which rose to a new high at 10 1-2 and a 5-point sharp upturn in Travelers Insurance.

In the public utility list American Gas and Southeastern Power were in demand at rising levels.

Oil shares held steady with the exception of Galena Signal which dropped to a new low at 13 1-2, and Reiter Foster which yielded about a point to 15 1-2. Newpo: Mining rose 3 points to a new high at 76.

During the week, the curb market was irregular. Many stocks were under pressure in the first few days but increased demand was in evidence from many sources in the last half of the week and a broadening tendency which developed then became most pronounced in Friday's trading when a long list of stocks was established at new high levels. Apparently the market had been held in check because of the contraction of banking accommodation in connection with the October first disbursements and there was the usual mild uneasiness over action the federal reserve board might take on Thursday. When discount rate was left unchanged at 4 per cent, however, many of those who had been heavy sellers at low levels joined in a buying movement and helped along the sharp advances which were in progress when the week ended.

DuPont was on of the leading features all through the week moving up over 14 points to its new high record and Borg & Beck, one of the comparatively inactive issues had a gain of 24 3-4 points at 55. Victor Talking Machine was another record breaker moving up over 3 points.

Oil stocks were heavy for a time but also became strong toward the end of the week. There were heavy sales in many of the leading bond issues. Stutz Motor 7 1-2s was a weak feature in that group.

Rice.

New Orleans, October 2.—Rough rice active; sales 1,725 Blue Rose, $2.50@4.26; 96 Edith, $2.75; receipts, 7,069.

Bran and Polish unchanged.

Cotton Oil Futures.

New Orleans, October 2.—The market for cotton oil futures was again easier today in sympathy with the further decline in cotton and prices were rather unsettled and contracts were lower than spot crude. Prime summer yellow oil closed at 9 cents or down 23 points and prime crude closed at 8 cents. Futures closed quiet. BUTTER MARKET BECOMES FIRMER

Chicago, October 2.—(AP)—Due mostly to decreased supplies and in part to more liberal buying by jobbers and distributors, the butter market during the week assumed a firmer situation. Trading early was not active and the market followed a course similar to that which prevailed throughout almost all September. An undertone of confidence, however, developed which by Thursday resulted in an advance of from quarter cent on 92 scores to 1 cent on 90 score centralized cars at Chicago. Eastern markets were in considerably firmer position.

With the development of an improved tone, buyers for immediate distribution trade, showed more interest and began taking on heavier stocks in anticipation of future requirements and advancing prices. Receipts at the four markets were considerable lighter than the previous week and were not sufficient to meet current requirements of the trade.

All markets felt this gradual decrease in supplies but dealers were at first reluctant to advance prices.

The lighter receipts of fresh butter increased the problems of the buyers and distributors, causing many to turn to storage butter for their supplies. This practice relieved the situation on fresh butter to some extent but not entirely so.

Consumptive outlets in practically all quarters are reported as quite satisfactory.

RAILROADS BUYING HEAVILY OF STEEL

New York, October 2.—(AP)—While the buying of steel during the month of September was largely for nearby delivery, there were no evidences of a falling off in requirements and the total month's sales were very satisfactory. The railroads have recently come into the market for a large tonnage of rails and other equipment and the outlook for October was considered very encouraging. Shipments during the month were heavy and apparently in excess of new bookings. Prices were steadily maintained. Pig iron was irregular and where concessions were obtainable the volume of new business was large.

The copper market has shown no change of importance. Rumors that the proposed copper export association would probably begin to function within the next three or four weeks have evidently failed to stimulate buying abroad and after placing some business at the 14 1-4 cent level, buyers for domestic consumption again withdrew. Electrolytic is reported still available at the 14 1-4 level deliverd at Connecticut Valley points.

Tin reached the highest level since war days, due to the realization that far east shipments continue to lag behind consumptive requirements. Monthly statistics were about in line with expectations. Buying by consumers has been confined to urgent nearby needs.

Lead quotations were reduced, despite continued good demand, owing to the easier trend west and the drop in London.

Zinc was dull and prices easier under increased offerings.

Early declines in antimony led to a little better demand toward the end of the week, particularly for futures and a steadier tone developed with some improvement in prices.

Sugar.

New York, October 2.—Sugar futures closed quiet; approximate sales 10,600 tons; December 2.86; January 2.87; March 2.81; May 2.89; July 2.97.

Total bond sales (par value), $4,734,000.

New York, October 2.—(AP)—The bond market drifted rather aimlessly in today's quiet session. The biggest changes took place on the downside, but this was due more to an absence of bids taken than a pressure to sell as the turnover in most issues was exceedingly small. The general average of prices is now around the highest levels since 1917, so that a breathing spell is natural in view of the uncertainty over the trend of money rates this fall.

Heaviness of several of the Central and South American issues featured the foreign group. French liens displayed a firm undertone. The prospect of a large offering of German railroad bonds in this country continued to attract widespread interest.

Standard railroad liens held firm in response to record-breaking earnings and traffic statements, but some sharp declines took place in a number of ordinarily inactive issues.

Cleveland Short Line 4 1-2 dropped 2 5-8 points on one sale, and net declines of a point or more took place in Iowa Central 4s, Louisville Railway 5s and Detroit River Tunnel 4 1-2s.

Industrials were mixed. Copper company issues were in better demand, but some of the rubber company liens were in supply.

A point drop in Federal Light & Traction 6s was the only development of consequence in the public utility sections.

U. S. government issues held steady.

Cartwright Urges Building Industrial Homes in Winter

Erection of industrial buildings in winter is recommended by F. P. Cartwright, building engineer of the National Lumber Manufacturers' association, as a means of relieving the curtailment of construction due to cold weather. In the following article, written by Mr. Cartwright for the lumber association, the reasons why cold weather interferes less with the construction of industrial buildings than with the building of dwellings is outlined:

"Construction statistics indicate a gradual shift in volume from residential and office buildings to industrial and commercial buildings. The building industry, it would appear, must look to factory and mills construction for a good part of its activity through the coming winter. With this in mind, it is not too early to remind builers and industrial executives of the possibilities of winter construction in this field.

Additional Expenditures.

"The additional expenditures involved in witner construction, if indeed there are such added costs, are relatively less important for large industrial buildings than for dwellings. The cost of a watchman to keep heating appliances in operation, or the additional plant to warm materials, is a more important factor for a house, than for a large structure, where a night watchman usually is employed at any time of year, and where the ratio of value to heating plant costs is high.

"Industrial plants of certain types are also less subject to winter damage than the dwelling, with its thin masonry walls and long period of plastering. Both structural steel and heavy timber framework, though difficult of erection on particularly stormy days, are practically immune to frost. Thick plank floors, much used for mill and factory buildings, can be installed regardless of temperature, and do not need to be protected for a considerable period before strength is attained.

"Masonry walls, used generally with steel and heavy timber framing, must be protected until the mortar has set, after which, if properly designed for future live loads, their strength will be found sufficient for all normal requirements. Brick can absorb much heat and retain it for a considerable period, as all who cherish sleigh ride recollections can testify, and if reasonable care is taken, the mortar will set before freezing. Frozen mortar should never be mistaken for mortar which has set, for the wall will entirely disintegrate as does concrete when warmer weather thaws out the material.

Rapidity of Erection.

"Rapidity of erection is of much importance in winter construction when working days are relatively fewer than in summer, and advantage must be taken of every oportunity to complete the structure. From this viewpoint heavy timber construction presents a marked advantage, for the building can rise as rapidly as men can lay brick and drive nails. One story does not need time to gain strength before another is placed upon it, and the connections of beams and columns are so simple that they can be made very rapidly. Complete exclusion of plaster and fireproofing from such buildings also makes for speed of construction. As the work is confined to a few building trades crafts the problem of labor relations is comparatively simple.

"Taken in connection with its relative economy of cost, the advantages of slow burning, heavy timber construction for winter conditions merit careful consideration by prospective builders."

Haynes Manor Dwelling Is Being Built To Serve as Model in Home Construction

Model Home In Haynes Manor.

Construction of a home on Peachtree Battle avenue, in Haynes Manor, to serve as a model in dwelling structure and equipment for Atlanta, is proceeding rapidly, according to officials of Better Homes, Inc., the builders.

Plans for the structure, which will be owned by T. L. Windham, were prepared by R. Kennon Perry, architect. An ideal of Mr. Windham's of several years standing—to build a home of the best materials and workmanship, sparing no expense and omitting no modern improvement—is to be realized in this model home, it was stated.

The style of architecture is English, with a strong Gothic influence, which is said to be combined unusually well with modern conveniences and the latest ideas regarding arrangement of rooms. The home will contain 17 rooms, with several baths, and will cost from $75,000 to $85,000, it was stated. Motion pictures are now being made of the construction work and it is planned to have these films shown at local theaters as soon as the structure is completed.

Selected Materials.

Especial care has been taken in selection of materials, according to Mr. Windham, who stated that all details are being carefully supervised, with the intention of making the completed structure as perfect a home as is possible. The foundations and walls are composed of stone tile manufactured by Keeling-Cassidy Brick company, the interior of the outer walls and the ceilings are covered with Armstrong cork insulation. The roof is Ludowii-Celadon interlocking hand made roofing tile, supplied by Applewhite and Lawler. Windows are of steel sash, manufactured by the Detroit Steel Products company, and the baths, sun parlor and kitchen will be of Faience tile, installed by the Atlanta Tile and Marble company. Plumbing fixtures, supplied by the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing company, are being installed by Mitchell Plumbing company, while the quartered-oak floors were manufactured by the Atlanta Oak Flooring company.

Materials and Equipment.

The Live Wire Electric company, of Decatur, is installing the wiring system, and fixtures are to be selected from the stock of the Carter Electric company. The lumber and millwork is being supplied by W. B. Disbro Lumber company, and the heating equipment is the Pierce, Butler and Pierce vapor system, with Warren-Webster specialties, sold through the Walker Supply company. The home will be equipped with a Kleen-Heat oil-burning apparatus, and the screen doors and weather stripping will be installed by Floyd Brothers company. One of the outstanding features of the home is a Sanotype incinerator for the disposal of garbage. It was supplied by the Equipment company. Another attractive feature is the use of Corbin building hardware, supplied by Walraven company.

Other materials and equipment, which with the above indicate Mr. Windham's ideal in home building, include a model Walker dishwasher, installed by the Walker Sales company; a Servel electric refrigerator, decorations and furnishings by J. M. High company; Bishopric stucco and sunfast finish for the exterior, manufactured by the Bishopric Manufacturing company, and three carloads of Georgia marble, supplied by the Georgia Marble company.

REALTY BODY HOLDS SECOND LECTURE SERIES ON LAW

At the second of the series of lectures dealing with real estate law, held at the office of the Atlanta Real Estate board Thursday afternoon, September 30, W. D. Thomson, of the law firm of Candler, Thomson & Hirsch, was the principal speaker, and his subject was "Limitations Upon Property, Both Public and Private."

Mr. Thompson outlined different phases of limitations on property applying to the public and constitutional rights of the individual, county, state, city and police power.

More than forty members of the Real Estate board were present at this lecture and all attending were unanimous in expressing to Mr. Thomson their appreciation of his helpful talk and the many benefits they received from his discussion of the subject in question.

The third of the series of lectures will be held at the office of the board next Thursday, October 7, and the speaker will be George Starr Peck, attorney, who will use as his subject "Transfer of Rights in Property." Mr. Peck has had a great many years' experience in dealing with this phase of the law.

The speakers for this series of lectures are being furnished by the Atlanta Title and Trust company, of which the president, Mr. Davis, stated that it is his desire to see that every lecture given will be one with many helpful suggestions and delivered in a way that can be understood easily by real estate salesmen attending.

Dana Belser, president of the Real Estate bord, and E. M. Chapman, chairman of the associate members' division, both stated that they were pleased with the interest the members are taking in this course of lectures. They urge a large attendance at each meeting and for all to be on time as they begin promptly at 4:45 o'clock.

VACANT PROPERTY SHOULD BE KEPT CLEAN—MAXHAM

Advantages to be gained by the property owner and in the general appearance of the city by keeping vacant stores clear of all out-of-date posters is stressed in the following article by A. J. Maxham, of the real estate department of Session Loan & Trust company.

"The city beautiful is a thought that should be implanted in the minds of every good citizen. This thought is brought to us very forcibly by the fact that a great many property owners allow posters, show bills and advertisements of that nature to be plastered on the fronts and in the windows of their vacant property. These advertisements, in case of continued vacancy, are left there until they are out of date, discolored and generally presenting a disreputable appearance.

"There seems to be an idea that the passerby, looking for vacant space, will be attracted by the display, and not overlook the "For Rent" signs. From observation I firmly believe just the opposite psychology is the result. In my opinion the practice of plastering the windows and walls of stores, leaving the doors and windows open, and otherwise disfiguring the location, is a mistake. It cheapens the prospect and reduces the chance of rental at least 25 per cent.

"During 1925 there were 83 new concerns located in Atlanta. During the first seven months of this year we have something like 87. In order to take care of the new business naturally new places will be opened. This gives an opportunity for these vacancies to become producing property. They should be kept attractive.

"By keeping them presentable, we believe the opportunity for rentals will be increased."

PHONE CO. TO REVISE RATES IN FLORIDA

Tallahassee, Fla., October 2.—(AP)—The Florida railroad commission today gave the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company permission to revise its telephone rates at West Palm Beach, effective November 1.

TORRANCE JOINS ADAIR COMPANY REALTY FORCES

Cobb C. Torrance, well-known in real estate and insurance circles of Atlanta and Florida, recently announced his connection with the real estate department of the Adair Realty and Trust company.

COBB C. TORRANCE.

Mr. Torrance returned to Atlanta last week after witnessing the fury of the storm in Miami, Fla., where for two years he was a member of the real estate firm of Weller-Torrance, Inc. Prior to that time he was associated with his father, B. W. Torrance, in the insurance business in Atlanta.

Mr. Torrance was born in Columbus, Ga., but lived most of his life in Atlanta. He graduated from the University of Georgia with the class of 1921 and is a popular member of the younger set of the city, in addition to having a wide business acquaintance. Mr. Torrance will specialize in the sale of north side property for the Adair company.

MANY LOTS SOLD IN SUB-DIVISION FOR COLORED FOLK

Atlanta's subdivision for colored people is now well under way, according to reports from the W. R. Sheppard company.

Most of the roadways are already completed and the cindering will start Monday or Tuesday of next week. The concrete walks are already down on a number of the blocks and as soon as the cinders are laid, work on the concrete walks will continue, it was stated.

Several contracts for the erection of homes have been received this week and the W. R. Sheppard company reports good results by the new crew of salesmen placed on this colored property.

Joyland park, as it is known, is located on section of South Forsyth street less than one-half mile beyond the city limits and on high rolling ground. Every lot is 40x100 feet, and there are very few lots in the entire property that do not have an attractive lay.

Along with the selling plans for Joyland park are especially arranged purchasing terms which make the buying of lots within the reach of all, as explained by the officials of the company. Another attraction, which was announced to be carried out withing the next three weeks is a barbecue.

The better class of colored people to get away from the noise and dirt of the city, are flocking to Joyland park, officials revealed with the statement that 46 lots had been sold. Plans to remodel the present Joyland park dancing pavillion into a model clubhouse were made known. This clubhouse sets in a grove of beautiful shade trees and the contemplated erection of a bathing pool adjoining the club grounds will afford particular advantages for colored home-seekers.

REALTY BOARD PLANS AUTUMN LUNCHEONS

At the meeting of the luncheon committee of the Real Estate board, called by Jesse Draper, chairman; George L. Harrison and N. J. Wooding, Jr., at the offices of the board, preparation for the regular luncheons that are to be held in interest of the association members up to December were made, according to announcement Saturday by Dana Belser, president of the board.

The luncheon day was set for Tuesday of every other week, beginning October 12, and the place will be the Atlanta Athletic club.

Jesse Draper stated that his committee desires to secure speakers to talk on special real estate subjects, and that at a later date he will announce the speaker, subject and details for the luncheon to be held on October 12.

M. S. Rankin, chairman of the rental committee of the board, stated that a meeting of all members of the Real Estate board who do a renting business was held at 17 Poplar street Wednesday morning for the purpose of discussing ways and means in which the rental business could be made more effective and render a better service to the property owner and tenant.

More than 25 members of the board do a rental business. Mr. Rankin stated he was pleased with the attendance at the meeting and that from time to time other meetings would be held for the purpose of discussing important subjects pertaining to the renting business, so as to offer these members an opportunity to become familiar with modern methods of property management. The meeting lasted for practically one hour, and there were 19 firm members of the board represented.

St Jean de Luz, France, October 2.—(AP)—The Spanish border has again been placed under close watch from the Spanish side, leading to reports here of important happenings.

MISS HINMAN SELECTED PLAYGROUND DIRECTOR

Miss Dorothy Hinman has been selected to take the post as director of Atlanta playgrounds succeeding Miss Margaret Camp, resigned, and Saturday began her duties of the position. She will pilot the destinies of the year-round play program for Atlanta.

Miss Hinman holds a diploma from the Posse-Nissen School of Gymnasts, of Boston, and has taken special training at the University of California and is well fitted to assume leadership of the new program, John A. White, chairman of the parks committee, stated Saturday.

She was valedictorian of her class at Boston and for the past three summers has held responsible playground posts in the east. Her activities were crowned with unusual success at Carney's Point, N. J., Waterbury, Conn., and Apollo, Pa., and she has been identified with Girl Scout camps in different sections of the country.

Miss Camp was forced to relinquish her post because of an automobile injury she received in the summer which left her in a weakened physical condition, she said on her retirement.

SEVERAL ARE INJURED IN MINOR ACCIDENTS

Hattie Stanley, 7, of Fayetteville, Ga., was badly bruised and cut when knocked down by an automobile Saturday afternoon at Simpson and Lambert streets, according to hospital records. The automobile that injured the child was driven by Roy R. Withrow, 886 Crew street, who stopped his car, took the injured child to the hospital and then reported the accident to police.

According to a report filed by Call Officers J. A. Brown and M. D. Cartwright, Mrs. Minnie Stanley, mother of the child, requested that no case be made against the driver of the car.

D. F. Duke, 1257 Highland avenue, and his young son, were slightly injured early Saturday night in a collision between an automobile driven by Duke and a street car at South Pryor and East Mitchell streets.

The street car was operated by Motorman D. E. Denman, according to a report of Patrolman J. F. Welchel, who stated that Duke's car also crashed into a parked automobile belonging to E. R. Yow, of 6 St. Paul avenue. No case was made.

John Skundale, 22, of 232 Central avenue, was mashed and bruised when knocked from his motorcycle by a truck at Pryor and Garnett streets, Saturday afternoon, according to hospital records.

Skundale was taken to Grady hospital, where doctors stated that although he was badly hurt he was not dangerously injured.

The accident was investigated by Motorcycle Officers Harris and Schilling, who were furnished with a description of the truck which injured Skundale, but at a late hour Saturday night no arrests had been made.

D. M. Haire and J. T. Ragsdale, both of College Park, were shaken up and bruised in a collision Saturday night at Peachtree and Currier street between an automobile, in which they were riding and a street car, according to police records. The name of the street car motorman was not learned by Motorcycle Officers Harris and Schilling, who investigated the mishap.

Families Flee From Residences As Rivers Rise

Chicago, October 2.—(AP)—Hundreds of families fled from their homes in the Illinois river valley today as the Mississippi and Illinois rivers approached or exceeded flood stage with levees at the breaking point. Two lives were lost in the valley region.

Helen Hanson, 11, of Drake station, near Whitehall, La., was drowned in the flood waters of Hurricane creek when her father attempted to carry her to safety when the Hanson home was threatened. Louis Mead, 33, of Clarksdale, was killed by lightning when a bolt struck a school building in which he had sought shelter.

Second Flood Threatens.

At Jacksonville the second big flood in two days threatened when rain began falling in torrents at 3 o'clock. The city is without commercial lights and its gas supply is almost exhausted. The chamber of commerce ordered all business houses closed at 6 p. m.

Nearly twenty-five families of Liverpool, Chautauqua and East Liverpool were driven to the hills with their personal effects as the Illinois river rose.

South Beardstown was virtually vacated during the day as the river rose and stopped bridge traffic and forced the use of a ferry.

The southern quarter of Naples was flooded, forcing many families to evacuate.

The Illinois river rose fifteen inches at Naples where train service was interrupted and the pumping plant shut down.

The townspeople used row boats to get to the stores.

Build Temporary Levees.

Volunteers spent the day building temporary levees around Liverpool on both sides of the river, where it was declared even a slight wind would wreck them. Appeals were sent to the government ship yard at Peoria for aid. At Peoria the river passed flood stages of 22.2 feet last night.

Rivers and creeks in southern Kansas inundated farm lands for the second time this fall, swelled by rain which began yesterday afternoon. The Santa Fe and Missouri Pacific railroads were halted near Sedan and Mictate, Kansas. Little Caney and Middle Caney creeks near Sedan reached their highest stage since 1884. The Verdigers and Elk rivers were still rising tonight.

AUTO LICENSE SALES IN GEORGIA GROWING

Revenue from automobile license taxes in Georgia for the fiscal nine months of this year totaled approximately $400,000 more than the same period for last year and the registration of automobiles show that there are 32,433 more cars in the state this year.

There were 7,794 passenger cars licensed in the state in September and 1,101 trucks. Total collections amounted to $58,166.69 during the month as compared with $54,136.78 last year. Total collections for the year up through September were $3,326,398.52. For the first nine months of 1925 the license tax amounted to $2,933,124.84.

Registration of passenger cars for this year is 234,522 and 31,234 trucks, officials of the state motor license bureau announced.

MACON IS SELECTED BY CHIROPRACTORS

Macon, Ga., October 2.—(AP)—Macon was selected for the next convention of the Georgia Chiropractic association at the closing session of that body today. The next meeting will be held in April.

Dr. H. G. Bowden, of Atlanta, was unanimously reelected president of the association. Other officers are: Doctors J. R. Wainwright, of Millen, first vice president; A. R. Smellie, Atlanta, second vice president; M. E. Hall, Columbus, secretary and treasurer; F. A. Strobel, Thomasville chairman of the board of direcotrs; E. L. Morris, Augusta, and J. M. Burgess, Statesboro, members of the board of directors.

The state board of chiropractors will meet here Monday to examine applicants for license.

"MY LIFE STORY"

Written by Rudolph Valentino

Here is the "Master Lover," Rudolph Valentino, in a romantic scene with Vilma Banky in "The Son of the Sheik," his last screen picture.

29TH INSTALLMENT.

It was raining like blazes, if there is such a thing. And in such a state we started off, stopping for luncheon at one of those small villages right in the province where Chianti is made. It was one very fortuitous touch. From there, warmed by the Chianti, we proceeded. I wanted to make Rome by afternoon, but I couldn't do it on that road. There were too many turns, and while I might have achieved the feat had I been alone, auntie and Natacha had me pretty well trained and amenable by this time.

I facetiously observed that Rome was not reached in a day, and Natacha said that she very devoutly hoped not.

About 10 o'clock at night we drove up to the very best hotel in a small village and then I set about finding a garage, in a place where the motor car steams through too seldom to make a garage one of the daily necessities.

An Exasperating Search.

I had a time of my own in finding that garage. What I first found, after a long search, was an ancient stable. Then I discovered that the door was not wide enough for the car to enter.

Finally, after further long search, and after waking up three or four families (10 o'clock is the middle of the night there) we found a stable, a little larger than the others, and so we could put the car up.

Oh yes, before putting up for the night, we went by Sienna and as we went by we saw an antique shop which somewhat attracted our attention, as antique things (and persons) always do. We stopped, went inside and were lucky enough to find at this place, and at a ridiculous price, a marvelous period copy of "Anne of Cleves," by Holbein.

A Rare Treasure.

There are only two originals extant, and mine is one of them. All the others were burned in the collection at Windsor castle at the time of the fire there. Our copy is almost quite priceless. We were as gleeful as small children would be if, digging one day on some small, insignificant beach, they should suddenly happen upon the treasure of Captain Kidd. I have often thought, in passing how much mystery, thrill and fun would go out of the lives of American children if that fabulous treasure should ever, indeed, turn up to view.

It is much like that, too, with Europe. How much fun will be gone when the ages have given up all their treasures, when the centuries have yielded up their secrets and their holdings to the perpetually curious and delving pickax and science and research of modern man. What, then, shall become of our thrills? When there are no more uncharted seas to sail? When darkest Indian and blackest Africa have been staked out, mapped and railroaded? When even the air shall have nothing further to reveal and the depths of the sea shall have been plumbed? Then, no doubt, we shall literally, as we always do metaphorically, hitch our scientific wagons to the stars and attempt the scaling of the heavens.

Tempted by Relic.

Also in this same shop, I saw a marvelous saddle tree of the 13th century, all handcarved ivory with the coat of arms of the Scahgeri family. But they wanted too much money for that, and with much sorrow and much regret I decided that I couldn't buy it. I believe that I shall regret my prudence rather than be pleased at it.

The next morning, early, we left our rather ambiguous quarters, got the car and drove straight, and without mishap, to the Excelsior hotel in Rome. When we arrived there we just rested.

We were tired from the loung journey, the hotel was comfortable and we reclined through most of the afternoon, having both luncheon and tea served in our rooms.

In the evening I had dinner at the hotel with Baron Fassini, who was very much interested in motion pictures years ago, before the ones who are interested in them now had made them what they are.

Baron Fassini was formerly president of the Unione Cinematografica Italian. With Baron Fassini was Count Cine, secretary of the Unione. We had dinner and talked about pictures, art—that sort of thing.

We made a date to go the next day to see the "Quo Vadis" sets, and we went all over the sets with Jannings. Then we went to the restaurant right on the Villa Borghese and had luncheon. The Commendatore Ambrosia, Mr. and Mrs. Jannings, the two men directing "Quo Vadis," Signor Jacobi and Gabriele d'Annunzio, son of the famous romancer and poet, d'Annunzio.

Among other things, Jannings asked me if $2,000 a week was a good price for a character actor in America. I said: "Between $2,000 and $2,500; they are fair figures and a good man ought to get about that."

For God's sake, shut up!" begged Ambrosia. "Don't tell Jannings that!' But I replied that actors alway stick together, it is a part of the ethics of this so ethical profession!

Jannings was very enthusiastic about America. He wanted to find out all about it, and I told him, among other things, how popular he is there. I told him how splendidly "Passion" had gone over, and also "Deception." He was as pleased as a child.

He quite beamed with pleasure and delight, and it was nice to see that face of Mrs. Jannings; the tribute might well have been made direct to her.

Screen Actors in Life.

I know that many people wonder and ask whether screen actors are the same off the screen as they are, or appear to be, on the screen. I think it is, like most questions, largely a matter of the individual. Some of us are the same off the screen as we seem to be on, and others are quite surprising.

Jannings I would call quite surprising. Off the screen he is entirely different from what I, personally, had imagined. Quite unassuming. Very good natured.

I told him that in America they call him "King of Motion Pictures." He couldn't quite understand me, for the first time and Mrs. Jannings explained it to him.

He told his wife that what I was telling him was the greatest compliment he had ever received in his life, and he made the most perfect "retort courteous" by having her tell me that he was immensely pleased to have received this compliment from the "King of Screen Lovers!"

Gallant, too, you see. I must write more about him.

In the next installment the "Master Lover" with master touch writes of Rome—where romance and death lurked. Read his deep heart thrills as he stands in the coliseum and sees the very amphitheater where Christians were tossed to the lions. "Stains," as he poignantly writes, "that even time cannot wash away." His deepest soul emotions. Gripping! Thrilling! Don't miss tomorrow's paper.

SAFE ATLANTA MORTGAGES

Our experience of twenty-one years in the Atlanta Mortgage Loan field, leads us to believe that a well-selected mortgage is the safest possible security for investment funds of any nature.

At present we have for sale a few such first mortgages on Atlanta property, bearing 7% and 8%. Each of these loans is secured by property which we have inspected, and we recommend the loans as safe investments. They are for five years in sums of $1,000.00 to $5,000.00, with interest payable semi-annually.

This is an exceptional opportunity for the investment of funds in a security which returns a maximum income commensurate with all requirements of safety.

A communication from investors concerning these loans would be mutually profitable and appreciated by us.

HOLLOWAY BACKERS CALL FOR BIG VOTE

Marked by a spirit of enthusiasm which, it was predicted, will be reflected in an overwhelming vote in favor of the nomination of Murphy M. Holloway as judge of the second division of the recorder's court, friends of the incumbent Saturday night fired the opening gun in a drive to get citizens to the polls in the runover nominations Tuesday.

Joe Reid, of the Atlanta Safety council, presided as chairman of the meeting, and lauded the record of Judge Holloway in enforcement of the city's laws. He declared that the judge has cooperated 100 per cent in the effort of the safety council to reduce traffic accidents and thus protect the lives and limbs of Atlantans, and called on those present to a last final crusade to get the law-abiding people of Atlanta to the polls Tuesday.

Several speakers pointed out that the large vote cast for Holloway in the primary is indicative of the high esteem and the appreciation of good citizens of the incumbent's record, and predicted his nomination by an "easy majority."

Interest Growing.

Interest Saturday seemed to be growing in the run-off race between Judge Holloway and his opponent, Thomas H. Goodwin—the only city-wide race slated for Tuesday.

Judge Holloway reviewed briefly his record and declared that the criminal element of the city with which he has dealt uncompromisingly in his efforts to protect the life, health and property of Atlantans, and certain other influences, have combined to defeat him in order that they may dictate the policies of the recorder's court for the next four years.

He pleaded with law-abiding citizens of the city to send him back untied and untrammeled to enforce the laws in a just and yet merciful manner. His speech was received with enthusiasm.

Only one other contested race is slated to be settled in the run-over primary Tuesday, and that is for the post of council from the second ward with Howard McCutcheon and J. W. Weaver as opponents.

Another contest was slated to choose a member of the board of education in the tenth ward, but C. J. McLendon, incumbent, has withdrawn, leaving the field open to Roy D. Warren.

HOLLOWAY STATEMENT RAPPED BY GOODWIN.

Thomas H. Goodwin, candidate for judge of the second division of the recorder's court Saturday issued a statement attacking Judge Murphy M. Holloway, incumbent, for a statement the latter issued for publication Friday.

"I did go to Mr. Holloway and tried to get him to enter into a gentleman's agreement to run the race over in the general election and save the voters the time and trouble of an extra election, to say nothing of the useless extra expense to Mr. Holloway and myself," Mr. Goodwin said.

"The only answer he gave me was, 'that he did not care anything about expenses.' Mr. Holloway, in his interview published in the newspapers, states that he only failed by 849 votes of having a clear majority over his opponents. This statement is untrue, because he really lacked 1,581 votes. I refer you to the files of papers of September 23. That part of Mr. Holloway's statement is fairly representative of the remainder of his interview.

"Mr. Holloway charges me with trying to break down the white primary; that is not true, and as a true democrat and as a man of honor and integrity, I place my record against his and ask the people to investigate for themselves. As to our private life, I refer you to the merchants, jewelers, garages, gasoline stations, automobile companies, renting agents, bankers, plumbers, and other business men of the city of Atlanta, and as to our professional records as an attorney, I refer you to the lawyers and judges, and also the records at the Fulton county courthouse, where we have practiced law for many years, and the records will speak for themselves.

"In the interest of good citizenship and clean government, it is best for people to know something of the personal record of candidates for public offices. It is not proper for me to point out the defects of my opponent's record. I can only ask that the voters investigate the facts and determine the issue. I am perfectly willing to leave my case in the hands of the people to be determined Tuesday, October 5."

Lady Astor Pays Coolidge Visit At White House

Washington, October 2.—(AP)—Lady Astor, Virginia-born member of the British parliament, paid her respects today to President and Mrs. Coolidge and afterward shied off from newspapermen. She had no comment to make on any of the leading topics and confined her remarks solely to r expression of appreciation of the good time she has had with her homefolks in Virginia.

Lady Astor was accompanied to the white house by Secretary Kellogg and Henry Chilton, of the British embassy staff. Previously she had spent some time chatting with Mr. Coolidge at the white house.

The former Nancy Langhorne said she had suffered an unique experience yesterday on a motor tour through Virginia when her motor car broke down and she was forced to walk two miles through ankle-deep mud. She really enjoyed the experience of walking, she said, after spending so much of her time in motor cars.

As Lady Astor emerged from the white house she was accosted by Dorothy Gould Fowler, a Washington girl, selling forget-me-nots for the relief of disabled American war veterans. Lady Astor accepted one of the flowers and paid for it with a $5 bill.

RED AND BLACK STAFF STUDY JOURNALISM

Athens, Ga., October 2.—(Special.) Of the 20 reporters and editors who compose the staff of the Red and Black, University of Georgia weekly newspaper, all but four are working for the journalism degree, or have taken journalistic courses in the Henry W. CHARIS

A WONDERFUL new garment that takes the place of corsets and costs less than a corset of like quality, though really priceless in comfort and body-freedom. No wonder every woman who wears CHARIS declares she will never wear a corset again.

Not need she. CHARIS gives stout as well as slender women the vital support they all need and improves every figure, even the loveliest. A featherweight one-piece garment that is quickly adjustable and so unobtrusive that the wearer is not conscious she has it on.

Demonstration cheerfully given in your own home. Write or phone.

NORTH FULTON ACREAGE

THIS property is most outstanding in value because it embodies practically all features desired by anyone wanting acreage.

IT IS cheap, well located, has almost a mile of road frontage; two fine springs, a branch, a large creek. There are several picturesque building sites, beautiful elevations, land in cultivation, woods and several acres in rich bottom land.

THE property can easily be subdivided. There is a house, barn and orchard for a camp or care taker's home. There are 64 acres in all and the price is $300 an acre. Buy it to live on or as an investment. You can't beat it.

Between the Peachtrees

ON ONE of the best streets in this section, we have a fine, two-story brick home that is to be sold because the owner is leaving Atlanta. The house sits on a level lot with an 80-foot frontage; there are four bedrooms, a sleeping porch and two baths on the second floor; the first floor consists of a large entrance hall, living room, music room, sun parlor, dining room, butler's pantry and kitchen; the basement is full size, containing laundry tubs and ample storage space; this piece of property is well worth the consideration of a purchaser who desires the convenience of a first-class, close-in location; there is no loan and good terms will be considered.

ATLANTA TRUST COMPANY INVESTMENTS

NORTH Fulton Acreage: In the Roswell Road and Mt. Perrin section we are offering a 50-acre tract with over 1,500 feet road frontage.

THIS property lies well and is beautifully wooded. It is easily adapted for subdividing. Price $450 per acre.

LOCATED on Edgewood avenue, near the corner of Hurt street we have for sale three community stores with garage on the property fronting on DeKalb avenue.

WE can make an attractive price on this property and would be willing to accept as part payment an unimproved north side lot.

IN one of Atlanta's best north side community store centers we have for sale two stores occupied by very desirable tenants.

THE net rent on this property is better than 7%. We recommend it as a sound investment. Purchase price $20,000.

CASH PAYMENT

AND YOU CAN even pay your cash payment monthly by selecting your lot and start paying on it in easy monthly payments. When one-third of a lot is paid for, we build your house according to your plans without further cash payment

AND THE HOUSE?

A TURNER-BUILT house is built like our grandfathers built. Not a house built of short leaf sap pine, but built of materials that will last for generations. Real brick walls or hollow tile and cement stucco, asbestos, slate or tile roof. Hardwood floors throughout and a real tile bathroom.

YOU can't afford to buy or build before you investigate the Turner property and plans.

HOW TO PROVIDE AN INCOME

RECENT statements published by the five clearance house banks in Atlanta show total deposits of more than $131,640,000; in detail the statements show over $40,000,000 CASH ON HAND.

THIS is too much idle money to have on hand; some of it should be bringing in an income. We have prepared a list of four substantial income producing investments suitable for buyers who want an assured return.

Purchase Price	Rental Income
$45,000.00	$7,440.00
$40,000.00	$5,760.00
$13,000.00	$2,112.00
$ 6,500.00	$ 960.00
$ 6,250.00	$ 912.00

THESE parcels are all well located apartment buildings, both white and colored, and in good condition. They bear moderate first loans. The purchase price can be made by assuming the loans, and the balance can be arranged.
WE recommend these investments as a means of providing an assured and very attractive annual income.

Brookwood Hills

THE incomparable location of this property warranted the highest price ever paid in the Atlanta territory for land to be developed exclusively into residential lots.

THE improvements, including vitrolithic concrete sidewalks, curb and street pavement, electric lights, sewer and water with service connections, which are adequate, complete and permanent in nature, cost more than the land.

THEREFORE, a little thought, analysis and comparison with other offerings, will readily convince you of the sound values now being offered in these lots at $50.00 to $60.00 per front foot.

A NUMBER of homes now being built, with many others to follow during early spring. Select your lot now. Only a limited number available. Terms arranged.

We Have Something to Sell

IN THIS period of conservative values we are stocking up on good listings; we have something worth while to offer to our customers.

WE have three parcels of income-producing business property; these are occupied by responsible tenants on long-term leases, showing a high rental return.

WE have one star offering, a downtown parcel in the heart of the retail district. There is never but one of this kind for sale.

WE have some well located business lots, the kind that are hard to find when someone has a need for them. They are good to buy for future use.

WE have some excellent, high-class homes in the choicest residential locations. These are priced right; that is, less than the value of the lot and the cost of the improvements.

WE ARE prepared to offer these worth-while parcels to anyone seriously considering a purchase. Consult freely with our salesmen at this time; it might be to your interest to do so.

OUR PHILIPPINE PROBLEM.

Colonel Carmin Thompson, who has been in the Philippines for several months as the special investigator for President Coolidge, will shortly submit a report stressing the need of the islands to this country as a strategic base, from the viewpoint of international politics and economics.

Russell B. Porter, in a wireless message to The New York Times from Baguio, declares that Mr. Thompson is now preparing his report and will urge retention of the Philippines in order to protect American interest and for the preservation of international peace in the Far East.

According to this view, if we withdraw from the Philippines we would have to relinquish our position as an Asiatic power. Mr. Thompson will hold, it is said, that without the Philippines as a commercial and military base we could not enforce the open door policy of equal trade opportunities for all nations in China, could not issue the limitless economic opportunities sure to accompany the awakening of the east, and could not wage war effectively in the Pacific to protect our interests.

Mr. Porter in The Times says:

"The argument advanced to support this contention is that the Philippines strategically are the only place available to the United States as a base. The Philippines are part of a group of islands from Japan on the north to Borneo in the south, which form a screen across the Pacific to the coast of Asia, constituting the door to the future possibilities of the Far East. As long as America holds this strategic position, it is argued, she will remain a powerful factor in the Orient's economic and international life."

Statistics prove the shift of world trade from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The international Asiatic coast trade has doubled in the past ten years. While the United States trade with the entire world increased 100 per cent from 1913 to 1925, its trade with Asia grew 300 per cent in the same time. It mounted to an excess of one billion dollars in 1925.

There is no question—viewed from a cold-blooded standpoint of strategy—that the recommendations that Mr. Thompson proposes to make are sound. But what of the moral side of the question?

When the United States assumed sovereignty over the Philippines, through the treaty of peace with Spain following the Spanish-American war, it was specifically agreed—as with Cuba—that the Philippines should be restored to her own people when they had been sufficiently educated to self government. The islands have prospered and a large part of the people—once little more than tropic savages—have been educated and have learned the real meaning of civilization.

Under the wise administration of Governor General Wood during the past five years, many of the interior islands have been brought into the civilization zone, with schools and churches and modern health methods applied. In the meantime, gradually throughout the entire group of islands, autonomy has been established. The people have their local offices, the provinces their legislatures and the nation its house of congress. It would be the most distressing thing that could happen to the Philippine people to have the United States withdraw its sovereignty. The Philippine people have asked through their congress a plebiscite. It was vetoed and passed over the veto.

President Coolidge is the final court. He must decide whether or not they may vote, to assume the entire governmental responsibility, or continue under the sovereignty of this nation.

It is very probable the Filipinos will overwhelmingly vote to remain in their present governmental status. But surely they should be given the opportunity to express their views, regardless of how embarrassing it may be to America to surrender its Asiatic base.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE.

The New York Journal of Commerce deplores what it believes is a tendency in our general banking system toward a weakening disorganization, which it regards as "more dangerous" than at any time for a long while. It frankly admits that under the existing federal reserve law that system is unable to cope with the situation, thereby gradually losing its hold upon the public.

The Journal of Commerce is one of the staunchest advocates of the federal reserve system, and has been since its inauguration. It has no criticism of administration. It does not minimize the tremendous value of that system, as demonstrated time and again in averting financial disaster. It does seek for it a restoration of the full measure of prestige it ought to have.

In analyzing the unmistakable fact, as illustrated by the latest federal reserve bulletin, that there is a gradual recession in the system—that is, that member withdrawals are too heavy as compared with voluntary entries—the Journal of Commerce says it is due to the "fifty-fifty policy" which divides responsibility and takes away from it its definiteness in its relation to the general banking system of the country. It says:

"The more this question of the relation of our central banking system to the public is studied the more certain does it appear that the present 'half and half' condition of the reserve banks cannot continue. They either must be given practically entire charge of the banking system of the country and be correspondingly saddled with definite responsibility for keeping the banks in proper condition, thereby avoiding failures and suspensions, or else they must be relieved of the partial responsibility they now have while at the same time the member banks are relieved of the necessity of maintaining them unless they think it worth while. That the abler and more active banks, whether large or small, would thus deem it worth while there can be no doubt, and deeming it so and having full control of their own membership, they should be expected to make such membership a guarantee of soundness and freedom from ordinary danger of failure."

The Journal of Commerce has put its finger on the trouble. The federal reserve system should either have definite and unbroken governing charge over the entire banking system of the country, or it should function as a relief agency, without any governing control whatever, but as a safe port in any financial storm. In the latter event members would be voluntary, and not compulsory as now, in so far as the national banks are concerned. There is a strong opinion existing that it would be well to make membership in the system voluntary. It would result in a membership shrinkage, and thus its resources would necessarily decline. But those who remained in it would do so because they thought it worth while, and it is reasonable to expect they would show an increased activity and interest in the system's functions. In the latter event the system would undoubtedly become closer to the members, to the banking interests as a whole, because perhaps more humanized in the realization that it would have to make good, or retire from the banking world. The latter would be a calamity, and nearly all astute bankers realize it.

The point is, just as the Journal of Commerce points out, there must be a keener interest on the part of all banks in the reserve system, and the latter must get closer to the banking system. It must do it by a change in the laws making it a 100 per cent governing factor, or else relieve it of the "half and half policy" which is today very evidently throttling it and impairing its potential usefulness.

PAINE COLLEGE.

Citizens generally, regardless of denominational affiliations, ought to support earnestly the campaign to raise a fund for the erection of a library as a memorial to Dr George Williams Walker at Paine college. This college stands out as one of the great negro institutions of learning in this country, and has made a record in building Christian citizenship among the negro race that is perhaps second to none. It is supported by the southern Methodist leaders of both races. It is looked upon therefore as a southern Methodist enterprise. It furnishes the point of contact for the consideration of inter-racial problems.

For 44 years Paine college, located in the heart of the south, has carried on the great work of fostering a correct understanding and a proper relationship between the races. It has stressed particularly Christian education, inculcating as far as practicable in the negro the necessity for honest, honorable, dependable dealings—in whatever line of work employed—and the force of character and of moral living. No graduate of the institution has ever been convicted of crime. This is a most commendable record.

J. L. McCord, of Atlanta, is chairman of the committee of 100 citizens to raise the required fund. The cause is one of marked appeal.

ROADS AS CIVILIZERS.

That good roads not only bring the peoples of the city and country in close contact, offer convenient markets to farmers, stimulate education through consolidated schools, enhance property values, promote community democracy and make rural life more inviting, but that they are also both civilizing and christianizing factors of incomparable value, is the view of Judge Samuel H Sibley, of the United States district court of North Georgia.

In a statement just made public Judge Sibley said:

"The excuse used to be offered by moonshiners that they made whisky because that is the only way they have of getting a living. Good roads have done away with this, almost entirely. A former moonshiner told me recently that since a principal highway had been built near his home he made $1,200 selling cabbages. He made no deliveries, the highway brought the buyers to his home."

This is eminently true. At one time the mountains of North Georgia, almost inaccessible on account of impassable roads, had many moonshiners. They did not do large businesses selling their liquors. But competition from every blind alley, and from scores of cellars in the cities, had not then appeared and it was regarded by them as the best method of converting their small corn and apple crops into some kind of revenue, even if small. At that time the mountains abounded with illiteracy. Living conditions were poor. There were few schools, and fewer churches. But roads—even if they are not permanently good—have changed all of this.

When The Constitution conducted its famous government tour through the northeast Georgia mountains in June, 1922, looking to road and educational development these sordid, repelling conditions existed in many sections of the mountains. There were few roads. Nine hours were spent in negotiating one 17-mile stretch of almost unspeakable road.

Following that, the new day dawned, and today—although few roads are permanent, necessitating enormous and unnecessary yearly expense in upkeep and in rebuilding—the mountains are generally accessible, schools have been built, towns and communities and recreational centers have developed, and the Georgia mountains show as high a type of citizenship, as little crime, as little illiteracy, and as happy and inviting home conditions as in any area in the southern Appalachians. The truth is, there is probably less moonshine liquor made in the entire Georgia mountains than in the alleys and cellars of Atlanta, and there are as fine a people as there are on earth among the natives. Roads have opened opportunities, and those who once resorted to illegal practices because no other opportunity to keep the wolves from the doors appeared, are today prosperous and contented farmers, and their children have been lifted from hovels to civilization and to the ideals of correct, moral living.

Thus is the civilizing influence of roads. What a pity it is this great mountain country of North Georgia, rich with its stores of scenic wealth—the recreational and rest and health area for 50,000,000 people who can reach it overnight—is not accessible with permanently paved highways in keeping with Georgia's program adopted by the assembly of 1921!

Judge Sibley has spoken truly, and the lesson he has taught is one easily recognized as we follow the new paths of travel blazed since 1922.

AN ATLANTA PRODUCT.

Perhaps the most beautiful booklet ever issued in America in connection with the opening of a hotel is just off the presses of an Atlanta publishing house, emphasizing again the fact that Atlanta is not merely the south's foremost printing and publishing center but that the character of art and printing executed in Atlanta cannot be surpassed in America.

The booklet in question was issued in connection with the recent opening of the Hotel Carling in Jacksonville. It appears as a supplement to the September issue of the Southern Hotel Reporter—an Atlanta trade publication. It contains 58 pages, each highly embossed in colors, and the cover page—a four-color reproduction of the hotel as brilliantly lighted on the opening night—is strikingly attractive. The first five inside pages are devoted to five tone engravings, printed in colors, of the Hotel Carling, Carling L. Dinkler, the president of Dinkler Hotels, Inc.; Louis J. Dinkler, chairman of the board; Henry C. Heinz, secretary-treasurer, and Walter Chandler, manager of the Carling. The remainder of the booklet is devoted to detail illustrations and descriptions—the Carling being one of the south's finest commercial hotels, and an especial monument to the intrepid young president whose name it carries.

In the meantime the noteworthy feature as to the booklet is that it is an Atlanta product.

THE ONE BIG DEMAND.

The agricultural salvation of Georgia and of every state hinges around the one basic problem of living at home.

That is, first of all, the raising of enough food and feed crops to supply home needs.

When this is done, when the farmer relatively "buys from himself" those commodities that are necessary in feeding live stock, and to meet the consumptive demands of the home, then every money crop—cotton, melons, potatoes, fruits, etc.—must become surpluses, and their cash incomes turned to the luxuries of life, to the education of the children, to farm betterment, to increasing cultivated acreage, etc., instead of turned to pay debts for food and feed imported from other states.

This is the practical, business-like program for successful farming that The Constitution has consistently fought for for the last quarter of a century.

Progress is being made. The increase in the grain and pasturage crops, in live stock, poultry products, home gardening, etc., will this year exceed that of any year in the state's history.

Progress has been made gradually each year.

Last year, despite the drouth, the grain and hay crops exceeded the same crops grown in 1924.

And yet we are far from even approximating home demands.

Thousands of tons of hay are imported yearly—despite the fact that all of north Georgia is a natural alfalfa belt, and is unsurpassed in America for commercial alfalfa hay production.

Butts county has solved the problem, and it illustrates the point at issue. It has produced this year enormous feed and food crops, sufficient, it is said, to supply every home demand. Corn production has been so great that there will be a surplus. That is, Butts county will have corn to sell to other counties that did not grow a sufficiency of that commodity to meet its demands.

In view of this situation—of the enormous yields of peas, beans, hays, potatoes and other home consumption and market crops, Butts will have its 5,000 bales of cotton, its peppers, and many other cash crops as a clear surplus total.

Suppose this same condition applied to the state as a whole? What an agricultural empire it would be!

The grain and hay crops are unusually good throughout the state, but with all of its opportunities north Georgia—the alfalfa hay belt—does not grow enough to meet its own demands. South Georgia, therefore imports from other states the hay to meet its demands.

Why should not north Georgia supply the required hay to south Georgia, just as south Georgia should supply its surplus of other commodities, to which it is more adapted, to north Georgia?

All of Georgia ought to live at home—and then the more than $100,000,000 coming in from cotton and the $50,000,000 from peaches, potatoes and tobacco, and the $25,000,000 for poultry products—and so on along a long list of the state's agricultural and orchard opportunities—would be surpluses, and would enter therefore into the actual net increase of the state's wealth.

The poets sing of the gold of Autumn, with a note of regret that it isn't current coin at the grocery store.

Rudyard Kipling's recent poem demands more explanations than he can explain.

It was a red letter day for Aimee when she let down the bright abundance of her hair.

And here's the Indianapolis News saying that "the people who made so much easy money in the Florida real estate boom ought to be good for large contributions to the Red Cross fund."

A sermon in brief from the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel—

"An average man is one who is absolutely anxious to lead a good moral life until somebody comes along and tries to make him do it."

And there are some uncharitable enough to say that Mr. Dempsey's present mysterious illness is nothing more than what was coming to him.

Now that Germany is in the League, war helmets are conspicuous everywhere in the German "Republic."

LOVE'S PERFECT DAY

BY FRANK L. STANTON

Are you not weary of the way
And vanishing dreams of the Perfect Day?
How can it be from our lives apart?
It is here, with your kisses, Sweetheart!
Sweetheart!

Sorrow and sighing,—
A world of strife,
But living, or dying,
Your love is life.

The world forever grows wondrous gray
That looks for the light of the Perfect Day.
But it is not veiled—from our lives apart,—
It is here, where you love me, Sweetheart!
Sweetheart!

Sorrow and sighing,—
Thunder of strife,
But living or dying,
Your love is life.

'News' That Comes and Goes

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, October 2.—(Special.) "The New York World" recently printed a clever whimsicality devised by Virginia Morris. Under the caption, "Who or What Were?" the author listed a score of items, such as:

Dayton, Tenn.
The sheath gown.
Twenty-four votes for Underwood.
Edison's intelligence test.
Zev and Papyrus.
Ouija boards.

Miss Morris' whimsicality is pleasant to suggest how fleeting is time, how volatile public interest; how quickly events that flame through the newspapers for a day or a week pass gradually to inconspicuous places on inside pages, and then completely into the limbo of forgotten or half-forgotten things.

Many of the items on this list are less than three years old. The most ancient is the sheath gown, which first appeared in this country in 1908, led to riots in Chicago, was discussed in the pulpit and the press, and disappeared after a few months as swiftly as it had come. If it should return tomorrow it would cause another outburst of attention—this time on account not of its scantiness but of its amplitude. In 1908 the sheath gown made a sensation because of—let us say—its economy of material; but it contained, one would guess, nearly twice as many yards as the ordinary dress of today. The sheath gown achieved brevity in one dimension. As its name suggests, its circumference was little greater than the circumference of the form it surrounded but did not greatly conceal. The sheath gown was very tight-fitting, but in length did not depart from what was regarded in 1908 as an essential standard of propriety. The modern gown achieves brevity in both circumference and length.

It was soon after 1908 that the current vogue in women's clothes provided ex-Congressman J. Adam Bede with a jest. Of two speeches that had been made by antagonists, he said that one "was like a Mother Hubbard dress—it covered everything but revealed nothing;" whereas the other "was like a sheath gown—it touched everything but covered nothing."

The first of the items on this list is destined to come back to the first page almost any day. "Dayton, Tenn.," means the Scopes trial, the fight between evolutionists and anti-evolutionist, at the close of which, only 14 months ago, in July, 1925, William Jennings Bryan died dramatically. Thereupon the case, being appealed, started its leisurely upward way through the courts. The supreme court of Tennessee heard the appeal last May, but adjourned without rendering a decision. Last Monday, September 27, the court reassembled for a session that will last four weeks, and it is expected that during this period, probably before October 23, the decision will be announced.

Thereupon we shall have a revival in some degree of the interest that blazed through the country in August, 1925. The fight between two schools about the origin of life, and about the right of the state to prescribe one theory and proscribe the other, will not be as ephemeral as the sheath gown. It is at the heart of some of the most angry manifestations of this snarling American era.

The question whether evolution should be taught in schools and colleges has roots many years in the past, but not until 1925 were successful attempts made to settle it by legislative or political methods. In that year, on March 13, Tennessee passed an act providing that it should "be unlawful for any teacher in any of the universities, normals, and all other public schools of the state which are supported in whole or in part by the public school funds of the state, to teach any theory that denies the story of the Divine creation of man as taught in the Bible, and to teach instead that man has descended from a lower order of animals."

Among the teachers affected by this law was a young man of 24, John Thomas Scopes, instructor in science in the Rhea county high school.

Through the instrumentality of a friend he was made defendant in an action to test the act's contstitutionality. The state established the defendant's guilt through the testimony of Howard Morgan, a 14-year-old high-school pupil, who said that Scopes had told his class:

"In the beginning the earth was too hot for any life, it had cooled off, then the sea and land were formed, plant life in the sea began with a one-celled animal, which finally evoluted until it got bigger and a land animal and then got to be man; and that the teacher had classified man as a mammal, along with horses, cats, dogs and other animals."

The jury adjudged Scopes guilty and Judge Raulston imposed a fine of $100. After the verdict Scopes was asked if he cared to address the court. He rose and said:

"Your honor. I feel that I have been convicted of having violated an unjust statute. I will continue in the future, as I have in the past, to oppose this law in any way I can. Any other action would be in violation of my ideals of academic freedom."

A possibly unnecessary clarification should be made as to what was the issue at Dayton. It has often been stated, and a considerable portion of the public has come to believe, that the question was purely a religious dispute between fundamentalists and modernists. This way of putting it places the cart before the horse. The real issue was the question whether we shall permit politics, local, state or national, to censor education. It was merely incidental that the indictment against Scopes had to do with a certain scientific hypothesis which is the opinion of some persons clashes with a passage in the Book of Genesis. So far as the fundamental principle is concerned, the trial might just as well have been based on a statute prohibiting the full and free discussion of the merits and defects of socialism. The distinction is defined succinctly by a southern correspondent of the writer.

"I am a fundamentalist," he says, "but I see no sense in trying to suppress knowledge of any other 'ism.'"

The most important effect of the Scopes trial has been that the publicity and the verdict against Scopes have heartened anti-evolutionists throughout the country, particularly in the south and parts of the west, to seek by political or other means to enforce the teaching in public schools of a literal interpretation of the Bible. The following summary shows the situation as it exists in those states about which the writer has information. This information is fragmentary, being difficult to collect. If what is reported here needs amplification or correcttion, the writer will be grateful for further details:

Virginia—The anti-evolution cause has had little success. It has met with determined opponents in the colleges of the state and among the Baptists. A prominent Baptist writes editorials for "The Richmond News Leader." "We challenge any one," he said in one of them, "to say that we who believe God selected evolution for his method of creating life are not as good Christians as those who reject the theory."

North Carolina—In April, 1925, an anti-evolutoin resolution was introduced in the lower house but was defeated. Anti-evolution sentiment is strong.

South Carolina—The last formidable attempt at anti-evolution legislation was in 1921.

Georgia—An anti-evolution bill was introduced in last fall's session of the legislature, but was defeated. The anti-evolutionists succeeded in having passages deleted from the science textbooks used in some schools.

Florida—After Tennessee, Florida is the state where anti-evolution sentiment is strongest. A number of textbooks containing allusions to evolution have been eliminated from the schools. An anti-evolution resolution (not a bill) has been passed by the Florida legislature.

Mississippi—An anti-evolution bill is in force.

Tennessee—The anti-evolution bill that figured in the Scopes trial is still in force.

Kentucky—In 1921 an anti-evolution bill carrying heavy fine and imprisonment penalties was defeated in the lower house, 42 to 41. A somewhat milder measure, introduced January 18, 1926, was ruled out of order by the speaker of the house.

Oklahoma — An act proscribing textbooks teaching a materialistic conception of history is in force.

Louisiana—An anti-evolution bill was defeated in the senate last spring, after having been passed by the house. The New Orleans Times-Picayune on May 13, 1926, printed an interview with the sponsor of this bill, which, assuming its authenticity, deserves reproduction for the light it throws on the educational background and the mental processes of some of the lawmakers who want to dictate educational standards by political action. This solon is reported to have said:

"The public schools don't bother much about evolution, but the Louisiana State university teaches it. Then I believe the college at Ruston does have a little of it. I know once up there they did teach something about a bubble in the water which came to shore, turned into something with feet, and finally became a man. Now, I don't believe that stuff. I believe the Bible is right. I believe God made man out of dirt and breathed life into him. I don't believe he made him out of monkeys."

The News Value of a Fight

BY M. ASHBY JONES.

After reading with keen interest but with a medley of varying emotions the account of the Tunney-Dempsey fight, I laid down the paper wondering "why." I was only one of many millions who either eagerly heard over the radio, or read in the newspapers the story of this fight. A friend of mine told me that, when he was a small boy, he saw, out of the window of a rapidly moving train, two boys fighting. It was just a glimpse, but to that day of his mature manhood, he had always wanted to know which one whipped.

Why is it that everyone is more or less interested in a fight? They are, whether you like it or not, or whether you can give a good reason for the interest. When a fight is announced, of any kind, there are two elements of news value. Added to the primary interest, which is well-nigh universal, which is taken in a contest, there is always the human interest. We are not only interested in a fight, but we almost instinctively "take sides." Whether the fight is with fists, or football, or with ballots, we become interested in the personality of the contestants. Almost before we know it, and still oftener without any particular reason, we find ourselves wanting somebody to win, or at least somebody to lose.

Fighting and Civilization.

This primary interest in a contest is not only instinctive, but it is a good instinct. Out of this combative instinct has been evolved the whole civilization of mankind. Man had to fight for his very existence on this plane. Fire and flood, cold and heat, mountains and oceans, diseases and dangers of every kind, challenged his right to possession of the earth. It was this challenge which awakened his latent and undeveloped faculties and forces of both body and mind. Indeed, in one way you may measure the achievements of civilization today by the ability of man to master the forces of nature and to make them obedient servants of his ambitions.

Of course, I am not unmindful of the fact that it depends upon what kind of a fight man is engaged in, as to what kind of faculties and forces will be summoned to the contest. A fight with a wild animal calls for the use of quite different powers, from a fight with electricity. Just here is the crux of the whole question. Men do grow and develop by summoning their fighting blood, but if the nature of the fight is to determine the quality of the development, then, it is of supreme importance what kind of fights we shall encourage.

From this standpoint we may readily see what an important part games play in the development of personality. A game is essentially a contest. A good game ought to call for strength, endurance and skill of the body, mental alertness, self-control, and a sense of fair play. That is the best game, which to the greatest extent demands these qualities, and when the game is over, contestants and auditors should be the better equipped in body and mind to go back to fulfill the serious relations of life.

Pugilism.

I had little syhpathy with those earnest, but, I think, mistaken, people who tried to prevent by law the Tunney-Dempsey fight. The fight itself seemed to me to involve no moral question, except as all questions may be indirectly moral. The risk to health and life was no greater than that involved in football or any other wholesome athletic game. The question, to my mind, is one rather of good judgment and good taste, than one of morality.

Personally, I don't like a fist fight, and I think pugilism is the lowest form of a game, demanding the least mental and moral development for its success. The object of the fight is to hurt and to injure. To win in the most striking and certain way, is to beat your opponent into insensibility and impotence. I object, too, to the emotions aroused in the audience. The fight calls forth only those primary animal emotions of anger, blood lust, and enthusiasm for the triumph of purely physical force.

Our Heroes.

I was on the Berengaria last August with Gertrude Ederle when she came home from her victory over the English channel. I had a good deal of sympathy with those cheering thousands who gave her the great reception in New York. Here was a clean, wholesome victory of strength endurance, self-control, and pluck, pitted against the forces of nature. I do not mean to say that this was a great achievement, but it was the triumph of powers which, if developed, and used in the more serious tasks of life, would prove of tremendous value.

Of course, we are all inclined to deplore the tremendous emphasis which our people place upon the athletic achievements. Our heroes would seem to be those of the gridiron, the golf links, the swimming tank, and the pugilistic ring. If this were true it would be quite discouraging to all lovers of civilization; but isn't this a rather superficial view? When great multitudes turn out with bands and flags to welcome the conquering athletic hero, aren't we all just "playing" a game ourselves? Are we really seriously saying, this is our definition of greatness? Our very manner of welcoming and rejoicing, in a noisy, carefree, irresponsible way, has all the spirit and, I think, only the meaning of a game. Of course, we are interested. We read about it, and then forget it, and go on to the serious business of life.

OUR PUZZLE PRESIDENT

The Coolidge Complex and Peculiarities of His Public Reactions.

BY SAM W. SMALL.

As The Constitution's correspondent, writing from Washington, it has been a part of my day's work to sketch and casually appraise every president from Hayes down to the present occupant of the white house.

Writing now about President Coolidge I use the field notes of conversations with him, observations, reading and talks with men of consequence who have had official or social contact with this most enigmatic of presidents.

In his person he impresses one as being an average sized business man. There is nothing over-accented in his apparel or actions. Thousands of persons pass him while he is walking on the streets of the capital without noticing that he is unusual—utterly oblivious that he is the president of the nation. When he is "found out" those who have made the discovery treat him with that genteel deference that the normal American accords to our "big men." There is no effort to herolize him, following him with a gaping mob, or raise a cheer, as Doumergue might experience in Paris or Hindenberg in Berlin.

Our president is still a fellow citizen and always a gentleman and, except on gala appearances, his most ardent admirers spare him the embarrassments of over publicity.

The So-Called Coolidge Complex.

Many writers have made much comment upon the alleged "Coolidge complex." That is a term used by the psychoanalysts to include things in the individual that they think they can explain and things that baffle them. So far I have not been impressed by any peculiar "complex" in the president.

They say that he is "a typical Yankee." A born southerner like myself ought to be able to know that as quickly as anyone, especially after having associated intimately with Yankees for half a century and having a bunch of granddaughters who are all half-Yankees.

In talking with President Coolidge the evidences of his New Englandism are certain tones of his voice and certain phrases commonest in eastern speech. If he could mellow the timber of his voice and cavalier somewhat his vocabulary one could as confidently assign him to the composed circle of the Charleston elite as to the placid Puritan pools of the old Bay state.

He is not effusive, but cooly self-collected in demeanor; yet that cannot be called a distinctive "Yankee trait." Some of the most effusive public characters of my acquaintance have been native New Englanders and some of the coolest, self-contained men I have known were bred and raised in the south and west.

To say, then, that President Coolidge is "a typical Yankee" means really no more than to say that he was born east of the Hudson and has the temperament of a cool fighter in the battles of life.

He Is "a Man of Affairs."

To say that one is "a man of affairs" is to imply that he is equipped by temperament, mentality and experience to comprehend large questions of policy and practice, and to deal with them with judgment and competence.

President Coolidge strikes me as being that sort of a man. There is no need to point out special instances in his career when he has shown his ability to handle successfully very hard public problems. It was one of those conspicuous tests that made him the cynosure of the nation and a heroic figure in the eyes of the conservative, law-loving men of America. That was the way he strangled the Boston police strike and the anarchy it produced.

In his legislative labors and in gubernatorial administration he became thoroughly familiar with the great affairs of politics and business. When he came to Washington as vice president he was no novice in his duties and had wisdom to apply himself diligently to study of national and international questions. Therefore, when called suddenly into the presidential office he needed neither coaching nor indulgence. He knew what he was there for and knew how to go about the day's business.

I doubt that any other vice president who succeeded to the presidency entered the office as well equipped to instantly take hold and carry on, except Andrew Johnson, who had held all large public offices but president prior to becoming chief magistrate.

* * * *

That Complex Is Duplex.

Referring again to that so-called "Coolidge complex," if there is one, it consists in this, that while the president is a republican in principles, he is a democrat in practice!

It is my private opinion, from certain indicia, that the predecessor he has most carefully studied since he catered the white house is Grover Cleveland. I'll not swear to it, but review his acts and judge for yourself.

Believing whole-heartedly that the cardinal principles of the republican party are best for the nation, and ready enough to give them expression and action, President Coolidge nevertheless means to be the president of the whole people and not primarily of a faction or a section.

Because he will not be the president of a faction he has incurred the opposition of extreme factionalists, and because he will not be the president of a strenuously demanding section he stands accused of being the president of "the big business east."

The real truth is that he wishes devoutly to serve, as far as his powers and counsel can go, the best interests of all sections for the common good. But the ice in his blood and the granite in his bones make him cold and immovable when some bloc tries to rush him. It is because he can't be stampeded, because he can listen without interruption, and then say, "good day," that make the discomfitted call cold-heated, callous and "a complex!"

* * * *

His Attitudes in Politics.

It is a large part of Washington political and newspaper sport to picture or predict the president's political attitudes. Not being immune to that fascinating pastime, here go my guesses!

In the matter of the aggravating agricultural problem I feel sure that President Coolidge is sincerely distressed by the misfortunes of the farmers of the west and the south. His is not the sentimental sympathies of "a farmer for political purposes only," because he himself, and his folks before him, have been real 'dirt and rock" farmers on the bleak hills of Vermont. When Calvin Coolidge feels

That Paris Divorce

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Paris, September 30.—A group of American expatriates were sitting around the Ritz lobby in Paris not long ago and someone suggested that a club should be started for the alimony queens in the city.

Whereupon the usual violent argument on the subject of divorce ensued. Should one, or should one not? Is marriage an institution that should be preserved or dissolved? And last of all, is Paris really the divorce mill of current rumor?

Dismissing the talk about the finest institution in the world if you strike right and stick fairly to your bargain, the question of Paris as the quick-and-easy and overworked divorce market intrigued our interest. With authorities right 'round the corner, there was no need to prolong the debate. We applied at the office of Charles G. Loeb, one of the best known divorce lawyers in the city, who frankly professed that he does not like the idea of divorces, personally. That is, he thinks people ought not to marry until they are sure, and if they are sure enough to marry they ought to be willing to work hard enough to put it over successfully.

"And when I say work, I mean work," he announced. "You can't build up a successful business just by putting up a sign of partnership. Signing the marriage papers amounts to that and I think most people get out of marriage just what they are willing to do for it.

"However, if two people really want a divorce, wild horses won't stop them from getting it, and if they prefer to come to Paris, why not—if they have the price?"

About the Ins and Outs.

Mr. Loeb naturally knows all the ins and outs of the game. He knows when you can get the knot untied and when you can't. He knows all the whys and wherefores. He handled the famous Frank J. Gould case, in which Edith Kelly Gould was divorced and granted only 3,000 francs alimony a month, not enough to pay for the upkeep of a modern coiffure, ordinarily. He handled Mae Murray's famous proxy husband case, in which Robert Leonard appeared by letter instead of person.

So let Mr. Loeb tell one thing. There are plenty who are eager to get a divorce in Paris. But they want their alimony fixed in the good old land of the free and generous alimony providers. The ordinary French judge makes about as much in a year as one of our fair to middling typists. And a Frenchman doesn't believe that a lot of money is good for woman. A few hundred francs a month would appear quite a lot to him to give a woman who stampeded her job as a wife.

So, before they come to Paris to get the divorce, the preliminary separation papers disposing of all financial matters (and children, if there are any) are arranged by the wise.

"But what's all the shooting for?" Mr. Loeb asks, comfortably seated in his office just off the Opera. "Everybody likes to come to Paris, to begin with. It is a wonderful city. If you are determined to go through the business of divorce and you can afford it, why not do it pleasantly?"

More Smoke Than Fire.

This is an argument unanimously agreed upon, you'll admit. A painless operation performed between window shopping and plans for alimony spending (if you get it) on the Rue de la Paix.

However, Mr. Loeb says there is much more smoke than fire to all you hear about the number of divorces granted in Paris. There were only about 300 given Americans last year. The proportions, he admits, grow a little larger each year, but not enough to get excited about. Not nearly so large an increase, in fact, as the increase in the states, themselves.

"This getting a French divorce is a matter of business," continued the lawyer. "I think the preliminary stage of unhappiness that any couple goes through before they agree to separate is the most tragic situation in life. Most people give up too easily, too. But once they get as far as the lawyer's office, the main question is how to settle matters with dignity, fairness and haste.

"But Paris is no divorce mill. I'll bet there are more divorces granted in Reno in a month than in Paris during a year," he hazarded.

It's like this, according to Mr. Loeb's explanation. People with money have innumerable advantages over those with none. If two people can't get along, but have only a small salary to live on, they manage to patch things up. Sometimes you'll find within a year they are thanking their stars they had to stick it out because they discovered, after all, they would not have been happy apart.

"The two little bears," Mr. Loeb philosophizes, "bear and forbear, you know. That's a lesson lots of married people never learn."

When people have too much money the way out is too easy. "If the wife doesn't get her way twice running, or if the husband objects to the way the little woman has her hair cut, off they go to the divorce court."

Why Publicity Arises.

One hears a great deal about people running over to Paris, establishing a residence, and coming back home with the papers signed and sealed, in a month. But it is actually more involved than that, although there is little to stand in the way of getting a divorce in Paris if both parties are willing.

Reverting to Paris' reputation as a divorce mill, Mr. Loeb explained how logical it is that notoriety is given to many divorces obtained here. There are good reasons, he says. One is that it costs about $6,000 to obtain one. If a person can afford that little extravagance, he must be fairly wealthy. Being wealthy, he is more or less known, and being well known, everything he does gets into the home papers. If it gets into the papers, everybody talks about the divorce, and there you are. You hear a lot of talk about somebody's Paris divorce, and by the time the decree is finally granted you fancy you've heard about 50 cases instead of one.

The French divorce laws are practically the same as they have always been. It is just as easy tot get a divorce in Paris as it used to be, provided you have the grounds and the money. You don't need to invent causes in this city. There is less hypocrisy about it here, Mr. Loeb thinks.

The technic of the Paris divorce is this: The French court insists on receiving a certificate stating the divorce laws of the state from which the plaintiff comes. The American attorney, representing the plaintiff, must enumerate for the judge the causes on which a decree can be granted in that state.

On the face of it, that would seem to make it hard to get a divorce. But apparently not. If an American comes to Paris and establishes a bona fide residence, he can obtain a divorce on exactly the same grounds that a Frenchman can. This is managed under a department of international law called the Theorie du Renvoi.

Softening the Charges.

In New York, for instance, adultery is the only ground for divorce. There is still enough of the Puritan streak in the average divorce gambler, apparently, to resent the ugly term, even though it is admitted quite openly that nobody believes it when inserted as a charge.

New Yorkers can, if they establish residence here, get their divorce, then, on any other charge they wish, provided they find it distasteful to use the home charge.

Suppose you came from South Carolina, which is one of the states where you cannot be divorced on any grounds whatsoever. That wouldn't prevent you from getting a Paris divorce if you were hell-bent-for-freedom. Establishing the domicile in France is the solution. Once you have accomplished the domicile you can sue on any grounds you like, providing they come under the French law. The international code has accepted the law of domicile in precedence to that of nationality.

By this sophisticated method of reasoning, the French courts and American lawyers consider that they are applying the law of New York or California, or Indiana, when they grant an American domiciled in France a decree on grounds not admitted in the laws of the state from which the plaintiff comes. But this law, like so many others, seems to have been made just to be broken.

Three Weeks Will Do It.

One can get a divorce in about three weeks in Paris, if you file a suit naming the grounds that are legitimate in your state. That is, Mrs. A can get the divorce if Mr. A either appears or sends his admission of guilt or assent, via his attorney.

In America it's just the other way round. If the defendant is willing to let the divorce go through, the one important thing is not to appear or take any notice whatsoever of the goings on.

If the defendant in a Parisian case is too busy to come to France and does not hire a lawyer to represent him it will take a couple of months before papers can be sent over, served on him and returned.

When one says "he," meaning the guilty party, it is a matter of form more than anything else. Most of the divorces granted in Paris are on grounds of incompatibility. But the husband usually lets the wife get the divorce and the world understands that he's being a gentleman, which, Mr. Loeb says, "is the last vestige of chivalry in this gross, material, unromantic world."

Stories of charlatanism practiced on divorce seekers are afloat, such as the one about women who have gone home waving a badge of freedom which turned out to be a worthless piece of paper. You can go back home to your husband with a surprise haircut, but not with a surprise divorce diploma and the women who are being preyed upon by the shyster lawyers are those who think they can accomplish a divorce without the knowledge of their mates. A husband has to help his wife get a Paris divorce and that is all there is to it. You can't slip one over on him.

"Some women would get gypped buying buttons at the five and ten," says Mr. Loeb, "so they ought to be warned against what shyster lawyers there are in Paris. Any one who seriously contemplates a French divorce will first consult a reputable attorney at home and set out knowing most of the ropes.

One of World's Luxuries.

"It is one of the world's greatest luxuries, a divorce in gay Paree. The least you can get one for, say, if the lawyer is a friend of the family and all that, is about $2,500. Then you would have to pay the lawyer back home, in addition.

"The reason the alimony is settled in America is because it is the only way a woman can get a reasonable sum. Also, any judgment awarded by a French court is taxed by the government. Children under 10 will always be given to the mother, if that issue is brought in France, which is rarely done, however.

"Yes, it's a funny business," says Mr. Loeb. "The most ardent young bridegroom will growl if his marriage expenses run up. But if he wants a divorce, the sky is the limit. Because, as I said at the start, if people want a divorce, wild horses won't stop them. What it's all leading up to I wouldn't even try to guess. But I have one idea and that is that the children who have suffered from these casually disrupted unions are going to have violent revulsions against divorce and inaugurate again the good old-fashioned institution of marriage 'till death do us part.'" and in 6,000 years was a man. Now you know that's all darn foolishness. Of course, I believe in one kind of evolution. You know you can take a mustang pony from Texas and take him up to Kentucky and breed him up and after a while get a fine thoroughbred horse. But he is still a horse. He ain't a monkey and he ain't a man. You can take a razorback hog which runs around in the woods and mix it with good stock and after a while you might get a good Poland China hog. But it is still a hog. It ain't a man. They say man comes from the monkey. Well then, where did the monkey come from? They don't know. If man comes from monkey, then all the monkeys ought to be men by this time. But we still have monkeys. The schools have been improving nearly all the time up in our parish where I was born and raised. Back in my day they didn't even have classes. They just put us all together in spelling and reading and arithmetic classes and we learned as much as we could."

'News' That Comes and Goes

Texas—No legislation is in force; but the state textbook commission, set up by the act of 1895 seemingly as chiefly a purchasing agent, has ruled out several books containing matter dealing with the theory of evolution, and has caused the deletion of parts of several other textbooks.

California — Anti-evolution sentiment is strong.

The anti-evolutionists have relied solely on legislative enactments. In some communities they have controlled or coerced local school boards and state textbook commissions, and have held a club over the heads of teachers. The New York World of September 24, 1925, quoted a superintendent of education in a southern state as saying:

"The people do not want any evolution taught in their schools and we just see to it that it is not taught. In one county a principal got to saying too much about evolution and we just removed him quietly. We didn't say why; we didn't need to, but he knew and all the other teachers knew and it's been a lesson to them."

The official Ku Klux Klan paper, on May 8, 1926, printed a dispatch from Indianapolis telling of a meeting there to protest against the teaching in high schools "that Christ is not the Son of God and that God did not create the world."

Contrary to the common impression, the spirit of intolerance on this question is rather less strong among the churches than among some advocates of evolution. One is startled by a passage in a letter written by a teacher of science in a border state university to a friend, also a scientist, which reads:

"A New York bank president has recently offered to raise $1,000,000 to further the movement for the teaching of religion in the public schools. This, together with the funds that have been placed at the disposal of fundamentalist organizations, gives the opposition group a backing that scientists and liberals can hardly hope to secure, and if continued to a point where business and religion 'hunt together' in favor of reactionary doctrines and the continued exploitation of the working classes by industry, it semes to me that we are surely headed for another period of dark ages."

Nothing more intemperate than that is to be found coming from the fundamentalists.

The same note of pessimism, of fear that the anti-evolutionists will bring about the ruin of American civilization, is found in a recent public statement by Judge John R. Neal, one of the counsel who defended Scopes. In a bulletin about education in Tennessee issued through Science Service in Washington, Judge Neal said:

"The appalling effect of the anti-evolution law in Tennessee is written in the anxious faces of science teachers. . . . It has ceased to be a joke and become a terrifying reality. . . . The textbook commission either deleted the science textbooks of all reference to evolution or selected new science books of an inferior character. . . . I have been informed by numerous science teachers that almost every recitation has become a trying ordeal. . . . Many timid teachers are becoming fearful of discussing scientific subjects even in private conversations."

It is difficult to avoid feeling that such expressions are the exaggerations of excessive partisanship. Only an excited person can believe "we are surely headed for another period of dark ages." Nor will it be easy to convince the average American that education in Tennessee is in such straits as Judge Neal pictures.

But without taking the expressions quoted above at face value, we still must take into account a vast body of opinion that views with misgivings the establishment of dictatorships over education by politicians and hysterical controversialists. The following statement is by a man who is not a scientist, not a partisan, but a lawyer of high distinction. Speaking at St. Louis on October 3, 1925, ex-Senator Chester I. Long, of Wichita, Kan., at the time president of the American Bar association, said:

"There is a spirit of intolerance abroad that must be met with reason and a calm discussion of the principles upon which our dual government rests. . . . The battle against intolerance is on. Let us do our part in the great debate. The freedom of learning is in peril and we of the American bar must see that it is preserved to us and our children."

The present era in the United States is on its material side the most fortunate ever experienced by the average man in any country at any time. Materially America has greater cause to be satisfied than any country ever had before. So far as man can be sustained with bread alone, America is not hungry. But on the spiritual side, in all the aspects of life that may be described inclusively as nonmaterial, America is pretty unhappy. On that side our contemporaneous history is one of discordant wrangling. The acquisition of the materials indispensable to life, of food and shelter, is easier, and consumes less of the time and effort of the average man that was ever the case before. But when man turns to find what use to make of his leisure, his new found release, he is puzzled, dismayed. Many of his experiments toward spiritual satisfaction turn to ashes on his lips. A partial cause of this, one must conclude, is the widespread undermining of long accepted dogmas and rules of life; a condition tending to put upon each man for himself the need of thinking out his own rules, of determining for himself what is most worth while.

SUUDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

This may sound like one of those famous testimonials, writes a Brooklyn reader, but the fact remains that I have suffered the tortures of the damned for years by starting in the middle of May with rose fever and going blithely through the entire season until October, with hay fever.

Last year I went to Europe and did not have it but I have the last two years been taking injections. According to the skin tests I seem "sensitized" to numerous pollens. This spring the doctor gave me something in the way of electric light (probably ultraviolet light) treatment which he finds the most helpful remedy. It was rather an unpleasant seance, for it was necessary to insert the glass tubes deeply in each nostril so the light could reach the affected tissues.

In spite of all this, May 15 found me flat on my back for four days with swollen face and continuous sneezing. Then we saw your suggestion of (a) going to Duluth by way of the Great Lakes or (b) taking calcium lactate. Being a business woman, the latter appealed to me, and I purchased the remedy. It was necessary to take it only four times a day for a week when all appearances, symptoms and sniffles faded from my life.

Then I went to Gloucester. Up there the first day I met three people who were hastening away as the Gloucester climate was just the sort where hay fever thrives. I passed the good word on and two of the three began taking calcium lactate and were able to remain at home in comfort, while the third absconded.

I also told a friend of mother's who has had hay fever for 35 years and she has a son-in-law who is a physician, and she has been given about all the cures without avail. She took the calcium lactate as you advised and yesterday she called up and told mother for the first time in her life she was able to enter the subway and go over to New York, as heretofore she has generally spent about four weeks in bed this time of year, as she has asthma with it.

In view of the foregoing I cannot express deeply enough my appreciation of your work. If you never helped any one else, this suggestion you broadcast about the calcium lactate for hay fever surely has made many people call you blessed.

In many cases of pollinosis, hay fever, asthma and hyperesthetic rhinitis, not to mention reoccurring hives and other manifestations of anaphylactic sensitization, there is a demonstrable deficiency of calcium (lime) salts in the blood, some inherent or specific impairment or deficiency in the metabolism or utilization of calcium (lime).

One way to remedy this fault is by taking internally from 10 to 30 grains of calcium lactate or calcium chloride well diluted or immediately followed with a large drink of water three or four times daily, beginning a few days before the arrival of the trouble if it be seasonal hay fever and continuing, perhaps alternate weeks, throughout the season. These calcium salts are comparatively harmless, though in some cases they may tend to upset the stomach; the lactate is perhaps the least likely to disturb the digestion.

But it is essential, of course, that the mule be made to drink when you drive him to water. Taking any amount of calcium in food or medicine isn't any assurance that you are going to utilize, assimilate or metabolize the calcium. Something else seems to be necessary to insure the utilization of calcium or lime salts in the human economy. Let's see what else may be needed.

Sunlight on the naked skin, or ultraviolet light from an artificial source, has been found to provide the influence which is necessary to enable the body to utilize calcium. In this way an infant with rickets is more quickly cured; or better, if the infant gets a fair amount of sunlight on the naked body there is small chance for rickets to develop. Rickets is a manifestation in early life of some deficiency in calcium metabolism — either a deficiency in the supply of calcium in the food, or a deficiency in the constitutional makeup of the child, or a bit of both.

Plain cod liver oil has been dubbed "bottled sunshine" and it may be used to provide the essential influence which the normal utilization or calcium demands, either in a young infant or in an adult with one of the troubles mentioned. Hay fever sufferers as well as victims of true spasmodic asthma (not emphysema, nor bronchitectasis, nor chronic bronchitis, nor difficulty in breathing from other causes) may well take a tip at the baby's cod liver oil bottle every day.

Probably an internal secretion or hormone is concerned in the metabolism or utilization of calcium in the body. Some scientific students believe the parathyroid gland hormone plays this role; others are quite as convinced that it is one of the several roles played by the thyroid gland. Anyhow, it has been found that very small doses of parathyroid or thyroid extract, in conjunction with a course of calcium lactate or calcium chloride as described, will bring success in certain cases where the calcium alone fails. This is a question for the individual's physician to pass upon; these hormones are two-edged and laymen who venture to trifle with them are apt to get hurt.

For folk who can't take the boat for Duluth, these suggestions may amount to at least a bet not to be overlooked.

QUESTION AND ANSWER DEPARTMENT.

Climate and Goiter.

Since I moved to Illinois two years ago I have developed goiter. I spent a few months in Minnesota this summer and believe the climate was beneficial. Would change of climate be beneficial? Can climate alone, for instance Atlantic coast climate, Pacific coast or a dry inland climate, cure goiter? (S. R.)

ANSWER—It is probably the difference in the amount of iodin naturally present in the soil, that influences goiter. Seaside climate is generally deemed favorable, mountain climate unfavorable, but that, too, is more likely a matter of the amount of iodin in food, water, and maybe in the air of the seaside. Living near the sea, and consuming liberal proportions of sea food (fish or shell-fish) is desirable.

Sanitary Stuff

My husband claims oil cloth for floor covering is not sanitary, holds germs both underneath and on top, and collects dust and germs. I say it is more sanitary than plain wood floors as I have at present. (MRS. M. E. G.)

ANSWER—A plain wood floor kept clean is just as sanitary as any other, though it is easier to clean, brush, sweep, mop or scrub a floor covered with oil cloth or similar material.

Champion Cigarette Field.

My son two years old is a fiend for cigarettes. His father claims they will not harm him, as he himself smoked when he was his age. The problem rests with you. I will watch for your advice. (MRS. K. K.)

ANSWER—I suppose the K. K. stands for Kwite Kute.

When Short Hair Came In.

At what period in the world's history did men cease to wear long hair? Why do they now have their locks bobbed? Did they like convict style better? Why do some men affect Airedale style, dark above and nondescript about the neck and ears? Why do they shave their beards and mustaches? (VERA E.)

ANSWER—Your round, Vera. For myself, I try to keep mine kinda darkish about the neck and ears and Mexican Hairless in the deep Sahara.

How Many Times?

How many times is a person supposed to breathe a minute? I am anxious to know how many times a person should breathe each minute. I will appreciate knowing how often a person must breathe a minute. (C. E. W.)

ANSWER—Or in other words you wish to learn the rate of respiration in a normal individual? Fifteen to twenty.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

ANSWERED BY

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman

Providence, R. I.

I am reading Freud's books on "Dreams." Sometimes I believe him, sometimes not. I don't seem to get his primary idea. What would you say it is?

Just this, that an emotional conflict which usually occurs during the early years results in a species of diseased memory. The sufferer resolutely tries to forget and does forget this painful experience. But it strikes into the subconscious mind and festers there. This festering is the disease in question. It affects some part of body or mind unknown to the sufferer. It is a bit of life "split off," more or less, from conscious life. One way to get at it is by dream analysis; and if it can be raised to the surface and linked up with previous associations it should cause no further trouble. The technical term for it is a complex.

Freud is undoubtedly a great medical psychologist, but many of his old colleagues disagree with his theory that complexes have an exclusive sex origin. Hence you should balance his arguments by a later reading of Jung and Stekel. And after reading them all lean heavily on your own good sense.

Who comes first, one's husband or one's mother?

Should a girl marry if she has any doubt in her mind as to whether her husband or her mother should have first claim upon her affections and efforts?

Surely you recognize the congenital difference between filial and marital affection. They can and do exist together everywhere without jar. But if they so exist in you that you are unable to assign your prospective husband the first place in your heart, do not betray him by marrying him.

If your mother needs special care, this you can give her without any diminution of your duties as a wife. No woman has to neglect her mother because she loves her husband. Yet Jesus said that a man (and this also means a woman) shall leave his father and mother and cleave to his wife. His command was founded upon the basic instincts essential for life's perpetuity and is reasonable as well as revelatory.

Would not many of your daily readers be strengthened in their lives if they got closer to nature? I say this because I recently have found surcease from sorrow in the quietness, rest and beauty of the countryside!

Yes. A walk in a garden or through a wood furnishes many a consoling parable for life and shows that "man does not live by bread alone." He feels that he is one in far-reaching ways with such surroundings.

To escape from one's self, to be rid, if only for the moment, of intolerable burdens, or made more equal to bearing them, to reconcile discordant qualities, to find freshness in familiar objects, to quicken right judgments and stabilize self-possession, a return to nature is always advisable.

For man the stars revolve, the clouds drift, the air breathes, the winds blow, the flowers bloom. Through their multiform appearance runs the spinal cord of an ascertainable purpose. By means of an informed imagination all ranks and conditions of humanity are linked to the soil, and what it produces; to the sky and the mountains, the rivers and the seas; to all the fortressed loveliness of nature.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mayor Walker, of New York, has publicly stated in a speech that his father came to this country from Ireland to get religious liberty. This plainly gives the impression that repression and oppression were used by the government of England. If untrue, it is very mischievous to be forever harping on imaginary wrongs and most unfair to the English people whom I consider fair and tolerant to others.

Has the mayor been mistaught?

I do not think so. The history of Ireland shows that until the beginning of the 19th century, and well on into that era, the Roman Catholics of Ireland, who formed a majority of its population, were debarred by their faith from numerous political rights and public offices.

Read any dispassionate account of their disabilities, such as that given by John Richard Green, himself an Englishman and an Anglican clergyman, in his "Short History of the English People," for a justification of Mayor Walker's remarks.

At the same time I agree with you that the English people are just, tolerant and fair-minded to a high degree. I also think that since the strained relations which existed for a prolonged period between their government and the Irish people seem to be now happily adjusted, it is best for all concerned to let the dead past bury its dead. As I think I have said before in this column, the history of Ireland is one for Englishmen to remember and Irishmen to forget—if they can.

for the farmer it is with the memory of calloused hands and aching muscles.

But with all that he is too wise to commit himsel for the country to relief measures, hastily concocted and more likely to prove delusive in operation than saving from a threatened economic impasse. If and when a workable and effective relief measure is worked out by congress the wager is an hundred to one that President Coolidge will approve it gladly.

In the World Court Matter.

In the matter of the adhesion of this nation to the permanent court of international justice he inherited the issue from President Harding, who based it upon the republican platform of 1920, which said, "we pledge the coming republican administration to such agreements with the other nations of the world as shall meet the full duty of America to civilizaton and humany, in accordance with American ideals, and without surrendering the right of the American people to exercise its judgment and its power in favor of justice and peace."

Consequently President Coolidge urged the ratification of the world court protocol, with suggested reservations, but the fight in the senate for ratification stirred up such rancorous rows in both parties as to make the whole subject distasteful both to the president and plenty of the people. So I think it can be fairly assumed that President Coolidge did not go out in the backyard of the white house and weep when he found that the League of Nations crowd at Geneva have made American adhesion to the court impossible.

For Practicable Prohibition.

As for the growing problem of prohibition, I think the president's attitude toward it is perfectly plain.

As long as the 18th amendment is in the constitution he holds that it is supreme law and must be uphell, and as long as congress maintains the Volstead act it must be enforced as far as available governmental resources can do that. Upon those two propositions he is as fixed as the north star and he has endeavored to get the best possible plan and personnel to secure satisfying results.

But it is my guess that he is convinced that federal power, as congress and the people will permit its use, cannot satisfactorily enforce the nation-wide prohibition commanded by the constitution, however sympathetic the president and diligent his offcials.

In fact I am confident that, unofficially and as a strong state's rights man, he would recommend return to the state option plan of regulating or prohibiting the liquor traffic, with the additional provison of rigid federal prohibition of interstate and international traffic in intoxicating liquors.

Hs Speeches to the Country.

The trends of his thoughts on public matters are best gathered from the addresses that he makes on special occasions and that are usually radioed to millions of listeners from coast to coast. No president—in fact, no living man or dead one—has ever spoken so directly and so often to so vast numbers of people as has President Coolidge.

His voice and enunciation make him a good broadcaster and it is often more satisfying to hear him over the radio than to be in his immediate audience.

I think he fancies reaching the people by radio. He writes well and reads distinctly. His thoughts are clothed in strong and understandable Anglo-Saxon. While he has coined no outstanding epigrams that have become currency of common speech, he has impressed the people with the depth and sanity of his thinking.

No man knows his mind on the mooted third term idea, but if his party drafts him in 1928, we democrats may be sure that we have a real job cut out for us when we go out to defeat him.

Confidence Must Accompany Cooperation

Editor Constitution: Every year early in the fall we hear the same howl about dumping cotton on the market and breaking the price, and it looks like somebody is to blame. It is true that when the farmer gathers two or three bales he lays whip to old Beck and Kit, going to town with a rush with all the neighbors following close at his heels and they dump the cotton on the market to the tune of "what makes the wildcat wild." Under such conditions the farmer has about as much chance to get the full value of his cotton as the ghost has of catching a negro in the graveyard at midnight.

It is no wonder that the cotton market breaks to prices below the cost of production, and the farmer loses his year's work, and the ginner loses his bagging and ties, and the merchant loses the goods he sold on credit, and the cotton buyer loses his head, and the banker loses his nerves, and then the whole group of them stand around and look at each other and grin, trying to decide which is the butt end of a billy goat.

But who is to blame? Surely the farmer is not to blame for the records show that during the past 40 years a large number of farmer organizations have been created for the purpose of a remedy, and today the financial graveyard is white with the tombstones of farmers' organizations that have failed.

Not long ago I heard of a town where the bankers, merchants, cotton buyers and farmers all met and formed an organization for the correct marketing of cotton, but the outcome of it was like the old time story of where all of the animals met in the woods one night and agreed to be friends, the lion and the bear, the coon, the fox, the rabbit, the dog and cats were all there. The next day the fox and the rabbit were standing in the road talking and they saw a big dog galloping down the road towards them and the fox said to the rabbit, "Guess I better be going." "No," said the rabbit, "you know we all met last night and agreed to be friends." "Yes," said the fox, "I know we did, but it may be that the gentleman coming down the road was not at the meeting." Moral, when the bankers, merchants, farmers and cotton buyers get together on the basis of mutual confidence with the understanding that each man will carry his part of the load the cotton crop will bring its full value in the markets of the world. And thus the south will be saved millions of dollars that is lost. M. H. WOLFE.

EMORY STUDENT BODY PLANS FOR LECTURES

Emory University, Ga., October 2.—(Special.)—Announcement was made today by the Student Lecture association of the temporary program of speakers that the organization will bring to Emory campus during the term. Prominent lecturers from all over the world are brought to the Emory campus each year by this association and the program this year, as announced by the president, David A. Lockmiller, includes many speakers of national note.

The first lecture will be held on December 1, Dr. Baumgartt lecturing on the subject "Florence Today and in the Days of the Medici." Following this lecture on February 9, Miss Nellie Walker, famous as a sculptress, will lecture on the "Sculptor's Studio." Next on the program is Professor Douglas, of Chicago, who will deliver a lecture on the 20th of February; Professor Barnum Brown comes on January 20, and Dr. Bruno Roselli is slated to appear at a date to be arranged some time during the spring.

Other speakers will be chosen later by the association, and in all there will be some ten or twelve noted men and women brought before the students before the lecture season closes.

In the past the association has secured such men as Josephus Daniels, Lothrop Stoddard, and Charlie Paddock as speakers on previous programs. The expense of bringing the speakers to the campus is met by a fund charged each student by the Student Activities council of the university, and only those who have not paid this fee will be charged admission to the lectures.

12-YEAR-OLD BOYS HELD FOR ROBBERY

Waycross, Ga., October 2.—(Special.)—Four Waycross boys, about 12 years of age, are charged with breaking into and entering the Cherokee Pharmacy in the heart of the business district, and hauling off a quantity of merchandise, including valuable cut-glass dishes, flashlights, tobacco and other articles.

It is believed the youths have carted off a large quantity of goods.

MANUFACTURERS PLAN FOR GOTHAM MEETING

Joseph P. McGrath, secretary of the Georgia Manufacturers' association, will head a delegation of Georgia representatives to the thirty-first annual meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers to be held October 6-7, at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, New York

The party will include Thomas M. Brumby, Sharpe Jones, secretary; W. M. McLaurin, W. E. Dunn, Jr., W. C. Royer, Ivan Allen. This party will be joined in New York by a number of prominent Georgia manufacturers, including George S. Harris and Mr. W. J. Vereen.

Prior to the meeting of the National association Mr. McGrath and Mr. Brumby will attend the eighteenth semi-annual conference of the National Industrial council. Strong efforts will be made to attract the twin associations to Georgia in 1927.

NEW ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNFIRE RECORD MADE

Santa Cruz, Calif., October 2.—(AP) What is claimed as a world's record for anti-craft machine gun fire has been established at Camp McQuaide, near here, by the machine gun battery of the 63rd coast artillery, of Fort Winfield Scott, San Francisco.

In two minutes firing, 160 hits were registered on a sleeve target towed at $1,200 feet altitude, 800 yard range at 80 miles an hour.

The increase in efficiency was said to be due to a new type of sights designed by Second Lieutenant Grayson Schmidt.

Broadway Star In Photoplay At Howard

Eddie Cantor Films His Musical Comedy, "Kid Boots."

For years Brodway claimed Eddie Cantor as its own. A million and a quarter people saw the musical comedy star in "Kid Boots" during its three-year New York run.

Now, Paramount, through the medium of a superb motion picture version of Florenz Ziegfeld's "Kid Boots," has brought the much-lauded show and its star to the screen. "Kid Boots" opens at the Howard theater tomorrow.

The critical public has acclaimed "Kid Boots" enthusiastically wherever it has been shown, lauding the film as the year's most convincing laugh compeller. Clean, free-moving comedy, effervescing with funny situations, which clip merrily through a story filled with heart throbs, blend into the picture.

Inimitable Eddie Cantor as the "come-on" of a second-hand store, competing for trade against two burly neighbors, lends ample latitude for the introduction of ingenious comedy. With the entrance of entrancing Clara Bow and her husky would-be lover, Malcolm Waite, Eddie finds himself fairly wallowing in trouble.

Clara Bow is as subtly impertinent and refreshing as ever as the swimming instructress, and "Kid Boots" introduces the heroine of "Mantrap" in a new surprise to her fans—a bathing suit. Other featured players include lovely Billie Dove, and Handsome Lawrence Gray.

Frank Cambria brings another of his splendid public stage presentations to the Howard this week. This is called "Love's Enchantment" and is presented in a garden setting said to be a rarely beautiful example of stagecraft. The garden is supposedly enchanted, with the various flowers and fruits giving forth delightful music at the magic touch of the Petchings who give an adaption of their musical novelty act in which they have appeared with great success for a number of years both in this country and in Europe.

Music lovers attending the Howard this week will also enjoy hearing Bruno Steinback, concert pianist, who will appear as an added stage attraction.

The overture by the Howard Symphony orchestra will be selections from "Faust." Joseph Littau will direct. Melvin P. Ogden will offer "Kentucky Lullaby" at the Golden Voiced Wurlitzer. Other numbers on the program will include a Lyman Howe "Hodge Podge," news reel and comedy.

My goodness, aren't women getting contrary these days? In the upper left corner is shown Anna Q. Nilsson, who appears in "Miss Nobody" at the Metropolitan theater this week. "As women show, so shall men peep" is the title of the next stirring little scene. The famous Eddie Cantor is the male portion of the photo with Clara Bow in the role of exhibitor. They star in "Kid Boots," the screen version of the stage affair, which will be shown at the Howard theater. My, my, our old friend, Buster Keaton, is an exponent of the manly art! He is seen in "Battling Butler" at Loew's Grand. Just from this photo we are not overly impressed with "Bus's" skill as a boxer, but if he is in form, he'll knock us for a barrel of laughter. Next is shown Milton Sills who appears in "The Knockout" at the Fairfax theater at East Point. Douglas Fairbanks comes to the Cameo in "Don Q, Son of Zorro." Just below are shown William Boyd and Elinor Fair, who appear in "The Volga Boatman" at the Palace theater. On the lower left, an attractive study of Rin-Tin-Tin is shown. The famous dog star is seen in his latest vehicle, "The Hero of the Big Snows," at the Rialto this week. Jack Holt stars "Empty Hands" at the Alamo No. 2. The next view is from "Doubling With Danger" at the Tudor Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Richard Barthelmess and Lois Moran are starred in "Just Suppose" at the West End theater Monday and Tuesday. Next is shown scene from "Three Faces East," which comes Wednesday to the new Tenth Street theater.

'BATTLING BUTLER' ON LOEW'S SCREEN

In what experts say is one of the greatest comedies of all time, "Battling Butler," the famous comedian Buster Keaton will appear as star at Loew's Grand theater this week. Keaton is supported by an all star cast which includes Sally O'Neill.

"Battling Butler" is an epic comedy for several reasons. It is the most ambitious picture Keaton has ever made, and he has made many highly successful comedies, as the world knows. The months that the frozen-face, star-director spent picturizing the New York and London stage hit, after paying a huge price for the screen rights, are well rewarded, for the comedy is a veritable laugh riot from the first fade-in to the final fade-out.

Buster is recognized in the motion picture industry as a comedian who demands—and gets—originality, and flawless acting in his comedies. Directing as well as starring in his pictures, Keaton keeps away from studio-worn hokum and strives for brilliant new mirth-provoking situations.

"Battling Butler" is different. The plot—and it's a real one—is different. Even Buster, funnier than ever, is different. Imagine the frozen-faced farceur, minus his pancake hat and ill-fitting clothes, but instead a Beau Brummel—a fashion plate who changes his attire several times a day, with the aid of a valet!

And then, because lovesick youths rush in where even cops fear to tread, thrust such a dandy into an atmosphere of hardboiled pugilists, and the resultant happenings are a scream.

Fairfax Theater.

The newest member of the chain of community theaters operated by Alpha Fowler in this city, the Fairfax, although it is only a day younger than the Tenth Street, which opened one day before the Fairfax, will offer this week a bill entirely in keeping with the gala opening which was accorded it last week.

The new theater, opened for the purpose of providing the people of East Point, College Park and Hapeville with a theater that offered them every comfort and convenience of the larger uptown theaters, was given a rousing reception last week.

On Monday and Tuesday, Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky will star at the Fairfax in "The Dark Angel." "The Dark Angel" is easily one of the most captivating of the many successes to the credit of George Fitzmaurice. It is a modern love story replete with thrills and lavishness. On Wednesday the Fairfax will offer "Heritage of the Desert," a thrilling western with an all-star cast.

Thursday and Friday will bring to the Fairfax screen the he-man star, Milton Sills in "The Knockout." Romance, heart interest, comedy and thrills are combined in this story of rugged American manhood. It reveals a modern "Gentleman Jim" type of pugilist who goes into the big timber country to recuperate from an injury. He experiences adventures that make his ring career seem uneventful.

Tenth Street Theater.

Billings for the second big week of the new Tenth Street theater are no less meritorious than the pictures which gave the new house such a tremendous send-off last week. The new theater, which is a model of beauty, has been speedily accorded a position in that community. The Tenth Street is located at the corner of Peachtree and Tenth streets.

On Monday and Tuesday at the Tenth Street, the feature attraction will be the famous Rex Beach novel in film form, "Padlocked." An all-star cast is featured, headed by the popular girl-star, Lois Moran, and the talented Noah Beery. "Padlocked" is a stirring society drama told in that masterful style which is a characteristic of Rex Beach.

"Three Faces East," starring Jetta Goudal, Henry B. Walthall and Clive Brook, is featured on Wednesday for that day only. "Three Faces East" is a screen romance of tremendous strength and appeal. It is a picturization of the famous stage play of the same name.

Thursday and Friday will see on the Tenth Street screen the screaming comedy, "Red Hot Tires," featuring Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller, co-starred. The story is a rip-roaring comedy of accidents, automobiles and laughs in which the hero, injured in a wreck, gets afraid of motor cars. But when the girl he loves is in danger, he speeds to her rescue at the maddest pace he ever drove in his speed-demon days. Monte plays the charming idler, who, from an overdose of racing, turns to horseback riding, and Patsy Ruth Miller, the impulsive girl who races in and out of his life in her high-powered roadster.

On Saturday Lon Chaney will be seen in what is perhaps his most famous crook-drama, "The Black Bird." As the "Black Bird," Chaney impersonates one of the most clever crooks who ever baffled Scotland Yard. "The Black Bird" will be shown Saturday only.

FAMOUS DOG STAR FEATURED AT RIALTO

"A Hero of the Big Snows," the new Rin Tin Tin picture is the featured picture for the program at the Rialto theater this week.

It will be acompanied by a series of other fine entertainment numbers.

Among them are "Who's My Wife," a Christie educational comedy; Pathe News, which scored such tremendous successes recently in "covering" the Florida hurricane, and a musical program under the direction of Frank Turner.

"A Hero of the Big Snows" comes well recommended. Rinty's mate, Nanette, makes her appearance in this new production, and the cast of humans includes Alice Calhoun, Don Alvarado, Leo Willis and Mary Jane Milliken.

The story, by Ewart Adamson, has the Canadian woods as its locale, an deals with a young wastrel, Ed Nolan, who save Rin-Tin-Tin from the brutality of a trapper. Rinty strikes up a friendship with a dog belonging to Mary Mallory, a pretty and plucky Canadian girl, and Ed finds the girl a good influence in his unhappy existence.

When Mary's baby sister falls ill and she starts out in a severe snowstor for the doctor, Rinty aids her, and, in a thrilling fight with a wolf pack, brings the girl safely to her destination.

Rinty had been suspected of injuring the child, but in reality had rescued her from the attack of a wolf. His loyalty and bravery vidicates him of the suspicion, he saves the child, and brings together the two young lovers, after a series of thrilling incidents and encounters with a starving pack of wolves.

This is said to be the most exciting as well as most beautiful of Rin-Tin-Tin's pictures.

Alamo No. 2.

A special week of pictures has been booked at the New Alamo Two theater of Fair week and are arranged as follows with a new picture each day.

Monday Norma Shearer and Jack Holt will be seen together in "Empty Hands." This is one of the best pictures in which these popular stars have appeared.

Tuesday Bebe Daniels in Zane Grey's "Heritage of the Desert," with Ernest Torrence, Noah Beery and Lloyd Hughes will be shown.

For Wednesday James Cruze's production, "The Fighting Coward," with Cullen Landis, will be the attraction.

ANNA Q. NILSSON IN 'PONJOLA' ROLE

Portrays a Romantic Hobo in 'Miss Nobody,' a New Comedy-Drama.

Reminiscent of her immensely successful role in "Ponjola," in which she takes the part of an English gentleman, is Miss Nilsson's role in "Miss Nobody," which comes Monday to the Metropolitan theater.

In "Miss Nobody," however, the beautiful First National star is seen in the role of a hobo. Others featured in the cast are Walter Pidgeon, Mitchell Lewis, Arthur Stone and Clyde Cook. The picture is an adaptation of the celebrated novel "Shebo," by Tiffany Wells. Lambert Hillyer directed.

"Miss Nobody" details the astonishing exploits of an heiress and young society favorite who learns of her father's death and bankruptcy amid a revel on board an ocean liner as she returned from a gay season in Europe. She hides her sudden penury from her friends, seeks work, holding positions with poor success as her rent becomes ever more overdue, and finally, with her last presentable evening gown, attends a New Year's eve party to which the friends she has avoided have bidden her.

All the featured male members of the cast appear as tramps. Without exception they grew beards for their roles, it being the fashion these days for screen actors to raise their own beards instead of borrowing them.

Enrico Leide and his Metropolitan orchestra will top this week's musical program with the eighth edition of George White's "Scandals," which includes "Lucky Day," "The Birth of the Blues," "Black Bottom" and "Sevilla."

Among the extra screen attractions will be a special Mack Sennett feature comedy, "The Wife Tamers," in which a cast of well known stars are featured, the most prominent being Lionel Barrymore and Gertrude Astor.

Thursday "The City That Never Sleeps," featuring Ricardo Cortez, Virginia Lee Courbin and Louise Dressler.

Friday will find the Glorious Gloria Swanson supported by Rod La Rocque and Ricardo Cortez in her greatest picture, "A Society Scandal," holding the screen.

Saturday will bring the great week of special pictures to a finish with the showing of Zane Grey's powerful story of the great south west, "The Light of Western Stars," with such stars as Jack Holt, Billie Dove and Noah Beery.

Theatre Talk

CONDUCTED by LORENZO JONES JR.

"Dancing Mothers" Opens Monday at Forsyth Theater

Following "Applesauce," the Forsyth Players will appear this week in "Dancing Mothers," a remarkable play that thrilled New York for a year. A strong cast, the largest of the season, will appear in the offering and a truly interesting week is in store for play lovers by a reinforced players group.

"Dancing Mothers" is admittedly one of the best productions of the past few years and its plot could hardly have been arranged by any other than the brain of Edgar Selwyn. For 311 consecutive performances, it played to packed houses at the Maxine Elliott theater in New York.

Its vividness, its unusual twists and unexpected turns makes the play one of tremendous force, heavy and difficult to play. A cast of 20 players, including every member of the Forsyth Players, will be called into action, with James Coots, leading man, and Jeanne Devereaux, new leading woman, taking the heaviest roles.

Two new faces will be seen in the cast this week, Miss Devereaux and the new ingenue, Miss Theodosia Shaler, demure and vivacious little bit who will have the fine role of "Kittens" in this week's production. Both stars come to Atlanta with a long string of successes to their credit and in rehearsals the past week have shown marked ability and willingness to throw their very best into every situation.

Eugene DuBois, Gus Forbes, Lillian Wilck, Jay Mulrey, Frank Milan, Fred Brigham and others of the all-start cast will have exceptional roles.

"Dancing Mothers" is a play of life, maybe a bit exaggerated, but capable of thrilling the average person. A mother at 40 finds a new source of life and gets the kick of her dashing, cocktail drinking daughter, and her suave husband. It is an absorbing story and is certain to find hearty reception following "Applesauce," a gay, rollicking comedy which had a fine run last week.

West End Theater.

This week's program at the West End theater is of a type that will stand on equal par with any in the city for pure downright entertainment value. Richard Barthelmess, Tom Moore and the celebrated dog star, Rin-Tin-Tin, are the week's headliners.

Richard Barthelmess will be seen Monday and Tuesday in "Just Suppose," in which he is supported by the talented Lois Moran, the girl star. "Just Suppose" is said to be the most brilliant and colorful picture in which that popular star has yet appeared. It so happens that the story of "Just Suppose" contains a visit of a foreign prince to America. The prince of Koronia spends a happy fortnight as the guest of the Long Island haut monde. "Just Suppose" is ideal picture entertainment—bright, clean and sparkling in its comedy, appealing in its splendid quality for romance and gripping into its intensely dramatic moments. Few finer love stories have been shown on the screen.

For a run of Wednesday only, Tom Moore will be starred in his success "Big Brother." This film furnishes Tom Moore with one of the most appealing roles of his career.

On Thursday and Friday, Rin-Tin-Tin will star in "The Night Cry." Uttering its weird cry, the giant condor circled over the Martin ranch and the sheep were herded to cover. In the yard a baby was playing. The great bird swooped down, and in its talons caught the screaming child. Off toward the mountain tops the great vulture soared with its prey. Running desperately, a dog—you'll find yourself thrilled to the marrow when you see "The Night Cry."

On Saturday the feature will be "Wanderer of the Wasteland."

The last two months are the hardest. When are the Georgia and the new Erlanger going to open? We appeal to you, Messrs. Semon and Haase, to end this ghastly suspense.

BARNETTTHOMASREVUE HEADLINE AT LOEW'S

The Barnett and Thomas Revue which is produced by Lew Cantor and William Brandell and which ranks among the top-notchers in singing and dancing acts will appear as the headline attraction on the vaudeville bill this week at Loew's Grand theater. Herbert Barnett and Jack Thomas have "teamed" together for years and they will present a pretentious song and dance novelty enlivened with much comedy.

Much of the fun portion of the new bill will be in the hands of Winehill and Briscoe in their ludicrous sketch, "Jus for A. Laugh." Comedy songs and "nut" comicalities will be featured in the turn.

LaFoy, Startzman and company will present a skit based on new ideas entitled, "Tea for Three," written by Wiliam K. Wells. It bristles with bright lines and breezy situations and has been well received over the entire circuit.

Jack Nealy and Naomi Garnella are two favorites on the new bill. They will offer their new skit, "Youthful Capers," which contains some pleasing songs and dances.

As the opening number the Three Ambler Brothers will apepar. These artists will be remembered for their excellent work here on a program offered last year.

The popular comedian, Buster Keaton, will fill the star role in "Battling Butler," a fast going comedy of the prize ring which is said to be one of the greatest roles ever played by the man with the "frozen face."

Cameo Theater.

On Friday and Saturday the Cameo offers the picturization of one of the Zane Grey stories, "Desert Gold," a story of the desert, and of the men who rule there with might alone, and mostly a story of the mad search for the yellow metal; the romance of it all, and the romance of one man from the East who came out to reclaim himself, met the one woman for him, fought for her and won her. In the cast of "Desert Gold" are Neil Hamilton, Robert Fraser and Shirley Mason.

On Monday and Tuesday the Cameo brings back one of the greatest pictures Douglas Fairbanks ever made, this success being his sequel to the never-to-be-forgotten "The Mark of Zorro" in "Don Q. Son of Zorro." "Don Q" is the story of the son of the immortal Zorro, who invaded a foreign country in search of adventure and romance, became entwined in court intrigue, fell in love, and dashed merrily through a series of adventures both thrilling and highly enjoyable.

Baseball comes to the front in "The New Klondike" Tom Meighan's story of big league baseball, with Meighan cast as the carefree pitcher who stepped out and bought the baseball park when they wouldn't let him play, and is in general a sure-fire story of baseball players and baseball life.

Palace Theater.

"The Volga Boatman" starts a week of unusually fine entertainment at the Palace theater in Inman Park Monday and Tuesday. This picture produced by Cecil B. DeMille and starring William Boyd and the beautiful Elinor Faire is the gripping story of an overwhelming love in the tangled lives of a titanic boatman, a beautiful princess and a prince. It is a thrilling, fast moving achievement of the screen that has won a world of favorable comment wherever shown.

On Wednesday comes "Argentine Love" for one day only starring the handsome Ricardo Cortez. Bebe Daniels plays the feminine lead in this big drama adapted from a book by Blasco Ibanez the great Spanish author who made "The Four Horsemen of The Apocalypse." This picture is one that scintillates with the very essence of love drama under the colorful scenes of South America.

On Thursday and Friday Rex Beach' greats novel, "The Barrier," will hold sway for two days of real entertainment of the romantic old-time American Frontier days. The scenes of "The Barrier" are laid in Alaska and the plot centers around an army lieutenant and his sweetheart in the gold country between whom there is a barrier that at first seems insurmountable. The ending is, however, a happy one and the picture is satisfying.

Tudor Theater.

In his latest picture, "Doubling With Danger," which plays the Tudor on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Richard Talmadge is cast as a young aviator who is guarding the plans of a new invention and is attacked by crooks who hope to gain possession of the secret.

With this the basis of the plot thrills are worked in fast and furious with Dick Talmadge moving faster than ever in his dare-devil stunts. The acrobatic and athletic stunts performed by the star are all conceived by him and he uses no double, taking all risks and doing all the tricks himself. In addition there will be shown a comedy and International news.

For the last half of the week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the Tudor offers Hoot Gibson in another of his fast moving, thrilling stories of the west, with the star cast as a youth who got into trouble through no fault of his and is left to get out of it as best he can.

FOOTNOTES ON THE FOOTLIGHTS

BY ELMO HAMBY

One of the most distinctive characters I have ever known is Bill Jenkins (or William K., if you prefer) manager and part owner of the new Tenth Street theater which opened last week. I am not acquainted with him to the extent that I can vouch for his ability as a manager, but as a builder and designer of theaters, this young man is what is commonly referred to as the "cat's." Added to a highly technical knowledge of planning and building, he possesses that touch of the artist which manifests itself in little things here and there about the new enterprise.

For instance there is the old Chinese lantern which hangs on the private balcony of the theater. Mr. Jenkins ran across this old relic some place and promptly utilized it for this private little nook.

To further illustrate: He told me last week of an old Spanish painting which he had run across several years ago in Florida, the title of which was "Home." It portrayed the burning of a makeshift shack on the peach with the figure of an old peg-leg sailor standing sorrowfully in the foreground. When the Tenth Street was finished one wall of the little private balcony which I have mentioned, was bare, and the enterprising Mr. Jenkins conceived that the vacant space would only be properly filled by that canvas, the title of which was "Home," and he immediately started a search for that original. From personal observation I'll wager I'll see it in that space the next time I'm out that way.

Stable Laughter.

That commodity known as "horse laughs" will be very much in evidence this week at the Grand, where Buster Keaton, shows in his latest, "Battling Butler." Buster Keaton as a prize-fighter—can you imagine it?

My Gosh!

They're now proposing to give Douglas Fairbanks the leading role of the "Life of Benvenuto Cellini," which was formerly intended as a Valentino vehicle. Aw, why not get Ben Turpin or Harry Langdon? As my personal selection, the only person I can imagine in the role of the vagabond Cellini is John Barrymore—anyone but Fairbanks!

Muscular Harry?

Oh, yes, another film that should rank with "Battling Butler" is Harry Langdon's "The Strong Man." Laugh Harry off as a strong man.

"Variety."

"Variety is coming," say the Howard theater advertisements. Hail for the Howard and UFA. Let's have more of 'em. "The Last Laugh" is another good one.

GLIMPSES OF HOLLYWOOD

BY ROSALIND SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., October 2.—(Special Correspondence.) — Effete Hollywood got its largest dose of red paint this week, administered by Colonel Tim McCoy and his Indians. Colonel McCoy is the new western star employed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to make thrilling tales of the plains, mountains and bad lands, and was the guest, with his Indians, at a large barbecue dinner this week. McCoy gave a vivid account, personally demonstrating the Indian sign language. He revealed the rather interesting fact that there are signs for all the modern things, including moving pictures and automobiles.

The sign language, according to Colonel McCoy, originated many years ago when the nomad Indian tribes wandered all across the continent on their hunting expeditions, and came in contact with tribes speaking dissimilar tongues. All signs originally were made with both hands. The line of thought behind these signs is vigorous and logical, and anything can be expressed in signs.

When McCoy went up on a reservation with his auto, he astonished the Indians considerably.

Not long after he found them using a sign for the word automobile, done thus: first a sign made with the thumb and forefinger on each hand, respecting circles, that is, wheels, the symbol for wagon; then a sign made by straddling the forefinger of one hand with two forked fingers of another, meaning a human riding a horse; then a sign meaning "cut it off," made by slashing down with one hand; there you have it. Wagon, man on a horse, the horse cut off; automobile. This sign "cut off" is the Indian word for relations by marriage, and refers also to the fact that some tribal etiquette forbids a young brave to speak to his mother-in-law. This is considered as a sign of the innate peace loving qualities of the Indian.

The Indian sign for motion pictures is as follows: The Indian pantomimes a man holding a camera against his stomach to steady it, then with the other hand makes a rotary gesture. Seeing a picture on the screen was told by the Indian spreading his palms abut two feet from his eyes and crossing the hands over each other several times. This represents the flicker on the screen.

The gestures for "press agent" are brief but to the point. The Indian holds both hands in pantomime of holding a newspaper; then gives the gesture for "hunk," or "no good," by making a gesture of throwing away with one hand.

Colonel McCoy says that through the sign language many Indian thoughts and ideas can be obtained that one does not get through the spoken word. He told of getting the name the Indians used for General George A. Custer in the sign language, which he never heard or read of anywhere before. General Custer usually was called "Fair Hair" or "Yellow Hair" by the Indians when they spoke of him, but in the sign language he was "Son of the Morning Star." This term is supposed to refer to the "strong medicine" attendant on this planet of the dawn, for Custer was regarded as a potent character by the Indians whom he had for foes and friends.

Many of the Indians in McCoy's troops are graduates of Haskell and Carlisle Indian schools. He brought to the film banquet with him representatives of 12 tribes. These warriors obliged by doing a series of Indian dances, in one of which the squaws joined. Those of the Indians who had no squaws gathered up American partners with a speed and suavity that spoke well for their social training.

Some of the Hollywood irrepressible wise-crackers were on hand, and when a group of Indians had finished a war dance in which they maintained bent and crouching attitudes, some one ventured that it was the dance of the green apples.

After the war dance, several Indians in white buckskin obliged with a mean Charleston. All in all, it was a great American get-together. Incidentally, Pauline Starke acts as Colonel McCoy's leading lady in the new Indian picture, "War Paint," filmed in Wyoming.

When Elsie Janis came to Hollywood this week as a feature on the Orpheum circuit, she had with her as travelling companion, Mabel Ross, wife of the old-time actor, Charlie Ross. Promptly on their arrival in town they called up Frankie Bailey, and "old home" week was celebrated in Hollywood with a vengeance.

Frankie Bailey is the girl with the beautiful legs of a generation ago, who graced Weber & Fields burlesque shows on Broadway for nine consecutive years, and played in them in company with Lillian Russell, Fay Templeton, Willie Collier and the aforementioned Charlie Ross.

Elsie Janis broke into the trio this week by grace of being in the cast of "The Century Maid," in 1917, in which Frankie Bailey played, and which Dillingham and Ziegfeld produced. That show is also interesting to followers of movie personalities because Eileen Percy and Lilyan Tashman strutted their stuff in it as show girls.

Mabel Ross intends to start a picture career, as she was well known on the stage a generation ago with her famous husband. Frankie Bailey is to play a small role in John Barrymore's "Francois Villon," and just finished a bit in Colleen Moore's "Twinkletoes."

Thomas Jefferson, son of Joseph Jefferson, the actor who made the stage role of Rip Van Winkle and many others famous a generation ago, is playing the bankrupt Portuguese king in Fox's screen version of "Gaby." This week the company started for location at Delmonte.

"Why Delmonte, of all places, when there are thousands of other places in the state?" objected Mr. Jefferson with vehemence.

"My ex-wife lives there, and I don't want that woman to get any idea I'm chasing her," said the silver-haired Mr. Jefferson, brushing off his ermine robe expressively.

Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry are working on some very emotional scenes in their making of "The Great Galeoto," a modern Spanish picture at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's. The title means "the great third party" in Spanish, and refers to the power of gossip in making trouble. Novarro plays the orphaned young man who comes to live with his father's friend and his wife, that is, Alice Terry's husband, and Alice. As the husband is much older than his wife, the two young people become the subject of gossip which ruins their platonic friendship and makes them finally what they were at first only said to be.

Alice Terry is doing some striking emotional acting in the scene where she tells the young man he must leave the house because of gossip.

Very little effort on Alice's part seemed to produce copious and natural tears. Novarro as the maligned young man, looked exceptionally handsome.

There is a story coming from Novarro's friends that Ramon, after he has made sufficient money to provide for his mother, sister and family, will retire from moving pictures and take holy orders. He has never had a love affair in spite of being one of the most sought after young men in Hollywood.

His talents are many, including a trained bass voice, and at one time he made his living giving piano lessons and as a Morgan dancer. While his ideas seem profoundly aescetic, he is very pleasant and clever company, and possesses a good sense of humor.

Richard Barthelmess, not content with the sea-going yacht he purchased this summer, has bought himself a $100,000 home in Beverly Hills. The home is an Italian mansion, and an exact duplicate of the New Jersey home of Sinclair, the oil millionaire. During his trip to Canada and points east, the home will be fitted up, the tennis courts laid and a swimming pool put in. Little Gloria Lloyd isn't going to have all the grandeur, says Dick; there's going to be plenty for three-year-old Mary Hay Barthelmess.

"Love's Enchantment."

The Publix stage presentation at the Howard theater this week will be Frank Cambria's "Love's Enchantment." This scene is an enchanted garden staged in a beautiful setting representing a garden in Normandy. The cast, a highly competent one, includes Martha Vaughn, soprano; Hunter Kimball, tenor, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Petching, instrumentalists, who present an adaption of their novelty musical act in which they have been seen in many of the leading cities of America and in Europe. The garden is supposed to be an enchanted one, the various fruits and flowers giving forth delightful music at the magic touch of Mr. and Mrs. Petching. A charming program of popular and semi-classical numbers, both instrumental and vocal, is presented with full orchestra accomplishment and a ballet of six girls contributes in no small measure to the success of the presentation.

Moreland P.-T. A. Night Meeting Addressed by W. A. Sutton

A most interesting meeting of the Moreland Parent-Teacher association was held Tuesday evening with an attendance of about 300 parents. Mrs. Webb, the president, presided.

The speaker of the evening was Dr. Willis Sutton. Of much interest was his explanation of the four quarter school system which will be put into effect, thereby saving time and money to the taxpayers. Dr. Sutton recently returned from a conference in Washington, D. C., where he was one of 25 members of a national committee of educators, headed by Herbert Hoover, meeting to discuss the modern tendencies in education. "The tendency of modern education," said Dr. Sutton, "consists of three basic principles—health, early choice of a vocation and character building." These points Dr. Sutton discussed in an interesting manner.

A nominating committee composed of Mrs. P. D. Cunningham, Mrs. B. C. Barfield, Mrs. Herndon, Mrs. Bonnell and Miss Lillie Wurm, the principal, was appointed to nominate a president for the year 1926-1927. Mrs. P. D. Cunningham, acting treasurer, announced a prize of $10 offered by Mrs. John Hurt to the class first reaching 100 per cent membership in the association.

The delegates appointed to represent Moreland school at the fifth district meeting to be held at the Girls' High school October 6 were: Mrs. Deacon, Mrs. John Hurt, Mrs. Bonnell, Mrs. J. R. Smith and the president, Mrs. G. C. Webb.

Miss Lillie Wurm, the newly-appointed principal, spoke, stressing the fact that cooperation by the students and parents in many matters, especially in regular attendance, good health habits and thrift were necessary to the perfection of any school.

Resolutions introduced by Mrs. Edward Pierce were passed thanking R. R. Ritchie, assistant superintendent in charge of business affairs, for the many improvements noted in the Moreland school building.

A reception in honor of the principal, Miss Wurm and the faculty completed the evening.

P.-T. A. Presidents' Club To Meet

The Parent-Teacher Presidents' club will hold its first meeting of the new year Thursday, October 7, at 12:15 p. m. at Henry Grady hotel. All 1925-26-1926-27 presidents are expected to attend. All past presidents of the Presidents' club are invited to attend. There will be election of officers at this time. Mrs. Charles Foster, the president, will preside.

George Adair Clinic To Meet Tuesday.

The baby clinic of George W. Adair P.-T. A. will meet in the school auditorium Tuesday afternoon October 5, at 2:30 o'clock. Dr. Hoppe will be present for consultation and mothers are urged to come and bring babies to be examined promptly.

The pre-school circle of the George W. Adair P.-T. A. met Friday afternoon in the school auditorium, with Mrs. Kitchens presiding. For the October meeting an interesting and most helpful program is being arranged. All mothers with children of pre-school age are urged to be present.

Ormewood P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The Ormewood P.-T. A. held its first meeting of the year Setpember 10 at the school. Mrs. W. A. Hansell, the new president, presided. Many interesting plans for the year were made. Plans were made for the October meeting. It is to be a health meeting.

Mrs. Doster, principal of the school, gave the school news. The new mothers present were introduced and welcomed. High First won the attendance prize.

Cedar Grove P.-T. A. Is Organized.

The Cedar Grove school, of DeKalb county, organized a Parent-Teacher association Thursday. Mrs. J. P. Walls, president of the Atlanta Normal and Faith P.-T. A., assisted in the organizing, and the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. R. M. Bargeron; vice president, Mrs. W. M. Leake; secretary, Mrs. G. D. Hatcher; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. W. Clarke; treasurer, Mrs. T. G. Sweeney; publicity chairman, Mrs. W. T. Moore. The next meeting will take place on the fourth Thursday in October at 2:30 p. m.

Fair Street P.-T. A. Hears Dr. Kennedy.

The meeting of the Fair Street school P.-T. A. was held in the school auditorium Tuesday. Dr. Keanedy, the city physician, made an interesting talk on preventable diseases and proper food for children. Dr. Kennedy called attention of the mothers to the fact that many children are fed a sufficient amount of food, but were still undernourished because they were not fed the right kind of food. Miss Templeton, the school nurse, made an announcement in regard to her work as the visiting nurse of the school. Mrs. Hanson, the president, appointed the standing committees of year after hearing a report from the last year's committees and officers.

Mrs. Whitworth, principal, explained to the mothers the new report card that is to be used during the coming year and asked the mothers to cooperate in every way to carry out the citizenship requirements as outlined on the report card. A count of mothers showed the low six, Miss Ross' class, to have the most mothers present.

Pictures that never were taken

You never found a family album containing pictures of "Hours with the Washtub." There used to be plenty of such hours, but they weren't the kind people like to remember with photographs.

Today the modern housewife lets the laundry do all of her family wash.

Do you know that the modern housewife can have all of her family wash done at the laundry for a cost much less than she could have had the same work done 20 years ago?

Laundry service is one of the very few of life's necessities that have decreased in price.

This price decrease has been made possible by the same means by which Mr. Ford can sell an automobile cheaper than anybody else.

VOLUME!

Where, twenty years ago, the laundries handled hundreds of bundles, now they handle thousands. Where once they had to depend on a large profit from a few bundles, now they are satisfied with a very small profit on a great number.

That's why your laundry can do your family bundle at such a small cost. It is one of millions. The laundry has a family wash service to fit your needs. No matter what the size of your family or your wash allowance. Just phone. There is service waiting.

Girls Grow Lovely In very easy ways

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I wish all girls would try the methods which brought beauty to me. I have seen countless girls, in these easy ways, gain new loveliness. The change is often amazing from a single application.

I found most of my helps in France, where women cultivate beauty. They made me what I am. Now they are at every woman's call. All toilet counters supply them in the name of Edna Wallace Hopper. After 40 years of searching, I believe them to be the best beauty helps in existence. I now go to France every year to keep in intimate touch with the latest beauty discoveries.

One is my White Youth Clay. It purges the skin of its blemishes, combats lines and wrinkles, brings a youthful glow. The change it brings in 30 minutes will delight you.

One is my Youth Cream. That combines the best I've found to foster, feed and preserve the skin. One night's use will show you what it means.

Another is my Face Powder, the sort stage stars use. We demand the utmost, and you'll find it here.

The coupon will bring you enough of each to show you what they mean. That test will be a revelation, I believe. My Beauty Book comes in the package.

For Trial Package 308

Mail this coupon to Edna Wallace Hopper, 536 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, for a trial packet of my White Youth Clay, Youth Cream and Face Powder.

Life's Sunny Afternoon

"Grow old along with me, The best is yet to be."

WITH her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women of middle age say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Those who have learned through their own experience the merit of this dependable medicine are enthusiastic in recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

A woman in Nebraska was troubled with headaches for fifteen years. She writes, "I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have felt my health steadily improving. Today, after taking your medicine for almost a year and a half, I believe I can say the headaches have left me for it is seven months since I had the last one. I am continuing the Vegetable Compound. I am feeling fine now."

This woman is the mother of six children with a large house to care for. Her name is Mrs. Adolph Bratke, 4316 South 13th St., South Omaha, Nebraska.

Enters Upon Third Year.

Mrs. A. D. McCurry is entering upon her third year as president of this splendid organization, and is state chairman of health. In addition to these honors she holds the chairmanship of the Tallulah school department of the ninth district, besides being the efficient and popular leader of the Winder Woman's club.

State Director Urges Clubwomen To Pay Pledge

Letters have been sent to all those who have not paid their pledges on the note owed the bank by the Federation. It has been materially decreased, and if the clubwomen will make one more effort we can soon get rid of this. If you have not paid your pledge made in August, please send Mrs. W. W. Starke, of Commerce, the check at once. If you have and can interest any club or individual to help the Federation over this hard place, we will soon have the entire matter cleared up and the memory of it behind us. It will be most pleasant to know that the matter is soon to become a memory. Let's have a "strong pull and pull all together" and get rid of this matter. We can if we will.

A very striking speech was made at Atlantic City by Mr. Bigelow, editor of Good Housekeeping magazine. He said: "You women can get anything you want, if you really want it. You wanted the vote—you got it; you wanted prohibition—you got it, and there is nothing you cannot get, if you want it badly enough." Let's "want" to get rid of this debt badly enough to do it! Let Mrs. Starke hear from you at once.

MRS. ALONZO RICHARDSON,
Director for Georgia in the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

State Headquarters Has New Office

State headquarters has moved to room 506 Chamber of Commerce building. The new phone number will be announced after connection is made.

Mrs. Hardy Enters Upon Fourth Year of Cario Club Presidency

Mrs. G. T. Hardy, president of the Cairo Woman's club, who has served in this capacity for four years and under whose capable administration many outstanding achievements have resulted.

MRS. HARDY.

The Cairo Woman's club was organized as "The School Improvement club" in September, 1906, federating in 1910. The object at that time was to create and maintain an organized center of thought and activity in the school; it was later changed to "The School and Civic Improvement club," thereby broadening its interests. In 1920 the name was again changed to "The Cairo Woman's club." At that time the entire club was divided into departments and divisions in line with the state and general federation work. Mrs. G. T. Hardy accepted the presidency of this club in September, 1922, having refused election three years previously. During her administration the educational department has bought curtain and scenery for the school auditorium at a cost of $823; 340 books have been bought for the school library at a cost of $317.46; 133 additional books have been donated by members of the club. The new International Encyclopedia (costing $168) was placed in the school library last April, it being paid for quarterly; magazines have been placed in the library; $150 has been spent for other school improvements.

Departmental Work.

The citizenship department through the civic division has kept the courthouse grounds beautified, also a small park in the center of town and three small plots, have kept grass planted and mowed, planted and replanted shrubbery where needed, also planted perennial flowers; through the community service division the club has cooperated with the men's civic organizations in numbers of campaigns for civic advancement; the department in cooperation with the D. A. R. chapter always have some community celebration on patriotic days.

The public welfare department has placed scales in the school to have children weighed and measured; provided free dental examination one year and sent cards to parents showing condition of teeth; had health songs and drills taught in the school; had Cho Cho, the health-clown, to lecture; Christmas anti-tuberculosis seals have been sold every year.

The legislation department has urged representatives and senators to vote for bills indorsed by the club, child welfare and educational bills; has assisted in carrying bonds for school building, and written congressmen and United States senators to support bills sponsored by the club.

The department of the American home is a new department with us, our program for the coming year is on the "American Home" and we hope to do some splendid work along this line. We have a good publicity department, the club is given strong advertisement in the local paper, The Albany Herald, and on the club page in The Constitution. We do not have a department of fine arts in our club, but we do all we can to encourage and promote art, music and literature; we have a literary program at each meeting, interspersed with vocal and instrumental musical selections; this year we will have a program on art in the home and are trying to arrange to have an art exhibit.

The club has an unlimited membership of 115. Last year we paid $11 each as district, state and national dues, $11 to state headquarters, $10 to Tallulah maintenance fund, $5 to district home economics scholarship at Georgia Normal school, $10 to Edna Peterson scholarship at A. & M. school in Titton, $10.50 for Near East relief fund; send a box annually to ex-service men in Augusta; each year we have charge of the Red Cross roll call, as there is not an active Red Cross chapter here.

Will Build Clubhouse.

The outstanding work of the club for the coming year will be the building of a clubhouse. A site for a club home has been donated to the club by O. T. Davis, president of the Cairo Banking company, and his mother, Mrs. Alice Davis. The plans are to erect a building at a cost of approximately $4,000. Some generous pledges for this fund have already been made by some of our business men and plans are being made to divide the club into groups and asking each group to assume their share in raising this amount.

Feltonian Club Will Celebrate Second Birthday

The September meeting of the Feltonian Woman's club was held Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs Fred Jolley, with the president, Mrs. W. D. Trippe, presiding. Mrs. Malinda Jackson told what had been accomplished on procuring markers for the old soldiers' graves at this place. The committee in charge reported that the box of books ordered from the traveling library had arrived, and Mrs. J. R. Harling was appointed librarian.

Plans were then made for a birthday party to be given October 30 to celebrate the club's second birthday, the proceeds from the party to go to that already in the treasury toward building a clubhouse. After the business meeting an interesting and instructive program on "Georgia History" was given. "The First Settlers of Georgia—Name the Different Nationalities That Were Represented and Where the First Settlements Were Made," given by Mrs. Millard Perry; "Give a Short Sketch of James Ogiethorpe, the Founder of Georgia," by Mrs. Malinda Jackson; "Name the Principal Indian Tribes That Occupied the Georgia Territory When It Was First Settled by the Whites, and State How This Land Was Secured From the Indians," Mrs. Walter Jolly; "State Some of the Reasons Why Georgia Has Such a Varied Climate and Wide Variety of Products," Mrs. Marie Whitesides.

Mrs. W. D. Trippe, Jr., and Mrs. E. O. Davis furnished the musical part of the program, "Georgia Land" being one of the songs appropriately sung as a solo.

State President Receives Year Book.

Mrs. A. P. Brantley acknowledges with thanks the year book of the Student's club, of Columbus.

Southeastern Council Program Discussed by Mrs. Richardson

BY MRS. ALONZO RICHARDSON,
Chairman of Programs.

The Southeastern council will convene in Charleston November 3 and 4, and tentative plans for the program show that this is to be one of the best meetings ever held. Beside the beautiful environs of Charleston itself, there will be pilgrimages to points of historical interest, social functions for which the famed old southern city is noted. The meeting will take the form of a workers conference almost altogether, plans which have proven successful, as well as those for future work will be freely discussed. The opening evening the presidents of the different states will be introduced, will give in a two minutes talk, the "Greatest Achievement, and the Greatest Problem" of her state. These will be discussed during the meeting. Mrs. Allie Dickenson, of Kentucky, will tell "how Kentucky won the prizes of the general federation." She will also bring plans for the winning of the prizes offered to the different states this year. Mrs. W. P. Blackman, of Florida, the newly appointed general federation chairman of education, will hold a conference of her department, developing it from all angles and divisions. Mrs. Sidney Cooper, of North Carolina, will discuss state, county district and club finance, while Mrs. Reynolds, of Kentucky, will follow with "Finance" from the standpoint of the general federation.

Virginia President.

The president of Virginia, Mrs. Weatherford, will discuss "The Resolutions We Indorse, Pass and Forget." Georgia will be represented by Mrs. Brantley, her president, Mrs. Inman, who will tell of her newly accepted office of trustee to the general federation, Mrs. Ira Farmer who will have "The American Home," Mrs. Walter Hodges on "Legislation as It Affects the Clubwomen of the States," and what has been done by the clubwomen for legislation. Mrs. J. E. Hays will bring greetings with the "Relation of the general federation for the first the State."

This is a small part of the fine program which the committee is preparing. The coming of Mrs. Edward Franklin White, first vice president of the General Federation for the first evening will be a most welcome announcement. Mrs. White will be present during the entire time and will add to all the discussions her experience and wisdom. It is a distinct honor that we are to have our first vice president at this time when we are to have our president, Mrs. Sherman, at our state meeting in Albany in the spring. The south is honored. Judge Smith, of South Carolina, will be the speaker for the evening of the fourth. This, too, is a distinct honor as Judge Smith is one of the foremost men of the state, one who appreciates the importance of this meeting, to the the extent that so busy a man will lay aside everything and come to us.

This is but a suggestion the good things in store. Visitors will be most welcome. Lower rates and any other information can be secured by writing to Miss Louisa Poppenheim, Charleston, S. C.

Convenient Schedules.

The schedules to Charleston are most convenient, the train all arriving in time for the early morning session, and leaving late enough to allow all to attend the evening session of the second day.

That the attendance will be the largest in the history of the council, Charleston confidently expects, Mrs. L. H. Jennings, of South Carolina, whose term of president expires at this time, will preside at all meetings, installing the newly elected officers the evening of the 4th.

Mrs. Rambo Extends Greetings To City Federation Clubwomen

Mrs. Robert K. Rambo, president of the City Federation of Women's Clubs, sends the following greetings to the federated clubwomen of Atlanta in the following message:

To the Federated Clubwomen of Atlanta, greetings: We are at the beginning of a new club year. Our summer of rest and recreation is over, the children are established in the schools, and the call to duty comes on the first cool breath of autumn. It is my joy to report to you that the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs stands on a firmer foundation than ever before, the clubs have paid their dues for the current year practically 100 per cent which shows that the federation is keenly alive.

A good many clubs have elected new officers—to these I bid welcome, and assure them that I am anticipating much pleasure in our association. To the officers of the clubs, who are still carrying on, I want to express my pleasure in serving you again during the coming year, and in renewing our fellowship. To the new clubs who have joined the federation since our last meeting, we greet you most cordially and assure you of our pleasure in having you as members of our great club family.

One hundred and six clubs compose the Atlanta federation, and it is one of the strongest forces in our civic life today, as well as in the club affairs of the state.

"To who much has been given, much shall be required." This applies to the Atlanta federation. We are privileged in being an integral part of, and a vital force in one of the finest cities of the country, and I am sure we will live up to the measure of our responsibility. It has never been my privilege to know a finer body of women than the ones who compose the federated clubs of Atlanta, and the reports of the activities of the club units are most inspiring. Our first meeting of the year will be held on October 12, at the Atlanta Athletic club, and I hope every federated club will be represented at that meeting and all the chairmen of the various departments. Come with your plans for the coming year, and let us enjoy a day of good fellowship and renewed inspiration.

To the presidents of the federated clubs who compose the presidents' council, I send especial greetings. They are the backbone of the federation, and upon each one of you, individually, depends the efficiency of the president of the federation as well as the success of our efforts as an organization.

I want to thank each one of you for your unfailing courtesy and goodness to me, and to tell you again what a joy it is to serve you. I have been the honored guest at many of your clubs, and I hope this year to have the privilege of visiting many more clubs. These visits are always a pleasure as well as a liberal education to me.

Let us each one strive to make this the greatest year the federation has ever known, not only by giving our individual organizations better service than ever before, but let us stand ready to serve Atlanta whenever the call comes. To add to the strength of our federation, each individual club member must be an integral part of it. Remember that each one of you count tremendously.

May we this year, each one of us, rich or poor, conservative or liberal, may we as individuals, as club units and as a whole, seek to put into action in our city those impulses, those ideals and purposes for which our organization stands, and to which we have pledged our support.

Faithfully and cordially yours,
ANNE TRIPP RAMBO.
(Mrs. R. K. Rambo, Pres. City Fed.)

Mrs. Heinsohn Moves To Atlanta for Future Residence

Mrs. Robert A. Heinsohn, recording secretary for the Georgia Federation, has arrived in Atlanta with Mr. Heinsohn, and will make their future home in this city at 1115 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. E.

For the past two years, Mr. and Mrs. Heinsohn have made their home in Macon. Mrs. Heinsohn is an interesting speaker, an able and efficient leader, and a guiding spirit in the state federation activities, having served as the popular president of the second district for several years, and was instrumental in achieving marked progress in club work, proving her worth as a sincere and unselfish clubwoman while occupying this official position.

Mrs. Brantley Issues Resolutions Call.

Resolutions to be presented to the executive board of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs at the meeting on November 10, must be typed and sent in triplicate to Mrs. S. M. Inman, chairman of resolutions, 552 Peachtree street, Atlanta, one week before the meeting.

MRS. A. P. BRANTLEY,
President Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Officers Elected At Shorter College.

Rome, Ga., October 2.—"Rushing season" membership contest between the societies, Eunomian and Polymnian, at Shorter college, closed Monday morning when pledges of new students were announced, with 38 members added to Eunomian and 48 to Polymnian.

Miss Ethel Brown, talented music student, of Decatur, is president of the Eunomian society, while on the staff of officers are: Miss Nell Walthall, Atlanta, vice president; Miss Sara Brown, Newnan, secretary; Miss Haunes Reynolds, Meridian, treasurer.

Miss Vera Cochran, of Camilla, is president of the Polymnian; Miss Virginia Davis, Camilla, vice president; Miss Lucile Williams, Cochran, secretary; Miss Mary Hardman, Commerce, treasurer.

Mrs. Lee Issues Card on Rules For Poster Contest

Mrs. R. H. Lee, poster chairman of the Fifth District Women's clubs, issues the following card: The rules and regulations for the poster contest have been completed. The contest has already begun and will be decided next May.

The posters will be judged along the lines of arrangement, originality and subject matter. Lettering and neatness will count. The posters may range from hand painted charts to cutouts, each setting forth some club accomplishment or teaching some club propect.

Each club is requested to enter annual poster contest and to appoint a poster chairman now. The duty of this chairman shall be all during the year to gather newspaper clippings and material, especially photographs, year books, departmental programs, pictures of club houses, of pageants, of flower shows and gardens, and pictures of any activity sponsored by the club.

Each club will be limited to three posters of uniform size.

The annual award, a silver cup, will be made by Mrs. Oscar Palmour, president of fifth district, at the annual meeting in May. The rules committee consisted of Mrs. H. G. Hasting, Mrs. J. R. Little and Mrs. William Candler.

Seventh District Notes Interest Georgia Clubwomen

Mrs. Charles B. McGarity, president of the Seventh District federation, visited the Chattsworth Woman's club during the past week where she addressed the members at a called meeting held at the attractive club house. Later she visited the club at Eton, where she was enthusiastically received. During the month just past, Mrs. McGarity has attended meetings of the Feltonian club, of Taylorsville, and the Beulah Woman's club, the latter being a rural club composed of members living near the Beulah Consolidated school in Paulding county. Visits will be made in the near future to the Austell club and the Burnt Hickory Community club, the latter being also a rural club, tributary to the consolidated school for which it is named, located near Dallas.

Kennesaw Club.

The Kennesaw Woman's club reports most excellent results from a clean-up campaign put on last year in cooperation with the mayor and council of the city. Mosquitoes have been much less troublesome during this summer than ever before; this and a general interest in beautifying home grounds are two of the outstanding results. The campaign has been continued during this present year also, of course, and much interest was created by a contest held for a prize offered for the most artistic porch box of definite dimensions. A book shower held lately added 75 volumes to the local library. One of the most interesting of the social affairs sponsored by this busy and efficient organization was a quilting party, followed by an auction at which the quilt made by the club was sold to the highest bidder. The yearly fashion show is also a plesant feature of their work.

The Dallas Woman's club recently entertained the Paulding County Poultry club, of which they are sponsors, at a theater party which was given during the recent county fair. Their first measuring party having been such a success, they repeated it with variations during last week, a feature of the evening's entertainment being a pretty girl contest, an auction at which a huge cake was sold and various games and contests.

Judge Tarver Honored.

The Dalton Woman's club was hostess at a dinner given by Judge Malcolm Tarver, recently chosen as democratic candidate for congress from the seventh district, at which time he was formally notified of his selection for that honor. One hundred and fifty guests enjoyed Judge Tarver's hospitality in the club house, the tables being spread in all three of the reception rooms, including the library, which were decorated for the occasion with asters, zinnias and dahlias in profusion. Mrs. M. E. Judd, president of the organization, and Mrs. W. H. Prater, were in charge of the dinner.

Hapeville Executive Board To Meet.

The executive board of the Hapeville Woman's club will meet Tuesday morning at the Hapeville auditorium at 10:30 o'clock, instead of Monday morning, as previously announced. There will be a discussion of plans for the fall work, including a clean-up and paint-up campaign, tree planting along the highway, classes in interior decorating, cooking, sewing, literature and journalism, and other important business. A full attendance is requested.

Eleventh District Officer Announces Complete Directory

With the announcement of the appointments for the coming year, the Eleventh District Federation of Women's Clubs, of which Mrs. E. Downer Dimmock, of Waycross, is president, is preparing to develop plans which will culminate in outstanding achievements. The executive board is composed of splendid women, each of whom is deeply interested in her particular department. In addition to those who have served so efficiently in the past are Mrs. Albert Tidwell, of Quitman; Mrs. Oscar Lott, of Waycross; Mrs. J. P. Highsmith, of Baxley, and Mrs. Fred Brewer, of Douglas.

The complete directory of the officers and chairmen follows: President, Mrs. E. D. Dimmock, Waycross; vice president, Mrs. G. V. Cate, Brunswick; recording secretary, Mrs. J. M. Dent, Douglas; treasurer, Mrs. A. B. Sheffield, Quitman; corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. A. Stallings, Waycross; parliamentarian, Mrs. W. G. Eager, Valdosta.

Committee chairmen: American citizenship, Mrs. Albert Tidwell, Quitman; community service, Mrs. J. E. Lott, Broxton; Girl Scouts, Mrs. J. G. Steinheimer, Waycross; cooperation with ex-service men, Mrs. J. L. Beach, Brunswick; good roads, Mrs. L. H. Jenkins, Alma; applied education, Mrs. Oscar Lott, Waycross; forestry, Mrs S. C. Townsend, St. Marys; club institutes, Mrs. B. W. Gray, Douglas; rural education, Mrs. G. S. Parham Nashville; liberty extension, Mrs. B. O. Quillian, Willacoochee; home and school improvement, Mrs. J. P. Highsmith, Baxley; legislation, Mrs. Walton Purdom, Waycross; public welfare, Mrs. R. G. Dickerson, Homerville; health, Mrs. W. S. Yates, St. Marys; child welfare, Mrs. C. A. Poer, Broxton; anti-narcotics, Mrs. B. H. Minchew, Waycross; social and industrial conditions, Mrs. H. D. Reed, Waycross; fine arts, Mrs. P. L. Pomeroy, Blackshear; press and publicity, Mrs. C. R. Hawk, Valdosta; scrapbook, Mrs. D. D. Smith, Valdosta; Ella F. White fund, Mrs. Fred Brewer, Douglas; Tallulah Falls school, Mrs. W. C. Wooten, Homerville; student aid foundation, Mrs. A. B Sheffield, Quitman.

G.F.C.W. Names Mrs. J. E. Hays On Relations Committee

Mrs. J. E. Hays, of Montezuma, former recording secretary of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and past president of the Georgia federation, has been appointed on the resolutions committee of the general federation, an honor she was apprised of Saturday by telegram from headquarters in Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Hays, a prominent and active clubwoman, is a popular and influential leader in national and state work. Her appointment comes as a compliment to the state organization and points to the high standing of Georgia clubwomen in national clubdom.

Mrs. Brantley Announces Board and Trustee Meeting

Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, state president of the Georgia Federation, makes announcement concerning meetings of executive board and trustees of Tallulah Falls Industrial school.

In order to avoid a conflict with the meetings of sister organizations and the meeting of the Southeastern Council of Federated Club Women, the executive board of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs will meet Wednesday morning, November 10, at 9:30 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's club. At this meeting all chairmen will be called on to outline their plan of work for the year.

The trustees of the Tallulah Falls Industrial school will meet Tuesday, November 9, at the Atlanta Woman's club in order to avoid conflicting with meetings of sister organizations and the Southeastern Council of Federated Club Women.

MRS. A. P. BRANTLEY,
President Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Miller Heads Baconton Club.

The Baconton Woman's club had its first meeting for the year at the home of Mrs. R. P. Jackson last week.

The program consisted of reports in the Federated News of the national meeting in Atlantic City. These included reports in fine arts, home survey, international relationships. There was read a letter from the national president. There was also a talk on the new movement of club women of the United States to use bronze statues as prizes instead of silver loving cups.

The music consisted of a music memory contest. The president gave in brief form the resolutions adopted at the biennial meeting.

The following officers were elected for the new year: Mrs. J. B. Miller, president; Mrs. R. P. Jackson, vice president; Mrs J. E. Dean, secretary; Mrs. T. S. Jackson, Jr., treasurer; Mrs. R. M. Tiller, press reporter.

Mrs. R. P. Jackson was appointed to have special study on art at each meeting, Mrs. J. R. Pinson, Jr., to have a study of music. The program committee announced a study of Georgia for the new year.

Mrs. Hess To Preside At Delphian Society.

The Alpha Omega chapter of the Delphian society will hold its regular semi-monthly meeting in the Palm room of the Piedmont hotel Wednesday, October 6, at 3 o'clock. The president, Mrs. Kate Green Hess, will preside, and Mrs. C. W. McClure will direct the program. The subject for discussion will be "Imperial Egypt," and the general theme, "The Eastward Course of Egypt Empire Dates, 1520 B. C. to 1090 B. C."

Each member of the chapter will have the privilege of inviting one guest to this meeting.

At the last meeting held September 16, it was voted to change the days for the meeting from the first and third Thursday of each month to the first and third Wednesday of each month. It is expected that this meeting will be an unusually interesting one to those attending.

Eighth District President Visits Hartwell Club

The Hartwell Woman's club with Mrs. Judson Shaw, Mrs. J. G. Craft, Mrs. F. C. Brown, Mrs. F. T. Kidd and Mrs. Isham Hailey, joint hostesses, met at the beautiful Hotel Hartwell for the September meeting. Mrs. Julian McCurry, a former member, now of Florida; Mrs. J. W. Gholston, eighth district president; Mrs. A. M. Wilkins, Tallulah Falls chairman and Mrs. C. B. Ayers, eighth district chairman of publicity, and Mrs. J. P. Gholston, of Comer, were guests of the club at this meeting.

Mrs. Judson Shaw presided and response to the roll call was given with current events. A questionnaire on the constitution of the United States was given by four members and the beautiful vocal solos by Miss Elizabeth Teasley were very delightful features of the interesting program.

Mrs. Gholston, in her charming way, gave an inspirational message, outlining her working plans for the year. Mrs. Wilkins' plans for Tallulah Fallls school were given, while Mrs. Ayers gave a few words along the lines of district publicity.

Hartwell has one of the most progressive clubs in the district, a membership of charmingly gifted women, and a meeting with them is indeed a pleasure. Two new members were enrolled at the September meeting; club calendars are in the hands of the printer and the club has agreed to beautify the parks recently finished by the city. The hostesses served a delicious salad course.

Georgia Sorosis Holds Memorial Services.

Elberton, Ga., October 2.—The Georgia Sorosis held a memorial service on Wednesday afternoon, at the Hotel Gholston, in memory of Mrs. W. C. Smith, who was a charter member. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. C. J. Almand, who paid a beautiful tribute to Mrs. Smith.

The committee on resolutions were Mrs. W. F. Jones, Mrs. J. M. Wester and Mrs. Dudley Sheppard. The resolutions were read by Mrs. Jones. Mrs. Carter Arnold gave a beautiful vocal solo, "Face to Face" and Mrs. J. Y. Swift whose mother was a school girl friend of Mrs. W. C. Smith, contributed a beautiful sentiment.

Mrs. A. S. Oliver, Mrs. J. M. Wester, Mrs. Dudley Sheppard spoke in loving tribute of Mrs. Smith, telling also of the wonderful work she had done for the church for the town and for the club.

French Handmade ROUGES

Ladies who like to be looked at are never careless in choosing their rouges.

Bourjois' rouges are made by hand with patient care—in Paris—like Paris gowns. They have individuality and brilliancy that machine methods cannot possibly impart. They are exquisitely soft and fine; their blended edge-lines are imperceptible. Their fragrance is that of French perfumes, blended to the perfect bouquet. Bourjois' rouges are brought to unquestioned perfection before they are sent forth to adorn the most beautiful women in the world.

ASHES-OF-ROSES* Rouge, either dark or medium, or especially brilliant for the blonde. ROUGE MANDARINE*, frankly orange, preferred for evening wear. Rouge VELVET-OF-PEACHES*, a warm and tender pink with a ruddy tinge. Rouge CORAL-ROSE*—a brilliant and dashing rose-and-tan. Rouge FEMINA* and Rouge CURRANT-ROSE* are also modern, and full of the colors of sunlight.

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction without starvation diet or burdensome exercise, often at a very rapid rate and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practicing physician and have made a careful study of the physiological requirements of the human body. This has enabled me to select such ingredients and in such proportion as in my opinion will produce not only a loss of weight without harm and an improvement in health, but with it an alleviation of all of the troublesome symptoms which frequently accompany and often are a direct result of overstoutness, such as shortness of breath on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, etc., not to speak of the relief from the embarrassment of being too stout. Stout persons suffering from such diseases as Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Eczema, Asthma and high blood pressure are greatly relieved by a reduction of their superfluous fat.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the renewed energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of superfluous fat.

If you are overstout do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

Delegates.

Elect delegates to represent your chapter and as soon as they decide positively to attend the convention, send names to Mrs. W. M. Johnson, chairman of homes. All communications and invitations will be sent direct by the home committee.

Elect your delegates to the general convention at Richmond, Va., at the same time and notify the chairman of the Georgia delegation.

State Credentials.

One credential slip is to be presented to the credential committee, Mrs. W. C. Vereen, Moultrie, chairman at the First Methodist church, Statesboro, Tuesday afternoon before 6 o'clock. The other credential slip is to be sent to your state president, Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, Montezuma, Ga., not later than October 15. Remember you are to be entertained, and your hostess must have your name by October 15.

Taxes.

Please see that your dues are paid. Each chapter is urged to pay dues promptly, remembering that you are allowed one vote for the first seven members with dues paid and one vote for each additional 25 members. Each chapter in Georgia is trying to add at least one more vote than they had last year.

State and general taxes are rated under one item, making assesment 40 cents per member, to be sent to our treasurer, Mrs. Charles Tillman, Quitman, Ga.

Treasurer's Books Close October 12.

According to our state constitution, the treasurer must close her books two weeks before the Statesboro convention, so be sure to send taxes at once.

Each chapter is required to pay $2 for convention expenses. Send this money to Mrs. Charles T. Tillman, Quitman, Ga., by October 12 please.

Chapter Representation.

Article 5, section 2: "Each chapter shall be entitled, in all conventions of the state division, to be represented by the president and one delegate up to 100. For every additional 100 members to one more delegate. Any one or more delegates from a chapter can cast the whole vote of said chapter. No proxies shall be allowed. Chapter representation shall be based upon the per capita tax paid. Representation to the meeting of the general association shall be based upon Article 9, section 4 of the by-laws of the general association."

Section 3: "Honorary presidents, chairmen of division committees, and special officers appointed by the president shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges of delegates."

Unless taxes are paid do not send delegate to Statesboro, for the credentials committee and your delegate would be greatly embarrassed. Instruct your delegate not to appear at her first session without necessary credentials. Impress these important points that each may be entitled to a voice in the proceedings.

All money collected by state chairman must be paid to state treasurer, Mrs. Charles T. Tillman, Quitman, Ga., before October 12.

Reports.

If it is impossible for you to send a delegate to Statesboro, do not fail to send your report to Miss Laura Fraser, Flemington, Liberty county, Georgia, the recording secretary, at or before convention. Please send names of your president, recording secretary and historian for the directory before convention. Also to Miss Fraser.

General U. D. C. Convention.

General convention meets in Richmond, Va., November 14. Georgia must have a representative delegation there.

Mrs. I. Bashinski, Dublin, will be chairman of the Georgia delegation. Please write her for details. Make reservations as early as possible. If you have already made your reservations, etc., please send your name to Mrs. Bashinski. We want a splendid Georgia delegation and hope to make a fine showing for Georgia in Richmond.

Officers to Be Elected.

According to your constitution, your recording secretary, treasurer and registrar are no longer eligible, having served their full time of two years each. It is therefore your duty to elect successors to these officers at the coming convention in Sandersville. These are most important officers, and their election demands your serious consideration.

"Women of the South in War Times."

Mrs. Charles Moore, of Milledgeville, is chairman of this committee. The general association has fixed a large number of these books as Georgia's obligation. Let us take them over. Will your chapter make a special effort and send $10.50 at once to Mrs. Moore? She will send you six copies of these splendid books which your chapter can then sell at $2 per copy.

A large number of chapters have responded, and yet many books are left to be sold. Please order your quota before convention.

Mildred Lewis Rutherford Historical Fund.

Have you done your best for the Mildred Lewis Rutherford historical fund? Let each chapter send at least $3 and more if possible, to Mrs. Flewellyn Holt, chairman, Macon, Ga. Has your chapter a copy of Miss Rutherford's splendid Georgia history? If not, you should have one, and make this history a special prize to offer in your school for excellence in history.

Relief Fund.

Mrs. R. M. McMaster is chairman of the relief fund (Mrs. Norman V. Randolph fund) for needy Confederate women. If we wish to aid these women who gave their best for the Confederacy let us contribute now to this fund.

Educational Funds.

Mrs. Julian Lane, Statesboro, is chairman of education. Applications for scholarships should be made to her.

Mrs. Trox Bankston, Covington, Ga., is chairman of the Helen Plane educational endowment fund. This furnishes loans for girls of Confederate lineage.

Miss Alice Baxter, Atlanta, Ga., is chairman of the World War memorial educational fund to be administered for the use of boys of Confederate lineage. Upon application, Mrs. Julian Lane will furnish list of gift scholarships.

Georgia's educational work has been outstanding, and continues to grow. All Georgia U. D. C. may look upon it with pride. No work is more worthy your generous contribution than this.

Prizes.

See list of prizes offered by Georgia division, U. D. C., and by general association, U. D. C., on poges 10-11-12, Sandersville minutes. Also see pamphlet.

Blanks for Registrar.

Blanks are inclosed. Please have your registrar fill out and send to your state registrar, Mrs. Kirby S. Anderson, Madison.

Deceased Members.

Send names of members of your chapter who have passed away during the year to Miss Laura Fraser, Flemington, Ga., and Mrs. Charles Phillips, Atlanta, Ga., by October 1.

Flags.

At the roll call of chapters on opening morning of convention, each chapter president is asked to have a Confederate flag to present to the hostess chapter. Mrs. Pringle Willingham, Bond street, Macon, Ga., is custodian of flags, and will be at Methodist church Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock with flags, which can be purchased from her for 35 cents each.

The following reports should be sent 20 days before convention:

Chapter historian should make report to state assistant historian, Miss Lillie Martin, Hawkinsville.

Chapter registrar should make report to state registrar, Mrs. K. S. Anderson, Madison, Ga.

Chapter chairman of education should make report to state chairman of education, Mrs. Julian Lane, Statesboro.

Chapters should report to state chairman of veterans' reminiscences, Mrs. Harcy Richards, Marshallville.

Chapters should report to the state chairman of star chapters' contest, Mrs. Ada Ramp Walden, Augusta.

All delegations expecting to go to Richmond should communicate with Mrs. I. Bashinski, Dublin, chairman of Georgia delegation, before convention, as it is necessary to make early reservations.

Please remember this is your convention, and come and make it the best convention we have ever had. Bring your best report, and make it concise. It is necessary, so that everyone may have a chance, to restrict reports of state chairman to five minutes, and chapter presidents to three minutes. Remember this, and, chapter presidents, please use the report blanks. May you come to the convention with a new enthusiasm and interest in our great cause.

My service to you the past year has been a joy and an inspiration to me. I feel a deep sense of appreciation to you for your splendid cooperation and friendship. Here's to a great convention! Meet me in Statesboro October 26. Faithfully yours,

JAMIE F. M'KENZIE.
MRS. OSCAR M'KENZIE,
President Georgia Division, U. D. C.
Montezuma, Ga.

Music Club Chorus Holds Rehearsal.

The Atlanta Music club chorus held its first rehearsal of the season Tuesday.

The club will study a very beautiful cantata, as well as a number of choruses, this season.

Those who wish to join the chorus are urged to attend the next meeting in order that their names may appear in the year book of the Atlanta Music club for 1926-27 season.

The rehearsals are held at Edico hall, on Tuesdays, from 12 to 1 o'clock, with Miss Lula Clark King as director; Mrs. W. A. De Lamar as assistant director, and Mrs. Thad Morris as pianist.

State Treasurer Asks That Funds Be Sent Promptly

To treasurers and state chairmen: The year's work is drawing to a close. Just one more month before our state convention and less than three weeks before my books must close. Please send me at once your per capita tax, and all funds state chairmen may have on hand. We want to make a splendid financial report for this year. Last year more than $1,000 was forwarded to me after my books had been closed.

You will elect a new treasurer at Statesboro; therefore I am most anxious that all chapters and committees remit me in full for all amounts due, by the time my books close on October 10.

A statement just received from our treasurer general shows that on this date 35 Georgia chapters have not paid their 1926 per capita tax.

Your very prompt attention will be greatly appreciated.

Very sincerely yours,
MRS. C. T. TILLMAN,
Treasurer Georgia Division, U. D. C.
Quitman, Ga., September 21, 1926.

Important Notice About Credentials Sent To Chapters

Communication from the committee on credentials to all presidents of divisions and chapters of the U. D. C.:

The committee on credentials for the 1926 general convention, to be held in Richmond, Va., during the week of the third Wednesday in November, has agreed unanimously (every member except one voting, and this member not being heard from at all), that it cannot do otherwise than adhere strictly to the by-laws with regard to its work. And because there are sometimes those coming to conventions who think that by-laws should not be binding if good excuses for laying them aside are given, the committee thinks it fair and wise to send out this notice, that no one need be caught napping, as it were.

Article 4, section 2, of the by-laws, says: "Conventions of this organization shall consist of the general officers, division presidents, chairmen of standing committees, and the duly elected delegates." "Division presidents" means, of course, those presidents who have been elected and whose terms have begun before the general convention convenes. No division has a right to be represented by any but the woman who is actually in office as president. Therefore the committee will not be able, no matter how much it may wish to be accommodating, to recognize anyone as president of a division, except one whose term of office has begun when the convention convenes.

Article 4, section 11, in speaking of the committee on credentials, says: "This committee shall meet two working days previous to the annual convention, to examine, approve and arrange the credentials of the delegates. It shall not recognize any delegate except one duly authorized in writing. This committee shall not recognize any credentials received by it later than five days previous to the convention, etc., etc."

You will notice that these by-laws say "shall not," and this makes the observance of them compulsory, so that the committee has no right to do otherwise than as the by-laws say.

The chairman of the committee will advise the committee to accept as credentials, those not written on the blanks sent out, provided the statement is made at the bottom of such credentials that the blanks were not received in time to get the credentials to the committee in the time specified in the by-laws. And, of course, you know that such credentials would be worthless unless signed by the president and the secretary of the chapter issuing them. Credentials sent by telegraph cannot be recognized, since they cannot be signed by these officers.

These by-laws will be found on pages 330 and 366 of the Hot Springs minutes. Please read them and you will see that the committee is bound by them. And you will realize also that when so much red-tape must be gone through with to amend a by-law, certainly one cannot be set aside at convenience. Get your credentials in on time, and if you mail them after the first week in November, send them to me in care of the headquarters hotel (the name of which will be given you in the call for the convention) in Richmond, Va., as I will be there to represent the committee in receiving them five days before the convening of the convention on Wednesday, November 17.

LIZZIE GEORGE HENDERSON.
Chairman.

Subscription Prizes And Club Rates.

The U. D. C. work for The Veteran will be continued in 1926, and the following special prizes and club rates should stimulate the competition:

A prize of $10 to the division reporting the largest number of new subscriptions.

A prize of $10 to the division reporting the largest number of new subscription at full rate, $1.50 each.

A prize of $10 to the chapter reporting the largest number of subscriptions.

A prize of $10 to the chapter reporting the largest number of new subscriptions at full rate, $1.50 each.

Picture of the three generals will be sent to the chapter reporting 20 new subscriptions at full rate, $1.50 each.

A club of four subscriptions may be sent for $5, and the illustrated booklet, "State Capitols of the South," will be sent as premium for this club when asked for.

A club of 10 subscriptions may be sent for $11.25.

It is hoped that every chapter in the organization will join in this effort to build up the circulation of our journal of Confederate history. Send for sample copies and report blanks.

Address The Confederate Veteran, Nashville, Tenn.

Un Mot Ici Est Bien

BY MRS. J. J. HARRIS, Sandersville, Ga., State Editor
Georgia Division U. D. C.

Our very efficient chairman of the Norman V. Randolph relief fund, Mrs. R. M. McMaster, Waynesboro, is issuing an urgent call for the early donations toward the relief fund for needy Confederate women. This particular line of philanthropic endeavor is the duty of all members of the Georgia division U. D. C. Up until this time, Mrs. McMaster states, only 58 chapters have responded to this call. As it is less than two weeks before the state treasurer's books close it is more than urgent that this work be considered. Mrs. McMaster, like other chairmen, ever stands ready to assist our great organization in its upward march of progression, but she cannot act singly. She can only help the Georgia division as the chapters help with their donations, and it is our duty to her as well as the cause to show appreciation of her beautiful work by an instant response to her appeal.

Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, state registrar, makes the following request: "All certificates due chapters not yet received, especially for the early part of the term, are requested to report names to the division registrar so that she may secure them before the convention." We feel sure that this timely word from Mrs. Anderson will be considered at an early date. She has been of inestimable help to the Georgia division, among many other things, being the originator of the star chapter work which has been such an incentive toward greater development. She writes that beautiful red silk flags have been ordered to be presented the chapters meeting the requirements of the standard and many chapters will be made happy by this award for execellence.

In passing on let us state that the question, "Has your chapter taken interest in the work of the Children of the Confederacy?" may be answered in various ways and still meet the requirements. Chapters that have been unable to organize Children of the Confederacy chapters, but have used Children of the Confederacy ancestry in programs or have been instrumental in having them study books by southern authors, may answer the above question in the affirmative.

Our state treasurer, Mrs. C. T. Tillman, of Quitman, today issues a most interesting appeal in that all completed work now makes for a better showing of the Georgia division at the state convention in Statesboro. The books close on October 10 and it is our duty to our efficient treasurer to heed this request, as her term of office will be over at the convention and it will be our pleasure to help her make a good showing of her work at that time.

Mrs. St. John Lawton has issued a call for the general convention to be held in Richmond. Our slogan should be "On to Richmond" for the next few weeks.

Our own president today issues her convention call. The convention will be held in Statesboro October 26-28, with Bullock county chapter, Mrs. Julian Lane, president, being hostess chapter. Plans are being formulated to make this the biggest and best convention in the history of the Georgia division. With such a charming city planning for our advent, it is no wonder that all members of the Georgia division U. D. C. are looking forward to the magic dates with increased interest and inspiration.

Chapter Reports

Charles Anderson.

The initial meeting of the Charles D. Anderson chapter, U. D. C., of Fort Valley, was held at the home of Mrs. O. T. Cardell, on East Main street, with Mrs. H. A. Mathews, Mrs. W. C. Wright and Mrs. G. W. Spear, hostesses.

Plans are being made to give to each school in the county a Georgia flag on Georgia day, February 12.

Pictures of Robert E. Lee, Jefferson Davis and Stonewall Jackson have been purchased by the chapter and will be framed and presented to the school at an early date. A picture of Winnie Davis, the Daughter of the Confederacy, has also been purchased and framed for our room in Winnie Davis hall at the Georgia State Normal school in Athens.

Several crates of peaches given by members were sent to the Sodiers' home in Atlanta, and a box of canned fruit will be sent later.

The chapter representatives at the state convention in Statesboro will be Mrs. C. M. Orr and Mrs. J. A. L. Wilson; alternates, Mrs. C. H. Sammons, Mrs. W. C. Fagan.

As September 27 is the birthday of Admiral Raphael Semmes, the intrepid commander of the Confederate battleship "The Alabama," a splendid sketch of his life was read by Mrs. S. B. Wilson.

Covington.

An unusually large and enthusiastic crowd was present Tuesday afternoon when the first fall meeting of the Covington chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy ,was held at the library at 4 o'clock, with Mrs. Trox Bankston, president, in the chair.

Mrs. C. W. Dyal having resigned as recording secretary, Mrs. J. C. Upshaw was elected to fill the unexpired term. Mrs. J. O. Cooper and Mrs. R. E. Everitt were elected delegates to the state convention to be held at Statesboro in October, with Mrs. R. M. Mobley and Mrs. R. A. Norris as alternates.

A cordial welcome was extended the following new members: Mrs. Byrd, Mrs. Skinner, Mrs. Patrick and Mrs. Birdsong. Boxes of fruit reported sent to Confederated Veterans.

Inspiring and uplifting talks were made by Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, state president of the United Daughters of the Confederacy; Mrs. J. E. Hays, former president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs and recording secretary of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, both of Montezuma, and Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, of Madison, another officer in the Georgia division, U. D. C.

Mrs. Lee Trammell, of Madison, state custodian of crosses of service, bestowed crosses of service to the following descendants of Confedrate Veterans: Rev. Samuel Burney Hay, Dr. J. Roscoe Sams, Dr. Carlton Anderson Lee, William Morgan Weaver, Jr., John Rush Lester, James George Lester and William Reginald Robinson.

Mary Brantley.

The Mary Brantley chapter of the U. D. C., Dawson, Ga., held the first meeting of the year Friday afternoon, September 24, with a large attendance. An interesting program was given commemorating the birthday of Admiral Semmes.

Mrs. J. M. Rauch, president, presided over the business session and urged the chapter to "go forward" this year and to cooperate in making this chapter a star chapter.

HAVELYN BOLTON,
Press Chairman.

Quitman.

At its meeting last Monday afternoon the U. D. C. chapter true to its fine record for responding to every worthy appeal, voted to give $10 through the local Red Cross for relief in the Florida disaster.

In its first fall meeting a good deal of routine business was disposed of. A nominating committee, Mr. C. H. Myers and Mrs. A. L. Tidwell, were appointed to present names for president and second vice president of the chapter at the next meeting.

The president will go to the state convention in Statesboro in October, alternate to the president, Mrs. A. L Tidwell. The convention delegate is Mrs. Fields Roberts, alternate to the delegates, Mrs. W. W. Wade. Mrs. C. T. Tillman, who is also state treasurer, was elected to attend the national convention in Richmond in November.

The Stone Mountain Memorial project was again discussed and the chapter will adhere to its policy of not forwarding money to this until the association makes some satisfactory statement. The chapter is placing the funds in the bank as they are due.

Sam Goldberg and Mrs. D. Effron, and the ticket committee is planning a wide canvass of the city, to begin in 10 days. Mrs. Charles Newman is in charge of the ticket sale.

Amendments To Constitution

By Mrs. Walter Grace:

To amend Article IV, Section 5 (to conform to Constitution and By-Laws of General associaton) to read: "The term of all new officers, except that of president, shall begin with the closing of state convention at which they were elected. In case of a vacancy, the president shall appoint a member to serve until her successor is elected. The retiring president shall remain in office until after the general convention immediately following state convention, so that she may report year's work and represent her division at general convention, serve as chairman of state delegation, and act as delegate for all chapters not represented by delegates. She shall have her expenses paid as president.

Article VII. of By-Laws.

Last sentence amended to read: "Registrar must acknowledge receipt of application papers within two months after papers are sent to her."

By Mrs. Howard H. McCall:

1. To amend Article V. of the Constitution to have Section 3, Article V. read: "Each chapter shall be entitled in all conventions of the Georgia division, to one vote for the first seven members, and one vote for every additional 25 members; provided the per capita tax has been paid for the number of members upon which the vote is estimated, and provided further, that (after the convention of 1920) every member so claimed shall have been registered with the registrar general. No chapter shall be considered in good standing until it has complied with all the provisions of the constitution and by-laws of both the general association and the Georgia division, of which it is a member. Any representative of a chapter may cast the full vote, but such vote must be cast through the president of the chapter, or in her absence, by a delegate appointed by the delegation, or by the chapter, to act as chairman. No proxies shall be allowed."

By Mrs. Howard H. McCall:

To amend Article V. of the Constitution, to have Section 4 of Article V. read: "The vote in all conventions of the Georgia division, on all constitutional amendments, shall be by roll call of the chapters, by viva voce; also the vote on main questions or resolutions shall be the same way, when so demanded from the floor. In the roll call of the chapters, the president or appointed chairman alone, shall cast said vote according to instructions from the respective delegates.

By Mrs. Howard H. McCall:

To amend Article V. That Section 3, Article V., be changed to Section V., Article V.

By Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan:

1. That Article VIII. be changed from "Seals and Badges" to "Seals and Insignia."

By Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan:

2. That Section 1, Article VIII. be amended to read: "The seal of the Georgia division shall be a reproduction of the great seal of the Confederate States of America, with the addition of the inscription, 'United Daughters of the Confederacy,' and the name of the state, 'Georgia,' on the outer rim."

By Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan:

3. That Section 2, Article VIII., be amended to read: "The insignia worn by the Georgia division shall consist of a representation of the Confederate flag (Stars and Bars) in white, blue and scarlet enamel, surrounded by a laurel wreath, with the monogram 'U. D. C.' under the flag and the dates '61-65' on the loops of the bow that ties the wreath. This insignia may be suspended from a bar to designate the name of the state, 'Georgia' being engraved on the bar."

By Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan:

4. That Section 3, Article VIII., be added to read: "The insignia of the Georgia division shall be carried only on the left breast."

Winthrop College Alumnae To Meet.

The Atlanta chapter of the Winthrop College Alumnae association will be entertained by Mrs. J. E. Croswell and Mrs. James Sarton at the home of Mrs. Croswell on East Brookhaven drive, at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon, October 8. All former students of Winthrop college are cordially invited. Please phone Mrs. Croswell that you can come and she will give directions about reaching her home. Mrs. H. H. Kirsch is president of the alumnae.

MEN and women, thousands of them everywhere who are fastidious and who exercise a fine sense of judgment in the choice of an automobile, consistently chose a Franklin. Professional people, leaders in business, in society, all praise the performance of the Franklin car in the highest terms—in fact, they will have no other car once they own one—once a Franklin owner, always one. It's marvelous engineering mechanism makes it a peer among motor cars today.

The new model Franklin sedan is an exquisitely beautiful car in every detail. I was perfectly charmed by its beauty of style, line and elegance and its riding comfort is truly marvelous. When you ride in one of these new sedans you simply are not aware of streets in need of repair, car tracks or anything that usually is annoying to most motorists—you glide along smoothly as if they didn't exist. The very appearance of the new model sedan suggests comfort. Its lines are graceful, its spaciousness is gratifying—just let yourself sink into its deeply cushioned depths—then you will appreciate what automobile comfort can be.

You can have the sedan you purchase at the Franklin Motor Car Company on West Peachtree Street any color you desire—here are some colors that are le dernier cri in motordom: lush green, mushroom gray, desert sand and beige in different shades—in fact, any color that you prefer your car can be finished in.

The upholstery is Australian wool broadcloth—a splendid material both in appearance and durability—it contributes its share to embody elegance to the sedan as well as does the hand-hammered nickel-plated over-brass and copper fittings.

The sedan that charmed me so is now on display at the salesroom of the Franklin Motor Car company. It is a maroon colored sedan trimmed with a black stripe outlined with a fine hair-line stripe of white—the fenders are of a deep, lustrous black as is also part of the top, all of which goes to create a striking contrast. See it, you will be as charmed with its appearance as I was and will surely want to own one. Have the Franklin company demonstrate its matchless performance to you—ride in one, you will experience a new joy in motoring.

Exceedingly smart this season for afternoon and evening are rhinestone pins — circles and squares either plain or decorated. They are worn high on the left shoulder or below a deep V on the blouse.

* * * *

A FRIEND of mine from out-of-town telephoned me to go shopping with her—she came to Atlanta especially to purchase her fall and winter wardrobe at Rich's. She said, "I always wait each season until the Harvest Sale at Rich's before I even think of buying a thing to wear—their values are simply wonderful."

We went shopping and Molly was delighted with her numerous purchases and I with mine. We both agreed that never had we seen merchandise of such quality at the values that M. Rich & Bros. company are offering the public in their October Harvest Sale.

There is a $400,000 stock of merchandise that makes the sale as full as the Horn of Plenty. Seventy departments just filled with brand-new goods—a veritable golden gleaning it will be for you if you reap the harvest garnered there under the roof of Rich's—the store all women adoe to shop in. This is an opportunity to enable you to fulfill your desires within the range of your pocketbook. Share the fruits of the season—this is an outstanding event.

Get all the wearing apparel you need for the coming season both for yourself and family and purchase for your household as well as things that will add to its attractiveness and make it all the more artistic and livable. Reductions of 25 to 33 1-3 per cent prevail all over this splendid big store during the 10-day Harvest Sale.

Molly and I both bought among our many purchases enough gloves, stockings and handkerchiefs at the sale to last us for the season and were so perfectly delighted with them that we bought many Christmas presents, too. The values prevailing in each department at Rich's is so wonderful that we simply couldn't help ourselves—the choosing was tres facile—everything so attractively displayed and of such quality and chic that their selection was a pleasure. Attend the Harvest Sale at Rich's—you will be delighted with the merchandise offered you and thrilled at the prices.

HOUSEWIVES watch the papers from day to day during this coming week for specially priced food products at all of the Rogers Stores during this, the last week of their mammoth Expansion Sales. This sale has been and is a splendid birthday celebration. Rogers was founded 34 years ago—a long time, isn't it—and how wonderful it is to think how this great chain of stores have grown since the founding of the first Rogers Store. The growth has been phenomenal. Quality, value-giving and courteous service are the things that have made Rogers popular and famous all over Atlanta, as well as Tennessee, Alabama and South Carolina. Everywhere there is a Rogers Store there are satisfied customers—for when you do your marketing at Rogers "Satisfaction is a Certainty." The watchword is indeed appropriate and a more fitting one would be difficult to find—they deserve it in every sense of the word.

An officer of the Southern Grocery Stores, Inc., said to me the other day in course of conversation that the company was well pleased with the way the people of Atlanta and all over the southern territory of the Rogers Stores had responded to their Expansion Sales. "It proved that they appreciated the high quality food products offered them during this big sale attractively priced in celebration of the 34th anniversary of the founding of the Rogers Stores," he said.

At Rogers always you can buy the highest quality products at prices not equaled elsewhere, but in the Expansion Sales are products offered each day as specials at unusually good values. It will be to your interest to keep posted on them, too.

One of the products that has proven popular and that has "gone over" tremendously well during the sale is the College Inn line of canned goods that I told you about last Sunday. They are prepared from the recipes of Henri, the chef of the famous Sherman Hotel in Chicago. He is a perfect wonder in the culinary arts and concocts the most delectable dishes you can imagine in the kitchen over which he presides in the College Inn Restaurant. The products that you buy bearing the brand College Inn are identical with the same dishes served at the College Inn Restaurant in Chicago. They are wonderfully good—delightfully seasoned and "fit for a queen." They are delicious to serve your family and guests—they will like them—they are all good. This line of products has proven so popular that every woman who has served them wants more on her pantry shelf—they are different and have a taste all their own, for Henri is renowned for the seasoning and blending of his recipes.

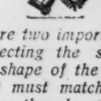

Among the many good things that will be on sale during this week are salmon, sardines, the Waldorf brand of fruits and vegetables, spaghetti, pineapple, both sliced and grated; Snowdrift, Block's crackers, Spredit, preserves of many kinds, various brands of the best coffee on the market, condensed and evaporated milk, pickles and olives. These products are of brands with which you are familiar—they are the best.

These are just a few items that I mention today, so go to Rogers and see for yourself what they offer you during the last week of the big Expansion Sales. There are sure to be many products too numerous to mention in the brands of your preference, the prices of which will attract you.

Acquire the custom of marketing at Rogers, if you are not already a customer. It's a custom that will grow on you more and more. You can depend on any one of the Rogers Stores for the best products at prices that are most reasonable—isn't that an incentive to go there? You'll like the courteous attention there, too—they are noted for that everywhere and it means so much. Marketing at Rogers is a pleasure—they have so many delicacies for your choosing that planning your menus and the actual buying is a pleasure. I mean it, for I market there myself and know whereof I speak.

There are two important features when selecting the sports handbag—the shape of the bag and its color. It must match the frock, the hat, or the gloves and stockings—it must also be large, and easy to carry.

PREPARE now for comfortable fall and winter days! In the chilly mornings that are just ahead of us what a joy it will be to you to "plug in" an electric heater and instantly have glowing warmth—don't shiver while you dress. There is no use to be uncomfortable on the first cool days of autumn before it is necessary to start the home fires burning in the furnace—just buy several portable electric heaters from the salesroom of the Georgia Railway and Power company on Marietta street and any room in which you place them will be cozy and comfortable.

And think not only of the chilly fall mornings but also of what it will mean when King Winter makes his appearance. There will be many mornings when the house is cold before the furnace has has time to heat properly—then is the time to connect your electric heater. The man of the house will appreciate especially when he has to be up early in the morning one of these handy, convenient electric heaters to shave and dress himself by—he will gladly welcome its warmth on such occasions.

Connect to any electric outlet in any room in your home any one of the heaters that the Georgia Railway and Power company is displaying for your selection and immediately there is a beam of warmth that is oh! so comfortable. On mornings and evenings that are chilly, damp and rainy use a heater—they are just the thing you need—when you first get up, light your electric heater—then bathe and dress in comfort.

Buy several heaters, place them in the rooms you want them in and you can delay starting your furnace—it's economy to use them for they require very little current to operate. The next time you are down town—select the ones you want—they will assure you of comfort and are so convenient—quick, clean heat when and where you want it. There are several sizes of electric heaters for you to choose from. Get yours early, buy tomorrow so you will be ready for the cool days to come—and remember that you can arrange to pay for them on your monthly electric service bills if you desire to do so.

The four points of chic in the new winter coats are, that they are bloused above the hips—fur-trimmed—straight-lined—and closed diagonally.

At the recent openings of the Paris designers much prominence was given to two distinctly different new types of evening gowns—the simple, graceful one depending on cut and drapery for its smartness, and the much more elaborate one that is richly trimmed with jewels, beads or embroidery.

Rich Gifts Laid At Master's Feet.

Such announcements as that in last Sunday's Federated Church page of the entrance of a young woman of highest collegiate training into the Scarrett Training School for Christian Workers must make a profound impression upon those who are seeking a worthwhile life service. Miss Ruth Blair, of Newnan, with her home high school diploma, an academic degree from Wesleyan college, and a master's degree from Columbia university, and special professional work at Peabody, lays all at the Master's feet.

Take my life and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to Thee.

Years of preparation were well and lovingly spent for the privilege of a life work in His Kingdom, full of high endeavor and splendid adventure. The demands on heart and brain and spirit, on judgment and sympathy, on patience and power—all make a noble challenge, with an infinite reward. To build character, to further Christian education, to bring about better social conditions, and most exalted of all, to show the divine life of Christ to a people who know Him not, is a privilege well worth the investment.

As our college boys and girls plan their courses for their life work, and at this time are deeply concerned with ultimate values in their choice, may we not pray for their guidance that their special powers may be so directed that some field of the world's need may be won for the Kingdom of God and His Christ.

ROSA WOODBERRY, President.

Evening Branch Of Auxiliary To Be Formed

All Saints' church will organize an "evening branch" of the woman's auxiliary Tuesday evening, October 5.

The speakers will be the Rev. H. J. Mikell, the Rev. W. W. Memminger, Mrs. C. W. McClure and Miss Rosa Woodberry.

Any young woman interested in missionary work is cordially invited to attend this meeting which will be held in All Saints' parish house, West Peachtree street and North avenue.

Supper will be served promptly at 6:30 without charge. For reservations call Hemlock 0952-W.

Mrs. Victor Masters Is Honored.

Of cordial interest to Georgia Baptist women is the news received in Atlanta that Mrs. Victor I. Masters, formerly of Atlanta, and, at one time prominent in city and state W. M. U. executive boards, has been chosen by Louisville Baptist women as publicity chairman, for the south-wide W. M. U. meetings, which will be held in Louisville, Ky., next May, during the annual meeting of the Southern Baptist convention.

Certainly no wiser choice could have been made, for Mrs. Masters is not only well informed in all denominational enterprises, but is also an attractive and ready writer. Mrs. Masters belongs to the newspaper fraternity, her husband, Dr. Masters, being the able editor of the "Western Recorder," organ of Kentucky Baptists.

The Walnut Street church of Louisville has tendered the union the use of its large auditorium and excellent church facilities.

The "Western Recorder" is happy in making known the above cordial invitation, and it is confidently expected that this invitation will be as cordially accepted.

T. E. L. Class.

The T. E. L. class of the Druid Hills Baptist Sunday school held its semi-annual meeting last Tuesday at noon at the Henry Grady hotel. The largest room in the building was used for this occasion, which was completely filled with class members and guests.

After the devotional, which was led by Mrs. J. D. Rhodes, a delightful luncheon was served. Dr. F. C. McConnell, Dr. W. H. Faust, Dr. T. W. Ayers and Dr. Joe Broughton spoke of the splendid work accomplished by this class. Each one was loud in his praise of the great leadership of the retiring president, Mrs. Ruby De La Perriere. Mrs. Emory Merck, a charming soprano soloist, added much to the program.

Mrs. N. F. Guyton, class secretary, read a very interesting report.

After the election and installation of the new officers, Mrs. Lucy Ayers Pitman, the beloved teacher, presented Mrs. De La Perriere with an exquisite silver vase, a gift from the class, in recognition of her wonderful leadership and service while president.

Mrs. Pitman then welcomed Mrs. John M. Rudesal, who is a very attractive and interesting young woman, to the presidency, pledging her the same loyalty and cooperation that the former president has enjoyed.

Society Presidents Hold Meeting.

Mrs. J. C. White, secretary of the South Atlanta Methodist Missionary societies, called a meeting of the presidents on Friday of last week. It was the first group meeting to be held in the new Wesley community house and Deaconess Bessie Allen was a gracious hostess. Sixteen auxiliaries were represented with 21 present.

The fall calendar was stressed as follows: In October mission study is emphasized and new books taken up. The book recommended for united study this fall is "Our Templed Hills," by Ralph Felton. In November the week of prayer will be the outstanding feature and committees should be appointed now to complete arrangements for observing it properly. Election of auxiliary officers also comes in November. In December Harvest day is observed for bringing in the offerings to complete the year's work and meet all pledges.

Mrs. John A. Manget, Mrs. Wallace Rogers and Mrs. E. W. Brogdon gave plans for completing the Bennett memorial campaign. Fayetteville reported that the quota had been met, but they would continue their efforts in order that they might help meet the deficit of some smaller group. Park street and Mt. Zion will continue their activities in the interest of the campaign, although they met their quota sometime ago.

Deaconess Allen told of progress made in furnishing the Wesley house and asked for the cooperation of all missionary societies in the program for which the house stands in the community.

Gordon Street Baptist W. M. U.

The W. M. S. of the Gordon Street Baptist church held its weekly meeting at 3 o'clock Monday, last. The principal address was delivered by Rev. T. F. Callaway on "Personal Service." The secretary reported the society during the year had raised more than its missionary apportionment and in addition had raised $2,911.37 for the new building fund, making a total raised during the year of $4,099.44.

Last Wednesday was observed as State Mission day. Dr. W. H. Baylor, of Baltimore, secretary of the Maryland Baptist mission board, spoke on state mission work, outlining in a wonderfully interesting way the work in Maryland and particularly in Baltimore city.

The following are the new officers for the present year: Mrs. E. H. Gibson, president; Mrs. C. C. Mitchell, first vice president; Mrs. J. S. Price, second vice president; Mrs. W. J. Henry, third vice president; Mrs. C. C. Ranson, secretary; Mrs. C. T. Knight, treasurer.

Baptist Tabernacle W. M. S. Elects.

An executive board meeting of the new officers of the Baptist Tabernacle W. M. S. was held at the church on Monday afternoon, September 13.

The new officers for the coming year are: Mrs. J. B. Goodman, president; Mrs. J. M. Hord, first vice president; Mrs. W. H. Houghton, second vice president; Mrs. O. L. Webber, secretary; Mrs. S. C. Bennett, treasurer; Mrs. Zode Smith, auditor; Mrs. C. A. Ball, personal service chairman; Mrs. A. G. Sullivan, mission study chairman; Mrs. Fletcher Cochran, chorister; Mrs. O. H. Puckett and Mrs. B. Mathews, pianists; Mrs. A. S. Keith, hospital chairman; Mrs. M. H. Cooper, scrapbook chairman; Mrs. H. H. Wood, publicity chairman, and Mrs. C. B. Keesling, periodical chairman.

The circle leaders are as follows: Mesdames R. S. Howell, Geise Peeples, L. E. Misenhamer, P. H. Hendricks, P. A. Williams and Eva Parker.

A business session was followed by a short talk by Powell Lee, minister of music and church activities. Mrs. J. B. Goodman, president, was the gracious hostess.

MRS. R. S. HOWELL,
Press Chairman.

Methodist Board of Missions To Meet.

Mrs. A. L. Morris, president of the Methodist board of city missions, announces that the October meeting of the board will be held at the community house at 306 Whitehall street on Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

It is hoped that every church will be represented, as it will be of interest to each to know just what has been done toward making the house ready for regular activities of Wesley house work. Up to this time the board has always met in the Wesley Memorial church, but since the house is open the board thinks it advisable to meet there.

Women's Bible Class To Hold Rally.

Rally day will be observed by the young women's Bible class of the Central Presbyterian church whose quota has been placed at 250.

"The Venture of Faith, the Life of Faith, and the Reward of Faith" will be the subject of the lesson by Marion M. Jackson, teacher. All members of the classs are urged to come and bring their friends. Visitors and strangers in the city will receive a cordial welcome.

Atlanta B. W. M. U. To Hold Annual Meeting

Leaders of the Atlanta Baptist W. M. U., which convenes in Kirkwood this week. Top row, left to right, Mrs. A. E. Boling, R. A. leader; Mrs Frances Brown Chase, scrap book chairman; Mrs. M. O. Hempery, Sunbeam leader; lower left, Mrs. C. M. Terry, Y. W. A. counsellor; lower right, Mrs. H. A. Cole, G. A. counsellor.

The 17th annual session of the Baptist Woman's Missionary union, auxiliary to Atlanta Baptist association, will meet with the Kirkwood Baptist church October 6 and 7, beginning at 10 a. m. Wednesday night session will be given to Y. W. A. work, and Mrs. C. M. Terry, counselor, has prepared a most attractive program. Miss Clifford Hunter, of China, will be the principal speaker. All the churches in the Atlanta association are especially urged to have their delegates present and attend every session during the two days.

Miss Bert Winter Doing Big Work In North Georgia

Miss Bert Winter, rural worker for the Woman's Missionary society of the North Georgia conference, M. E. church, south, has recently devoted one week to activities in the Gainesville district. With Mrs. J. G. Logan, the district secretary, she visited many groups and organized a number of new ones.

The week began with an afternoon meeting at Hoschton with almost 100 per cent attendance from the circuit groups. A meeting of the station auxiliaries was held at First church, Gainesville, with five of the larger churches well represented. Mrs. S. S. Strong, Mrs. C. C. Jarrell and Mrs. J. N. McEachern were the conference officers present. Deaconess Bessie Allen was another visitor who added interest to the program with her address on "City Mission Work." Miss Bert Winter talked about the Greater Scarritt and the great need for completing the first unit which is the Bennett memorial. Mrs. J. N. McEachern, who is one of the trustees of Scarritt, made a strong plea for the fund necessary for the completion of the building and announced that she would place on the book of remembrance in the building, the names of Mrs. C. S. Strong and Mrs. J. G. Logan. Mrs. Jarrell led the afternoon devotional. Mrs. Strong discussed the proper use of the press. Mrs. W. P. King talked on law enforcement.

An all-day meeting was held at Duluth with good attendance and a splendid program. "A Missionary Clinic," an instructive and enjoyable pageant, was presented. Institute work was carried on by Mrs. Logan and Miss Winter spoke of Scarritt college and what it means to our church.

An afternoon meeting was held at Trinity church, Brookton, when Miss Winter and Mrs. Logan met another enthusiastic and earnest group of women anxious to do whatever the missionary program calls for this year. Plans were made for completing the fund for the Bennett memorial and committees appointed to carry them out.

New Holland, Hickory Flat and Lula were the new organizations perfected by Miss Winter. Other groups visited were Buford, Cornelia and Demorest. The work of the young people was stressed at every point and 13 members of the Buford Young People's society attended the meeting at Gainesville.

The Elberton district of the Woman's Missionary society of the North Georgia conference, M. E. church, south, is trying the zone plan of organization and, thus far, it has proven to be very fine. Societies within certain boundaries meet together occasionally for exchange of ideas and helpful discussions. Each zone has its own officers with the district secretary overseeing all of them.

The second zone held a meeting at Middleton last week with six societies represented. The program had been arranged by Miss Fannie Carter, who is zone leader, and each member did her part well. The district secretary, Mrs. W. B. Richardson, of Lavonia, was present and made a very helpful talk on things that have yet to be accomplished this year to meet the goal set at the annual conference. Mrs. T. E. Atkinson, of Newnan, conference superintendent of mission and Bible study, was present and gave a clear outline of the requirements and recommendations for mission and Bible study for 1926-27. The outstanding address was made by Miss Bert Winter, former secretary of the district, who attended Scarritt College for Christian Workers last year and is now doing rural work for the conference. Her subject was the "Greater Scarritt and the Need of the Bennett Memorial Building." The Concord society presented the "Missionary Clinic," which was entertaining and instructive and added quite a bit of interest to the program. The meeting was said to be one of the most successful ever held in the district.

MRS. J. A. GRIFFIES.

Ponce de Leon Baptists Nominate Officers.

The nominating committee of the Woman's Bible class of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church met recently and made the following nominations which were unanimously elected by the class:

Miss Carrie Booker, teacher; Mrs. R. L. Turman, assistant teacher; Mrs. R. D. Webb, president; Miss Mattie Clements, first vice president; Mrs. George Niles, second vice president; Mrs. Carrie Marsh Padgett, corresponding secretary; Mrs. M. A. Sandifer, secretary; Mrs. A. E. Griffith, assistant secretary; Mrs. W. T. Jones, treasurer; Mrs. A. E. Cutler, assistant treasurer; Mrs. John A. White, chairman publicity.

New officers will go in office the first Sunday in October, 1926.

Briefly Told

Wesleyan college has among its students this year, young women from 14 states and 3 foreign countries. Through the influence of Miss Louise Ballard, a graduate of 1924, who is teaching in one of the Methodist Mission schools of China, Miss Ada Lee and Miss Vee Ling Nyi have enrolled at Wesleyan. The student from Korea is Mrs. Induk Pak Kim and Brazil is represented by Miss Edith Belcher, who is a daughter of Rev. Sam Belcher, Methodist Missionary to Brazil.

Mrs. A. G. Maxwell has been appointed editor of the Spolight, official organ of the Susannah Wesley Bible class of the Druid Hills Methodist church. Mrs. Maxwell has been assistant editor for some time and on account of the resignation of Mrs. Russell, she has consented to take charge. She is thoroughly capable and, no doubt, the paper will go forward splendidly under her direction.

Beginning October 1, Miss Bert Winter, rural worker for the Woman's Missionary society of the North Georgia conference of the M. E. church, south, is to be pastor's assistant on the Clayton circuit. Miss Bert Winter spent last year at Scarritt College for Christian Workers in Nashville and is employed by the women of the conference to give six months of the year to the work of organizing and nurturing rural missionary societies; the other six months to be devoted to special work in the seven churches on the circuit in the mountains of north Georgia, in the Gainesville district.

In the interest of the Atlanta Goodwill industry, operated by the Methodist churches of the two Atlanta districts, the Atlanta Epworth League union took definite action at the September meeting. In future, 10 credits toward the Merit banner will be given for every goodwill bag placed by a leaguer and 100 credit points will be given for the return of one well filled. Under the direction of Mr. Holley, the Atlanta plant is gaining in efficiency daily. 751 bags have been placed in Atlanta homes during the special campaign this month.

Miss Mattie Vie Summers and Miss Reba Stewart, Southern Baptist missionaries to China, have been at home on furlough for the past year. These young women have been extremely useful to the cause which they represent, by speaking in numerous missionary meetings, in the homeland. Georgia is proud to claim them as her own. They are returning in a few days for their adopted land.

Friends of Mrs. Julia Veach Stewart, formerly of Adairsville, Ga., will be glad to know that she is now in Atlanta, and is with the Baptist book store, in the Palmer building. Mrs. Stewart is a graduate of the W. M. U. Training school, Louisville, Ky., having received her diploma last May.

Mrs. James D. Rhodes, mission study chairman for the Baptist W. M. U., Atlanta and Mrs. T. T. Warr, of the second district, went to Marietta on last Wednesday to attend the Cobb county fair. They took with them numerous charts, posters and mission study books, and displayed them in the Peace booth, conducted by the Noonday W. M. U., under the leadership of Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth. Many of the charts and posters were loaned by the Stone Mountain W. M. U., through Mrs. E. G. Walton, superintendent.

Mrs. Paul White, of Rome, mission study chairman, for Georgia W. M. U. had planned to be with other Baptist women at Cobb county fair, and was unable to attend, but sent to Mrs. Rhodes a number of interesting mission study helps and exhibits.

Miss Bessie Lambert, teacher of the Tech Bible class of All Saints Episcopal church will give a dinner for the members of her class, and some of their friends, Friday evening at 6 o'clock, in All Saints Parish house.

The City Union of Young People's Service leagues will hold their fall meeting in All Saints Episcopal church Sunday evening, October 3, at 5:30 o'clock.

Promotion Day at Peachtree Christian.

The Peachtree Christian Bible school, which is less than two years old, has an enrollment of almost 500. It has been somewhat difficult to maintain departments, having to use all sorts of rooms to conduct them in. For one year at the Woman's club it was almost impossible to hold Bible school at all satisfactorily, but it was done, although it did not grow with its present rapidity. This year part of the Bible school auditorium has been completed, but most of the large rooms at the rear will be built later, and the departments are holding forth in the balcony, merely divided by rep curtains. But, where there is a will, be it said, there is invariably a way.

Enthusiasm and energy will do a great deal to build up anything, and E. R. Craighead, prominent Atlanta attorney, and his associate, Fred C Hannah, are doing all in their power to get strangers to attend and to maintain their interest after they come. Some very fine teachers are in charge of large classes, notably Mrs. Frank Mason Robinson, Rev. Dwight S. Bayley and John W. Crenshaw.

September 26 was designated as promotion day and over 50 children were moved higher up and presented with certificates of promotion and an added touch was the thoughtful personal gift of Mr. Craighead of Bibles to each child thus promoted. The various departments are in charge of the very splendid persons, whose names follow:

Cradle roll and beginners, Mrs. Fred C. Hannah; primary department, Miss Eileen Bricker; junior department, Miss Caroline E. Thomas, and intermediate department, O. M. Jackson.

Any one who lives conveniently to the Peachtree church, at the corner of Peachtree and Spring, who desires a real, growing, up-to-date school that one day in the near future will be a power among all the other churches of the city, are cordially invited to come and enroll themselves as an integral part of a great school.

CALENDAR OF MEETINGS

Baptist Free Will Centers Are Doing Splendid Work

BY MRS. JOHN R. DICKEY.

Although the primary aim of the Andrew and Frances Stewart Good Will center, on the Bankhead highway, is to hold up Christ, the purpose and plan is always three-fold, physical, mental and spiritual. When a child enters the Andrew and Frances Stewart Baptist Good Will center, no certificate of health is required, but health is the first consideration, and it is often the case that the little one needs careful treatment and special diet. Such attention promptly given so changes the child that one scarcely recognizes him or her in a few weeks as the same individual.

The work of the clinic department is of great importance. On the first and third Wednesdays, 30 or 40 children are examined by the best physicians (specialists and dentists), who cooperate with Miss Allie Arendale, the director, in every way, to see that eyes, nose, throat and teeth are in good condition.

Treatment Free.

Treatment by these physicians is free, in addition, hospital attention, when necessary. Visitors are welcomed on clinic days.

Any boy or girl with idle hands will become miserable; therefore there is constant planning in club work to train the children of all ages in some useful art to make them happier and more helpful in their homes.

In this department Miss Allendale and her corps of volunteer workers are very successful. One mother said of her 14-year-old daughter that she had become a fine cook since she had learned at the Center Ayita (Willing Workers') club. Girls from 12 to 17 are eligible to this club and they meet at 3 p. m. on first and third Wednesdays. Visitors are always welcome.

Another club, "Blue Birds," includes girls from 8 to 12, and meets also the first and third Wednesdays at 3 o'clock in the afternoon with an average attendance of 28.

Bible verses are taught and nearly all the girls learn to lead in prayer. Blue Birds and Ayitas alike are taught so to live that their thoughts, words and deeds will bring beauty and happiness through service to all those around them. The lessons in serving and cooking pave the way to better homes. All is being done for the purpose of making for the children a better environment and to give them strength to overcome the many temptations they may meet.

Boys' Club Also.

Of course there is also a boys' club. At their story hour there is an average attendance of 41. Won't you visit the club and hear them tell Bible stories?

The nursery (perhaps the most interesting department) opens with a 15 minutes' devotional; almost all the children take part, either giving a Bible verse or singing a hymn or saying a prayer. Even 5-year-old children repeat verses, and whole chapters from the Bible.

Thus does our faithful director help in molding the lives of men and women of tomorrow. Miss Arendale visits in the neighboring homes, bringing the Christ spirit, and helps the women to be better, more intelligent mothers. Then there is the Mothers' club, where the burdened, weary mothers are encouraged and often led to Jesus. True ideals of motherhood and real home making are taught.

Through house-to-house visiting a friendly Christian spirit is inculcated.

The Andrew and Frances Stewart Good Will center is an open door indeed that challenges the Baptist women of Atlanta. The work is growing and there are many paths leading back into the treasure house, and the treasures there are human lives and immortal souls. Miss Arendale had the privilege of leading one of the mothers of this community to Christ a short while ago. Since her conversion she gathers her 10 children around her at night for family prayer.

Do you not agree that Good Will center work is all worth while?

Atlanta Woman Honored in China.

News has come of the ninth annual meeting of the China Conference Woman's Missionary society held at Changshu with 90 delegates and 30 visitors whose ages varied from 9 to 70 years of age. The business was dispatched with care by a group of capable Chinese women, which proves that Christian leadership can be found in China today.

Heretofore, for the prize of $25, a name could be placed on the permanent roll of honor of the organization, but at this meeting it was voted to increase the price for this honor to $100 and the first name to be used on the new roll was that of Miss Virginia Atkinson, the $100 being a gift from her friends. Miss Atkinson is a former Atlanta woman, but has been in China for many years, where she is doing a wonderful work as supervisor of day schools and evangelistic work in the Changshu circuit.

Next year will be the tenth birthday of the conference and the women have gone to work to raise $1,000 over and above other obligations, which will be given to the Nanking Bible Teachers' Training school for a new dormitory. A very splendid way to celebrate a birthday is by doing something for some one else and that is what these missionary women of China have decided to do.

"A Horrible Time"

"SEVERAL years ago my health was very bad," says Mrs. Alven Jesse, of Shelbyville, Ky., whose picture appears above. "I was very much run-down. I was in such a weak, nervous condition that I was not able to do my housework.

"I struggled to keep up, because I had to, but many a time I spent hours in bed, trying to force enough strength to go through the daily routine. The memory of that horrible time makes me shudder.

"This condition went on for some time, until I heard about Cardui, which some one told me was good for such ailments. I gave it an immediate trial, and, I am thankful to say, my improvement was rapid. I soon was able to do my housework with ease and comfort. I felt fine and I looked so much better.

"This spring I was not as well as I had been. I was ill in the winter with colds, which left me weak. So I sent at once to the store for Cardui and began taking it. In just a little while I was feeling much better, my strength returned and I was able to get my work done easier and with less effort.

"I have told lots of my friends about Cardui because it helped me so much."

BARBERS OF GEORGIA MEET OCTOBER 11-12

Lectures by J. S. Agney, instructor at the Moler Barber college, of St. Louis, and demonstrations of tonsorial work by six-month students of the school will feature the program of the first annual convention of the Georgia Master Barbers' association, which will be held in Atlanta October 11-12, according to C. A. Morrison, president of the state association.

Some 450 master members and about 300 journeymen are expected to attend the convention, it was stated. The purpose of the organization is to uplift the barber craft and encourage skillful workmanship among the barbers of the state, the announcement explained.

CASCADE METHODISTS BEGIN NEW SERVICES

The newly organized Cascade Methodist church will hold its first services this morning at 11 o'clock at 1511 Beecher street in a store house which will be temporary quarters until a church building can be erected.

Sunday school will start at 9:30 o'clock and will be followed by the preaching service at 11 o'clock.

The first of the Sunday night services will be held Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock with a special program.

California Citizen Buys Brunswick Farm For Poultry Raising

Brunswick, Ga., October 2.—(Special.)—F. A. Lyons, formerly secretary of the Santa Cruse, Calif., Poultry association, has purchased from the Brunswick Peninsula company 30 acres of land on the Brunswick-Darien road on which he will establish a large poultry farm. He said today that he will build poultry houses and arrange his yards to accommodate 20,000 White Leghorn hens. In addition he will install a ten thousand egg incubator and will grow his stock in Brunswick.

Mr. Lyons formerly operated a sixteen thousand hen poultry farm in California and this work in connection with his duties as secretary of the poultry growers association in California has given him wide experience. He said today that southwest Georgia offers a better opportunity than California for the poultry industry. He will ship his eggs both to eastern markets and to Florida. He has estimated that when his farm is in full operation he will be shipping more than a carload of eggs every week. Mr. Lyons was attracted to this section through the activities of the Georgia association, working in connection with the agricultural department of the A., B. and A. railway, it is stated.

LAWYERS HONOR MEMORY OF LATE JUDGE PETTIGREW

Tribute to the life and service of the late Judge Charles L. Pettigrew, of municipal court, was paid Saturday morning by the Atlanta Bar association in memorial session in the courtroom of Judge Luth Z. Rosser at the courthouse.

The meeting was presided over by Robert B Troutman, president of the association, who introduced a number of association members, who in brief addresses, eulogized the late judge.

Among those who delivered addresses were Henry Peeples, Judge W. D. Ellis, of Fulton superior court; Judge Ben H. Hill, George Westmoreland, Carl Hutcheson, Judge James Ridley, Judge T. O. Hathcock, George Whitman and Judge Shepard Bryan.

The meeting was featured by a report of the committee of the Atlanta Bar association appointed recently to present a memorial to the late judge. The report expressed regret for the death of the late jurist, eulogized his life and service in private life as well as on the municipal court bench, and related in detail facts concerning his life history. The resolution was signed by Robert H. Jones, Jr., chairman of the committee, and the following members of the association: Clarence Bell, Harry A. Beaman, Bond Almand, Joseph Humphries and Judge Shepard Bryan.

The report was unanimously adopted.

DUKE TURNS ESTATE INTO LIMITED FIRM TO ESCAPE TAXES

London, October 2.—(AP)—The Duke of Devonshire, former governor general of Canada, like seven other dukes and numerous land-owning peers, has turned his estate into a limited liability company.

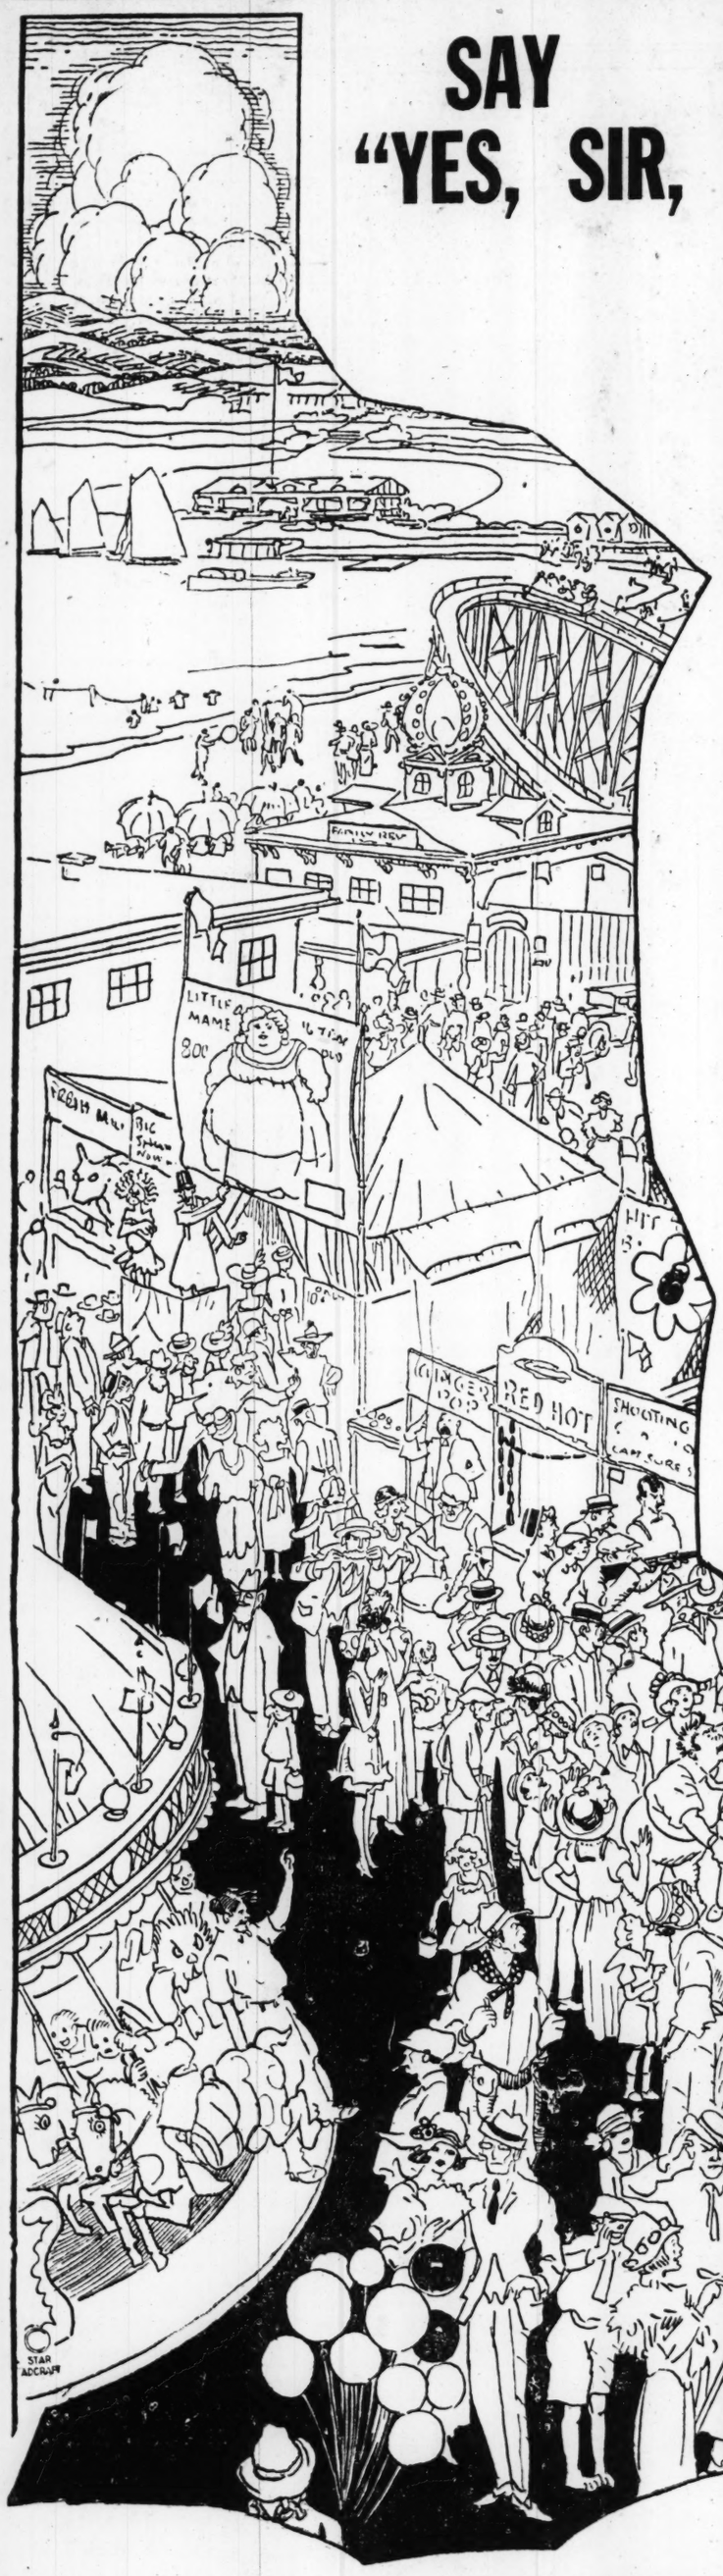

By this method he will be able to avoid special taxation, deduct the expenses of running the estate from his income tax and escape the payment of death dues.

At present the death duties on real estate are so enormous that it is calculated most privately-owned estates paying them must inevitably be broken up within three generations.

FLOOD WARNING OUT ALONG MISSISSIPPI

St. Louis, Octobe. 2.—(AP)—Flood warnings on the Mississippi river, immediately above the mouth of the Missouri, and for the Illinois river were issued today by the weather bureau here. At Grafton, Ill., with flood stage of 18 feet, the river today stood at 20.6, with 21.8 predicted.

SAY "YES, SIR, I'M GOING" TO THE SOUTHEASTERN FAIR

THE JOYLAND OF THE FAIR

By Frank L. Stanton

POET LAUREATE OF GEORGIA

You meet 'em and greet 'em from the hilltop to the plain,
The ox-cart and the auto and the speedin' Georgia train;
The airships comin' hummin' with folks from everywhere,—
They're on the way to Joyland—Atlanta and the Fair.

Comin' a-hummin'; from near and far away,
Just as if the Country said, 'Let's all take holiday!"
A holiday with Happiness, there's lots o' that to spare
On the way to Joyland—the Joyland of the Fair.

The fruits o' fields and valleys—the mines and whirrin' mills;
The hives that drip with honey; the gifts of golden hills;
It's there they're spread, bewilderin', from cot to shiny dome,
For Georgia's keepin' house today and all the world's at home.

Comin' a-hummin' to the music o' the bands;
You get the hurrah feelin' where the country's shakin' hands!
Shakin' hands with Plenty, it reads its titles clear
To the new times and the true times in the Joyland of the Fair.

Miss Wages Weds Mr. Morris At Quiet Ceremony

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Lura Wages and S. L. Morris which took place on Friday evening, October 1, at 8:30 o'clock at the residence of the Rev. Dr. W. T. Hamby, 408 East Ponce de Leon avenue, Decatur, who performed the ceremony in the presence of only a few friends.

Mrs. Morris who has been making her home in Atlanta for the past six years was originally from Auburn, Ga.

Mr. Morris who is the son of Dr. S. L. Morris, of Jackson, Miss., is conected with the postoffice department in Atlanta. He is the grandson of the late Dr. Burleson president of Baiiow university in Waco, Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris left for a wedding trip, and upon returning will make their home in Atlanta, Ga.

Miss Barton Weds John Higginbothan.

West Point, Ga., October 2.—The marriage of Miss Mary Scott Barton and John T. Higginbotham, which took place at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Barton, at 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, September 23, was a beautiful event.

Miss Francina Cook and Lamar Green gave a program of violin and piano music preceding the entrance of the bridal party. Mrs. Griggs Zackry, cousin of the bride, sang and Miss Louise Whililey, of Warrenton, also rendered a vocal selection.

Miss Mildred Miller and Miss Elizabeth Houston formed an aisle with tulle, which was fastened to old-fashioned bouquets.

Miss Mary Higginbotham, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. The maid of honor was Miss Judith Rice.

Little Betty Belle was flower girl.

The beautiful bride entered with her brother, Monroe Barton, by whom she was given in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Harold Parker. The Rev. J. W. Ventch, pastor of the First Methodist church of West Point, performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a gown of wood rose satin, embroidered in self tones. Her hat was of the same shade and she wore a stone marten choker. A shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley completed her lovely costume. As a note of sentiment she carried a real lace handkerchief which had been carried by her great-grandmother and by her aunt, Mrs. Arch Avery, on their wedding days.

After the ceremony Dr. and Mrs. Barton entertained the wedding guests at a lovely reception.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Walthall, of Newnan; Ward Higginbotham and Ward Higginbotham, Jr., of Atlanta; George Sheally, of Columbus; Miss Louise Whililey, of Macon; Mrs. G. C. Harwell, of College Park; Mrs. P. M. Rice and Miss Judith Rice, of Smyrna.

Mr. and Mrs. Higginbtham left for a wedding journey to Signal Mountain. They will reside in West Point, where Mr. Higginbotham holds a responsible position with the West Point Manufacturing company.

Miss Prothro Weds Raymond Kitts.

Hampton, Ga., October 2.—The wedding of Miss Mildred Prothro and Raymond Kitts took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Oscar Prothro, Thursday evening, September 30, at 6 o'clock. The Rev. C. M. McEntire, pastor of the Hampton Christian church, officiated.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Grace Fields rendered a piano solo, and Mrs. Charles M. McEntire sang "O Promise Me."

The bride was radiantly lovely in a brown ensemble with complete accessories in harmonizing detail. The dress of crepe satin was made along simple lines, the skirt showing a slight draped effect, was fastened with a rhinestone ornament, while her hat of satin and velvet combined, had a similar rhinestone trimming. She carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Kitts left for their home in Knoxville, Tenn., going by motor through North Carolina and visiting many points of interest en route.

Mrs. Kitts is a young woman of unusual beauty combined with a grace and charm of manner that has endeared her to a wide circle of friends. She is an alumnus of Auburn college and also attended Milligan college.

Mr. Kitts, who also attended Auburn college, was formerly connected with Knoxville High school. He is at present a promising young business man of that city, and will introduce his bride to a large circle of friends.

Miss Dozier Weds V. H. Cunningham.

Albany, Ga., October 2.—C. C. Dozier, of Albany, announces the marriage of his daughter, Lucile, to V. Hylton Cunningham, of Knoxville, Tenn., on September 12, at Americus.

Lovely Bride of September

Mrs. Julian Ray, Jr., who before her marriage on Thursday, September 16, was Helen Wray, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Wray, of Atlanta.

PIRKLE—WILSON.

Miss Augusta Pirkle, of Atlanta, announces the engagement of her sister, Gladys, to Floyd E. Wilson, of LaGrange, Ga., the marriage to be solemnized at an early date.

McNair-Ferrell Wedding Is Set for Tuesday, Oct. 14

Of interest to a wide circle of friends is the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Lottie McNair and Frank Matthews Terrell, whose marriage will be a social event of October 14, at the South Pryor Street Presbyterian church. The Rev. J. G. Patton, Jr., will perform the ceremony. Preceding the marriage service, a program of nuptial music will be rendered by Edward McNair and Gibbs Fowler.

The usher swill be Jesse Shelton and O. J. Parker, Jr.

Miss McNair will have as her maid of honor her sister, Miss Adeline McNair and Mrs. E. W. Hunter of Sanford, N. C., another sister, will be matron of honor.

The bridesmaids will include Miss Jessie McLeod, Miss Louise Terrell, Miss Louise Jordan, all of Atlanta, and Mrs. W. C. Wood, of Richmond, Virginia.

The bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, John R. McNair.

William Blake will act as Mr. Terrell's best man.

Little Miss Betty Bell, cousin of the bride, will be flower girl, and John Thompson, little son of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Thompson, will be ring-bearer.

The groomsmen will include Adial Greer, Ralph McNair, Charles Girardeau, Kenneth Cooper and Mell Markham.

A reception at the home of the bride-elect's parents will follow the marriage service, after which Mr. Terrell and his bride will leave for a wedding trip to Havana, Cuba.

Miss Ruth Young To Wed Mr. Morton At October Ceremony

Cordial interest centers in the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Young of the engagement of their daughter, Donnie Ruth, to Vandiver Caswell Martin, Jr., the marriage to be solemnized in October at the home of the bride's parents, on Wilton drive in Decatur.

Miss Young possesses a charming personality as well as unusual beauty, and has endeared herself to countless friends, who regret that her marriage will take her away from Atlanta.

She was graduated from Fulton High school and continued her studies at Peabody college, in Nashville, Tenn., and has been a popular teacher in the Fulton county system.

Mr. Martin is a young man of sterling qualities and has achieved success in his chosen line of business.

Miss Davis Weds W. W. Parker.

Vienna, Ga., October 2.—The wedding of Miss Louise Davis, of Vienna, Ga., and W. W. Parker, of Umatilla, Fla., was solemnized at the home of the bride at the Hotel Virginia, Sunday morning, September 12.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. W. Tippett, of Vienna.

First to enter was little Miss Marjorie Butler, who acted as the flower girl. Little Miss Mamie Helen Butler carried the ring in the heart of a lily.

The maid of honor was Miss Mildred Bradshaw, of Boston, who wore a chanel red satin crepe.

The bride and groom entered together and joined the attendants at the altar. The bride was lovely in a going-away frock of black frosted satin and flesh georgette, designed on simple lines. Her hat and accessories were also of black. She carried a bride's bouquet of Opehlia roses showered with valley lilies.

After the ceremony the bride and groom left for Umatilla where they will make their home.

Watches Worthy of Substantial Men

The beauty of a watch is of equal importance with its accuracy. It is one of the few personal adornments a man may wear in good taste. A watch should possess a full meed of artistry.

The personality of many of Atlanta's worthiest citizens is expressed in the art of Freeman watches—just as the accuracy of these watches guides them in their daily movements.

The Differences Between Princess Royal And Ohter Silk Underwear

[1]—It is made of Spindrift 100% pure silk—no "weighting" or "loading"—it is as soft as chiffon yet 35% stronger than equal weight glove silk.
[2]—It is guaranteed not to shrink!
[3]—Each garment is individually cut by hand.
[4]—Each garment is full-fashioned to fit exactly all the curves of the figure without bulk or wrinkles.
[5]—Human hands cannot tear it—and unless it is torn, it cannot "run."
[6]—Embroidered silk buds at crotches and all other seam junctures doubly reinforce those points.
[7]—Shoulder straps are locked into the top silk band, so that they will not tear off.
[8]—Reinforced buttonholes on the inside of waist bands and leg bands allow elastics to be withdrawn or inserted without cutting the silk.
[9]—Straps, ruffles, etc., are finished by picot edge that always keeps its shape and gives a dainty, lace-like appearance.
[10]—Every seam is stitched with pure thread silk.

Princess Royal
Underthings Wear Three Times as Long!

NOT only will PRINCESS ROYAL Underthings wear much longer than the best glove silk underwear, but they are so exquisitely lovely—so luxuriously soft and sheer—that the most delicate evening gown is not too dainty to be worn over them!

The secret of this miracle is the wondrous new silk of which these garments are made—Spindrift.

Spindrift is a flawlessly pure silk. In spite of its remarkable fineness and elasticity, it cannot be torn by human hands—and unless it is torn, it cannot "run"!

There has never before been anything like it! It fashions the most perfect silk undergarments made today.

PRINCESS ROYAL Undergarments are guaranteed not to shrink! They are hand-cut on the form-fitting, full-fashioned principle on which fine silk stockings are made. They are doubly reinforced at all points of greatest wear.

Come to our underwear department and examine PRINCESS ROYAL Underthings for yourself. They come in flesh, rose, maize, Nile green, and orchid. Also black or white.

Payne-Hill Wedding Plans Are of Much Cordial Interest

Of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends is the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Tommie Lou Payne and Robert Alexander Hill, the marriage to be solemnized at Capitol Avenue Baptist church on Tuesday evening, October 12, at 8:30 o'clock. Miss Payne is a resident of Atlanta and is very active in religious circles, having served in a number of different organizations at Capitol Avenue church.

Mr. Hill was formerly located in Atlanta, having been connected with Swift & Co. as manager of their Atlanta branch house for a number of years. He is now connected with the Atlantic Ice and Coal company as manager of their Macon, Ga., plant. He is a Mason of high standing, a member of Yaarab Temple of the Mystic Shrine, and a member of the Kiwanis Club of Macon.

Wedding Attendants.

Miss Katie Payne, sister of the bride, will be maid of honor; Mrs. Claude H. Ethridge, matron of honor; Mrs. Ann Harwell, sister of the bride and Miss Lorena Hill, sister of the groom, will be bridesmaids. Little Louise Gibbs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Dana Gibbs, and Yvonne Crumley, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Crumley, will be flower girls. Arthur Flowers, young son of Dr. and Mrs. A. P. Flowers, will be ring-bearer.

Miss Helen Schaid will render the music, and Homer Faulkner will sing "At Dawning" and "Because."

Byron C. Kistner will serve as Mr. Hill's best man. W. B. and Bennie Hill, brothers of the groom, will be groomsmen; Charlie Hill, brother of the groom; L. H. Crumley, Murray W. Dantzler, Jr., Earnest G. Rudeseal and Claude H. Etheridge will be ushers. Dr. William Henry Major, the bride's pastor, will perform the ceremony.

Pre-Nuptial Affairs.

A series of pre-nuptial parties have been arranged honoring Miss Payne. Mrs. J. Clifford Pope and Mrs. Earnest G. Rudeseal entertained at a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Pope on Hardendorf street, Saturday afternoon, October 2. The Fidelis class of Capitol Avenue Baptist church, of which the bride is an honorary member, will entertain at a towel shower at the church Monday evening, October 4. Mrs. Byron C. Kistner will entertain a group of friends of the bride with a luncheon at her home on Peachtree road Tuesday, October 5, and a theater party in the afternoon.

Miss Mabel Ellis and other members of the Bible school class formerly taught by Miss Payne will honor her with a farewell party at the home of Miss Ellis on North Boulevard on Tuesday evening. Miss Nora King will entertain a number of friends at a theater party at the Forsyth on Thursday afternoon, October 7, honoring Miss Payne.

The junior department of Capitol Avenue Bible school, of which Miss Payne is superintendent, will honor her with a kitchen shower Thursday evening in the junior department rooms at the church. Mrs. Claude H. Ethridge will be hostess at a trousseau tea for Miss Payne at her home on Ormond street Saturday afternoon, October 9.

Miss Payne will be hostess at an informal reception at her home at 357 Ormond street Sunday afternoon, October 10.

Dr. and Mrs. A. P. Flowers will entertain the members of the wedding party and the out-of-town guests at a dinner at their home on Columbia avenue on Sunday evening, October 10. Miss Katie Payne and Mrs. Ann Harwell, sisters of the bride, will entertain the members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests at a buffet supper at the home of Mrs. W. S. Haralson, Decatur, Monday evening, October 11, following the rehearsal.

Women Voters' Convention To Meet in Savannah Oct. 28

The eighth annual convention of the Georgia League of Women Voters will be held in Savannah, October 28, 31 and many inquiries are pouring into the Atlanta league headquarters regarding the details of the convention.

As Atlanta will only be allowed 32 delegates, members planning to go are asked to notify league headquarters, Walnut 8264 as all delegates have not been selected yet.

One of the outstanding social features of the convention will be the beautiful drive from Savannah to the Tybee home of Mrs. Frank McIntire, first vice president of the Georgia league, who will entertain the guests at an oyster roast. Other social functions planned include a banquet, two receptions, and two luncheons. A program will be published in the October issue of The Pilgrim.

Atlanta league headquarters announce that the railroad fare from Atlanta to Savannah is only $10.05. If one leaves at night the lower berth will be $3.75 and an upper berth is $3.00. Two trains leave Atlanta daily for Savannah, one leaving at 7:45 o'clock in the morning, and arriving there at 6:55 o'clock, and the second leaving here at 9:40 evening, arriving there at 8:30 the next morning.

Convention headquarters will be held in the De Soto hotel and all meetings will be held there. A special rate has been given by the hotel for convention guests enabling one to get a single room and bath for $3.50 per day or to share a double room and bath at $3.00 per day.

Among the officers of the Atlanta league planning to attend are: Mrs. R. L. Turman, president; Mrs. J. P. Billups, first vice president; Mrs. Fred Hodgson, second vice president; Miss Eleonore Raoul, treasurer; Mrs. Palmer Johnson, secretary; Mrs. Dan C. Lyle, state president; Mrs. Pearl Mozely Gay, state chairman of legislation.

The board of directors of the Atlanta League of Women Voters will meet at league headquarters on Tuesday, October 5, at 10:30 o'clock, for their October board meeting.

In the fourth ward, the meeting was held at the home of Mrs. C. V. Hohenstein on Sixth street. Miss Lucy Nagle gave a talk on the proposed new charter for Atlanta and Mrs. Alfred Bailey spoke on the coming state convention. Mrs. Hohenstein, the hostess, gave a reading. The meeting was presided over by the ward chairman, Mrs. J. D. Evans.

The seventh ward meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Fred C. Rice, ward secretary, and she was assisted in entertaining by the ward officers, Mrs. A. L. Sloan, chairman, and Mrs. O. A. Harbin, first vice chairman. Mrs. Pearl Mozely Gay, former president of the Atlanta league and now state chairman of legislation, was guest of honor and spoke on the council manager form of government. Mrs. Gay was asked to continue her subject for the ward at its October meeting, and to go into the fullest details as this ward league is making an extensive study of the proposed new charter for Atlanta.

Results of the league's big rummage sale held at the city market on Saturday, October 2, will be announced in the October Pilgrim.

E. R. Enlow Speaks At Better Films Committee Meeting

"The slogan for the Atlanta P.-T. A. is 'One Movie a Week'—the Saturday morning matinee, as it was found following a questionnaire sent out by Chicago school principals recently, that school children attending as many as three moving pictures a week, invariably had a poor school standing," said E. R. Enlow, director of visual education for Atlanta's schools, at the monthly meeting of the better films committee at Rich's tea room on Tuesday. "In Chicago, as in Atlanta, there are regular Saturday matinees for young people, so that movie going during the week and to theaters unsupervised is not necessary."

Mr. Enlow also stated that nineteen Atlanta schools now had facilities for moving picture performances, and that during the past year one hundred and thirty performances had been given under the auspices of the P.-T. A. members of the better films, in addition to the class room films shown, and to the crowds at the Saturday matinees. It was announced that Mrs. W. L. McCalley, the new chairman for visual education, would cooperate with Mr. Enlow in his work. Lists of all feature pictures shown at the matinees during the last two years, were furnished Mrs. W. L. McCalley, by Mrs. Newton C. Wing, matinee chairman. Mr. Enlow stated that the Chronicles of America had now been secured for school use.

Another most interesting speaker was Mrs. De Los Hill, prominent musician and clubwoman of the city, who described a visit to see the first demonstration in New York city of the new invention, the Vitaphone. She saw and heard Marian Talley in Rigoletto, John Barrymore in Don Juan, Zimbalist and others, so perfectly were the action and sound synchronized.

The luncheon was presided over Tuesday by Mrs. Frank McCormack, president, and interesting reports were made by Mrs. George Price, treasurer; Miss Marianne McClellan, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. C. Decker Tebo, extension chairman, who announced several new members from various Atlanta organizations. Mrs. A. V. Toney, review chairman, reported all picture houses visited during the week, and only one harmful picture reported, necessary cuts in which were made later.

Mrs. Newton C. Wing, matinee chairman for the Saturday matinees, stated that her committee had worked all summer. She announced a brilliant fashion revue, to be given for the matinee by Mrs. Charles C. Harding, prolog chairman, with the firm of Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose company furnishing the costumes. A letter was read from Colonel Jason Joy, head of public relations department of the Will Hays organization, extending greetings, and saying that Atlanta matinee picture lists and suggestions were used by his organization with benefit to other matinee committees.

Mrs. John W. Lloyd, P.-T. A. chairman, reported an interesting P.-T. A. meeting held previously to the luncheon, with forty new members, from various schools. A. A. Jameson, second vice president, was welcomed back from his vacation. Prominent guests and members present were Mrs. Charles C. Foster, P.-T. A. council president; Mrs. J. C. Malone, Mrs. Mary Cornell Stoiber, of New York city; Mrs. T. T. Stevens, and other Better films members, forty in all.

Miss Sinclair Is Honored.

Mrs. John Dame entertained at a bridge party Saturday afternoon in honor of Miss Christine Sinclair, whose marriage to William Parsons will be an interesting event of October. The guests were Miss Sinclair, Mrs. H. MacFadyen, of Asheville, N. C.; Mrs. Malcomb Turner, Jr., Mrs. Preston Miller, Mrs. T. Stacey, Mrs Hodge Havis, Miss Patty Sinclair, Mrs. Walter Bailey, Mrs. H. Van Storey, Miss Ira McArthur, Miss Alice Douglas, Miss Florine Hunt, Mrs. Thomas Wright, Miss Margaret McAllister, Miss Edith Nelson, Miss Josephine Havis, Mrs. Hunter Moon, Miss Elizabeth Baker, Miss Nancy Tripp and Mrs. C. B. Sinclair.

Mrs. Stanley Pitcher assisted her sister in entertaining.

Metal Hats Arrive

In Allen's French Salon—Metal Hats of Ingenious Design—The Last Word of Fashion

Metal hats with cold, bright color shining through the icy gleam of silver, old gold glittering against black, metal cloths with satin—and that isn't half of the story of these captivating new metal hats.

Other new things one sees in the French Salon are fine velours in unusual shapes, lovely and silky and soft, Antelope felts in youthful effects, solid satins and satins beautifully embroidered by hand. But . . there is something new in the French Salon every day.

The Remarkable Story of the Success of La Fay Dresses

LA FAY dresses made their debut one month ago. Their success was instantaneous. The inspiring story behind this success follows:

It is interesting to know that though hundreds of new styles are created each month, but one style out of ten presented is accepted for La Fay.

Some three years ago we decided that there must be a way through which we could offer exclusively styled dresses at a moderate price without fear of having them copied in cheap and unsightly models. We immediately took the problem to the great buying organization with which we are affiliated.

The next problem to be met was the subsidizing of the finest Ateliers in America to assure finest workmanship. The twenty five years experience of our affiliated buying organization was used in securing those work shops wherein could be had only the very best of needlework.

This organization is all-powerful both in Paris and New York, because it purchases annually thirty million dollars of women's outer apparel alone. It is a buying unit without compare in size and scope. Its organization spanning two continents is the envy of all others

Every woman and miss of fashion will be deeply interested in knowing the story back of LA FAY — the revolutionizing of the style-value element in the retailing of fine dresses.

Not satisfied with the past integrity of these ateliers, and protecting ourselves for the future, we placed each one under heavy bond guaranteeing us that no original model given it for exact duplication would be available to any other organization. This assured absolute exclusive styles.

LA FAY DRESSES
$39.50

Instantly they proceeded to accomplish the task that everyone else said was impossible. It required three long years before they were satisfied that they had approached the goal as near as it is possible to approach perfection.

In addition these same ateliers are bonded to guarantee that every duplication made from the original must be precisely like the original in fabric, detail and needlework. This is a standard employed by no other retailer.

LA FAY DRESSES

First of all, they began marshalling the stellar creative geniuses both in Europe and America. In many cases they found the individuals decided upon were tied up in contracts for periods varying up to three years. Building for the future, the services of these foremost style originators were contracted to begin immediately following their respective assignments. One by one they were welded into a new designing and styling staff without a peer.

Naturally in order to protect ourselves further against flagrant piracy and unethical copying, we copyrighted the name La Fay and will prosecute any infringement to the utmost. The name La Fay is a bond in itself behind which lies the resources of a thirty million dollar purchasing organization together with the resources of this establishment. No broader assurance of exclusiveness in style and workmanship was ever offered before.

Now that the designing sources had been conquered, the question arose as to the best utilization of this fountain of genius. Thus it was decided that they would create new fashions in two distinct channels. One division would be an entirely inspirational group. It would conceive new ideas and interpretations. This provided an ever flowing stream of new modes.

Three years of untiring effort and painstaking care were required to accomplish this result. La Fay has gone beyond every pinnacle of dress value and exclusive style presentation heretofore known. But in itself it will always be improved. Perfection is never reached but it is now approached to a nearer point than ever thought possible.

The second division was to design in coordination with our own buyers and stylists. This group would take the originations of the inspirational staff and mold them in a practical way to meet the exacting requirements of the misses and women of this city. So it came that the ever important element of styling was perfected.

The most marvelous accomplishment of all is the fact that La Fay dresses both for madame and mademoiselle are retailed at one price only—$39.50. Such a convenient price, such an unusual value and such ingenious styling combine to thrill every feminine heart in this city. The success of La Fay is for you! (New Styles Weekly!)

Guests Assemble At Tea-Dance After Football Game

Members of Atlanta society assembled at the Biltmore hotel Saturday afternoon following the Tech-V. M. I. football game for the regular tea-dance which was held in the Georgian ballroom from 5 until 7 o'clock. A variety of pretty fall flowers were used throughout the room as decorations.

Miss Lula Lewis and Bryant Woosley whose marriage will take place Tuesday were honor guests in a party which G. B. Strickler and Edward Merreitt were hosts. Covers were placed for Miss Lewis, Mr. Woosley, Misses Martha Ridley, Sara Fisher and her guest, Miss Bee Sterling, of Greenville, S. C., Julianne Hagan, Pauline Lewis, Harriett Hasson, Ardis Lewis, John Lewis, Lewis Dean, Hal Smith, G. B. Strickler and Edward Merreitt.

Miss Mary Knight entertained in compliment to Miss Ethel Niall and Walter Mitchell, whose marriage will take place next week. The guests were Miss Niall, Mr. Mitchell, Miss Mary Jimmie Patillo, Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes Haverty, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Hines, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Holleran, Asby Taylor, Malcolm Barksdale and Guy Holcombe.

Moore Pearson was honor guest in a party, and was one of the most popular figures present, having just recovered from a serious illness.

Mrs. E. M. Hulme, of Washington, D. C., had as her guests Mrs. Johnson Hagood and Mrs. E. E. Haskell, of Fort McPherson; Mrs. Robert Alston, Mrs. Stacy E. Hill and Miss Nan duBignon.

School News Notes.

The year 1926-27 is well under way at North Avenue Presbyterian school, with the largest enrollment in its history. The initiation party took place Friday afternoon. The sophomores, led by their chairman, Mary Dell Carson, were hostesses to the freshmen and other new girls.

On Tuesday elections were held for student body officers and for the Annual staff. The green ticket won—student president, Kathryn Hoover; vice president, Serena Riser; treasurer, Carolyn Greenfield; secretary, Judy Morgan; editor-in-chief of Napsonian '27, Martha Crawford; business manager, Thelma Firestone; literary editor, Sara Lane Smith; assistant business manager, Ida Belle Roberts; assistant literary editor, Elizabeth Howard; art editor, Nancy Dowling; alumnae editor, Nell Bailes.

The classes have been organized and are ready for work. The senior class ofifcers are: President, Lillian Conine; vice president, Sophie Lou Meakin; secretary, Annie B. Fletcher; treasurer, Mary Preacher. Junior class officers are: President, Zeddie Lee Harrison; vice president, Imogene Hudson; secretary, Jane Brownlee; treasurer, Marie Shaw. The sophomore class chose: President, Sara Croft Smith; vice president, Charlotte Teasley; secretary, Frances Wimbish; treasurer, Margaret Rector. Freshman class officers are: President, Harriet Humphreys; vice president, Belle Porter; secretary, Aline Fraser; treasurer, Margaret Fuller.

At a meeting of the boarding department, Katharine Morrow was chosen chairman of the activities of that group.

The Cecilians had a meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of Zeddie Lee Harrison and chose as officers: President, Netta Russell; vice president, Eugenia Patterson; secretary, Sara Lane Smith; treasurer, Carolyn Russell.

Pi Sigma Kappa (honor society) officers are: President, Eugenia Patterson; secretary, Martha Crawford.

The school is represented by an officer in each of the city councils of the Junior Red Cross, Leah Albritton being elected secretary of the high school council, and Ellen Fleming secretary of the lower school council.

The Junior High assembly held an unusually interesting meeting Wednesday. The chief feature was a debate planned by Frances James, chairman of the debating committee. Juanita Gresham and Jean Walker won over Carolyn Dobbs and Nina Rusk. As best debater, Nina Rusk was chosen. The program closed with a violin solo by Eloise Davidson, accompanied by Alice Gray Harrison.

Miss Elizabeth Gregg, who is supervising the remodeling of the building on Auburn avenue, reports that the work is being pushed, and that it will be ready for occupancy before the last of October.

The girls from the "Residence" will go to Camp Highland for a week-end on October 9.

Mrs. Ronald Reamer, director of physical education, is at her desk now at 21 West Baker street. Those interested in swimming and gym classes may come in and meet her.

The girl reserve booth at the fair was arranged by Misses Ellen Newell and Edyth Coleman. Posters representing the purpose of the girl reserve movement adorn the walls and many things to illustrate the activities of the various groups will be found in the display.

The girls of the Bass Junior High Girl Reserve club held their first meeting last Tuesday. Officers were elected, and plans for the winter made. Miss Evelyn Wright will be the leader of this group.

The O'Keefe Girl Reserve club has begun activities for the winter. Mrs. W. R. Woodward is the leader.

The Decatur High School Girl Reserve club began activities with a chapel program. Mary Dunnaway, the president, read the Girl Reserve code and also an appropriate devotional. The vice president of the club told something of the club activities and "to prove that Girl Reserves are clever and that they exhibit rare wit on some occasions" a little playette was given.

Wednesday afternoon the Decatur girls served tea to the girls who are interested in becoming members and a large number were present. Miss Margaret Eakes is the faculty adviser and Misses Ellen Newell and Edyth Coleman are advisers also.

Thursday afternoon the Girls High club will be reorganized. All girls who are interested are invited and are asked to look for the poster announcing the place of meeting.

The Fulton High school club has been reorganized under the leadership of Miss Isabel Dew. The Commercial High school group has been reorganizd also.

All girls of Hoke Smith Junior high school who are interested in having a Girl Reserve club are asked to stay after school Wednesday and meet Miss Ezell, who will help them organize a club.

Miss Muriel Pierce Celebrates Birthday.

Miss Muriel Pierce was guest of honor at a matinee party at the Howard theater Saturday afternoon, given by her mother, Mrs. Allen M. Pierce, the occasion being the celebration of her thirteenth birthday

Thirteen guests were entetrained and tea was served following the performance. Mrs. Pierce was assisted in entertaining by Miss Dorothy Brogdon.

The following guests were present: Misses St. Juligne Pringle, Dorothy Brumby, Margaret Cheshire, Tulula Carson, Gertrude Askew, Margaret Morgan, Sarah Cooper, Dorothy Stringer, Katherine Scott and Louise Pierce.

Miss Mae Pinson Weds Paul E. Whitehead.

The following excerpt was taken from "The Greenwood Journal," Greenwood, S. C.

"A wedding characterized by exquisite beauty was solemnized Wednesday afternoon, September 22, at 6:30 o'clock at Main Street Methodist church, Greenwood, S. C., when Miss Mae Pinson, formerly of Honea Path, S. C., became the bride of Paul Exum Whitehead, of Durham, N. C.

"The wedding music was rendered by Mrs. Bernard Bailey, organist, Miss Nelle Perry, violinist, and Miss Jennie Engles, vocalist.

"There were no attendants. The bride and bridegroom entered together from the pastor's study, taking their places before the altar where they were joined in marriage by Dr. B. R. Turnipseed, president of Lanier college.

"The bride, a petite brunette, was never more charming than she appeared on this occasion, gowned in an afternoon imported French model of light blue crepe romaine and heavy Spanish lace with gold trimming. Her lovely picture hat was worn Gainsborough fashion and other accessories were harmonious in tine and effect. She carried an old-fashioned showered bouquet of pink roses and lilies of the valley.

"Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead left by motor for a wedding trip through the north taking in the sesqui-centennial exposition at Philadelphia after which they will visit friends in New York city and spend some time in Canada.

"The bride's traveling dress was of navy blue velvet and crepe remaine with small chic hat and other accessories to blend. Mrs. Whithead is a very talented and accomplished young woman of unusually attractive personality and charming disposition. She is a graduate of Winthrop college and has scores of friends throughout this state as well as in North Carolina, having made the latter her home for the past five years.

"Mr. Whitehead is a man of strong character and business ability, having been the senior member of the firm of Whitehead & Springs, of Smithfield, N. C., for the past seven years. He is at present associated with the Durham Building and Fuel corporation of Durham, N. C.

"After an extended bridal tour Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead will make their home in Durham, N. C."

Miss Ewing and Dr. Jackson Wed At Beautiful Church Ceremony

Exquisite beauty marked the marriage of Miss Virginia Ewing and Dr. Zach W. Jackson, which was solemnized Saturday at high noon at the Druid Hills Methodist church. The Rev. Dr. J. W. Quillian, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends and Miss Ethel Beyer, organist, rendered a program of pre-nuptial music during the assembling of the guests and prior to the entrance of the wedding party Mrs. James Ison sang "O Promise Me."

The pulpit was banked with palms, ferns, smilax and foliage plants. Floor baskets of huge pink dahlias were arranged at intervals alternating with cathedral candelabra holding white burning tapers. A large basket of pink dahlias adorned the altar, while garlands of smilax, studded with clusters of pink dahlias, ornamented the chancel rail. Bouquets of pink dahlias, tied with pink satin ribbon, marked the pews reserved for members of the families. The ushers included Morris Ewing, J. H. Ewing, Jr., Charles Ewing and Herbert Miles. The wedding march from "Lohengrin" announced the approach of the bridal party, while soft organ music was played during the marriage service.

First to enter were the two ribbon bearers, Misses Martha and Lucia Ewing. They wore dainty frocks of pink chiffon trimmed with narrow pink silk taffeta ruffles and wore small shoulder bouquets of pink roses and valley lilies.

The junior bridesmaids, Misses Margaret King and Dorothy Ewing, entered next, wearing chiffon frocks veiling pink satin, the chiffon shading from a rose pink to a delicate flesh color. They were fashioned with close fitting bodices and full skirts and their hats were wide-brimmed models of black velvet, faced with rose pink velvet and adorned with pink gardenias. They carried bouquets of pastel shaded flowers tied with ribbons to match their costumes.

Mrs. Herbert Miles, matron of honor, entered alone and was a beautiful figure wearing a gown of rose colored satin and georgette crepe fashioned with the modish dolman sleeves. Her hat was a picture model of black velvet trimmed with a handsome rhinestone buckle and she carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and valley lilies.

Preceding the bride was the little flower girl, Miss Barton Jackson. She wore a frock of pink chiffon and carried a basket of pink rosebuds and valley lilies.

The bride entered with her uncle, Jones Henderson Ewing, by whom she was given in marriage. She was a radiant figure wearing a costume of Valencia blue chiffon velvet. The dress was fashioned in a coat effect, the front being held by small silver buckles. A short graceful cape of the velvet was attached to the shoulders in the back, the cape faced with chiffon in a matching shade and embroidered in pastel flowers. The cuffs and collar were of silver lace, this same lovely lace forming a vest effect in the front. She wore a smart hat of velvet to match her costume, the hat being stitched with silver threads and adorned by a crystal ornament of grapes. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies. The groom and his brother, Bush Jackson, of Charlotte, N. C., who acted as best man, joined the bride and her uncle at the altar.

Mrs. Jones Henderson Ewing, the bride's aunt, wore a handsome gown of hunter's green crepe back satin with a hat of velvet to match. Her shoulder bouquet was of pink roses and valley lilies. Mrs. Z. F. Jackson, of Winder, Ga., the groom's mother, was gowned in black satin and she wore a hat of black velvet trimmed with black lace. Her shoulder bouquet was of orchids and valley lilies.

Following the marriage service, Dr. Jackson and his bride left for a wedding trip by motor to Asheville, N. C. On their return they will make their home in the St. Augustine apartments on Ponce de Leon avenue.

Mrs. Helbig Honored At Club Breakfast By Buckeye Club

The Buckeye Woman's club opened its 1926-1927 season by giving a club breakfast Tuesday at 1 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's club in honor of Mrs. Edwin M. Helbig, who began her seventh year as president of the club. Mrs. W. W. Alexander was chairman, and was assisted by Mrs. Hugh Chandler.

Mrs. Helbig's place at the exquisitely appointed table was marked with a corsage of Ophelia roses and a booklet containing good wishes from the club and was signed by those present after singing of the old song, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith was a special guest and addressed the members of the club and paid tribute to the president of the organization.

Mrs. W. W. Alexander acted as toastmistress and introduced Mrs. Ben Hill Smith, who delighted the guests with several vocal selections. She was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. G. G. Townley. The response to roll call was "An Experience of the Summer."

Mrs. R. T. Sims, accompanied by Mrs. S. G. Hunter, added the patriotic touch by her vocal rendition of "Hats Off to the Flag."

Mrs. D. O. Smith, historian of the club, offered a toast to the guest of honor, Mrs. Helbig. The toast was some of Mrs. Smith's original verse. Mrs. Helbig responded by giving as a toast a clever recipe of "The Ideal Club."

Those present were: Mrs. Price-Smith, Mrs. C. N. Weems, Mrs. W. W. Alexander, Mrs. D. O. Smith, Mrs. T. W. McAllister, Mrs. W. R. Wilson, Mrs. C. E. Folsom, Mrs. W. B. Swan, Mrs. H. C. Chandler, Mrs. G. W. McCarty, Mrs. J. G. Englehart, Mrs. R. S. King, Mrs. L. M. Mourv, Mrs. J. L. Murphy, Mrs. E. L. McKibben, Mrs. S. G. Hunter, Miss Rose Hunter, Mrs. Rose Shoemaker, Mrs. J. E. Whiteman, Mrs. E. S. Norton, Mrs. E. R. Lowry, Mrs. W. Earl Quillian, Mrs. Lake Quillian, Mrs. F. W. Schanck, Mrs. Ben Hill Smith and Mrs. G. G. Townley.

The first regular meeting of the club will be held on the fourth Tuesday in October. Mrs. Helbig and her mother, Mrs. Rose Shoemaker, who now reside at No. 25 Avery drive, will be the hostesses.

Fulton Chapter, U. D. C., Celebration Exercises.

Special exercises commemorating the birthday of Admiral Semmes, of the Confederate navy, were held by Fulton chapter, U. D. C., Monday afternoon in Piedmont hotel. A large and enthusiastic audience was present, consisting mainly of Confederate veterans and world war soldiers.

Appropriate music was furnished for the occasion by Miss Mamie Florence, accompanied by Mrs. McCreary on the piano. "Dixie" was rendered and Dr. T. R. Kendall delivered the invocation.

Mrs. W. E. Lomax, first vice president, presided for the president, Mrs. C. L. Anderson, who was absent on account of illness, and extended greetings to the soldiers. Mrs. Lomax delivered nine certificates of membership, with a short address of welcome to the new members.

Mrs. E B. Williams, custodian of crosses, was introduced, and after a few remarks, introduced Hon. Frank Hooper, Jr., speaker of the afternoon, who made an able and interesting speech. Encores were given several times by the veterans who all respect and honor Mr. Hooper.

Thomas H. Goodwin and Hugh B. Cobb were introduced and made reponses. Both told of the record of their Confederate ancestors, which was greatly appreciated. Mrs. Williams presented five crosses of honor to Confederate veterans or their descendants and thirteen crosses of service to world war soldiers, who are descendants of Confederate veterans, with appropriate remarks.

Ohio Millionairess To Attend Restaurant Convention Here

Mrs. H. E. Talbott, of Dayton, Ohio, who will be a prominent delegate to the eighth annual convention of the American Restaurant association held in Atlanta next week. She is a millionairess, and includes the operation of high-class restaurants among her fads and fancies, and will speak at the auditorium Wednesday morning, October 6.

Mrs. H. E. Talbott, Dayton, Ohio, will receive considerable social attention when she comes to Atlanta next week to participate in the eighth annual convention of the National Restaurant association. She will speak at the Auditorium-Armory on Wednesday morning, October 6, on the subject "Atmosphere and Refinement in Restaurant Operation."

Mrs. Talbott is known as the woman of millions who includes the operation of a high-class restaurant among her fads and activities. Her other interests include a series of popular-priced concerts for her home city and the maintenance of the famous Westminster choir which, like other examples of high-class music, operates at an annual deficit, most of which Mrs. Talbott meets with her personal check.

The daughter of an early congressman from southwestern Ohio, Mrs. Talbott has always devoted much of her life to social activities, which, however, did not prevent an active home life and the rearing of a large family, all of whom have happily and successfully married.

Mrs. Talbott is the widow of the late Colonel Talbott, a contractor of national reputation. She is a confirmed traveler and maintains a home in Florida. Her home in Dayton is one of the show places in a city known for its show places, and when not living in either one of these places Mrs. Talbott is wandering somewhere in the United States, Europe or Asia, usually accompanied by several of her grandchildren.

Mrs. Talbott insists on her ideals even at a financial sacrifice, and operated her restaurant at a loss for several years before her home community appreciated it and turned it into a profitable venture.

Woman's Bible Class To Study "Prophets."

The Halliday Bible class for young women of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church has taken up the study of the minor prophets. Under the efficient leadership of W. R. Halliday, the teacher, the young women of this class are making an intensive study of the Bible, having recently completed the historical part of the Old Testament.

The class contributes to a scholarship fund which is used to help worthy girls secure a college education.

An invitation is extended to any young woman who is interested in this line of work to become a member of the class.

The officers of the class are: President, Miss Eloise Slaton; vice president, Miss Alta Drake; secretary, Miss Clara Belle Lemke; treasurer, Miss Fern Thompson.

Miss Edna Thompson To Be Honored At Party Series

A number of pre-nuptial parties have been planned in honor of Miss Edna Emma Thompson, whose marriage to Clarence Van Orden will be an interesting event of October.

Miss Mary Arnold entertained at a lovely shower Saturday afternoon at her home on Capitol avenue, the color scheme of yellow and white being carried out. A flower contest was enjoyed, Miss Esther Stanley winning top prize and Miss Thompson consolation. Also a motor romance contest was played in which Mrs. A. M. Thompson, mother of the bride-elect, won top prize and Mrs. Clarence Haynie consolation. Later the bride-elect was carried into an adjoining room, where she was showered with many beautiful gifts taken from a large yellow parasol. The hostess' gift to the bride-elect was an autograph book, in which best wishes were written by the guests. Then followed a lovely ice course in the dining room, while the wedding march was being played by Miss Kathleen Dougherty. The table was beautifully decorated in yellow and white with miniature bride and groom adorning the center, favors being small miniature parasols containing mints.

Mrs. Theron Sewell will be hostess at a linen shower on October 2.

Miss Margaret Mayes will entertain at a miscellaneous shower on October 9.

Monday evening, October 18, the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. A M. Thompson, will entertain at a trousseau tea.

Mrs. W. G. Chamberlain, Jr., aunt of the bride-elect, will entertain at a luncheon and theater party at a later date.

Miss Cowan Is Feted Bride-Elect.

Miss Sarah Will Cowan, of Conyers, a charming bride-to-be of this month, was the honor guest at a shower-tea Saturday afternoon from 5 to 6, at which Mrs. A. Y. Lester and Mrs. Olivia LeGette were hostesses at the home of Mrs. Lester on Colland circle, Inman Park.

Receiving with the bride-elect and her hostess were a group of lovely young girls composing the bridal party, Misses Margaret Dean, Mary Sue Pitts, Alpha Seamans Langford, Jenny Lind Duvall and Carolyn Pierce.

The bride-elect was gowned in orchid taffeta, made bouffant and heavily beaded.

Miss Cowan will be the honor guest at a number of other parties before her marriage the latter part of October.

East Point Club Gives Literary Program.

The East Point Woman's club held its first literary meeting of the season last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. James T. McGee. Quite a large number of members were present and a most interesting program was carried out.

Mrs. R. S. Thompson, Miss Lillian Middlebrooks and Rev. E. W. Jones gave instructive discussions on three vital phases of education.

Mrs. F. A. Perry rendered several musical numbers.

A pleasing feature of the program was the readings given by Miss Manora Conley, of College Park; Mrs. J. T. Livsey and Phillip Manning.

Mrs. Alfred Kuppinger gave a very interesting talk on the origin and purpose of For-Get-Me-Not day.

Misses Louise Perry and Manora Conley won the prize in a contest held by Mrs. Ed L. Humphreys, chairman of the program committee.

At the close of the meeting Mrs. P. M. Gowder and Mrs. T. T. Livsey served punch and sandwiches.

Yaarab Temple Announces Plans for Gay Social Season

Yaarab temple's social season will open with a brilliant ball at the Druid Hills Golf club Friday night, October 8. This announcement was made by J. Sherrard Kennedy, chairman of the Shrine dance committee, at a dinner meeting of the committee with Thomas C. Law, illustrious potentate of Yaarab temple.

Announcement was also made that the Shriners would hold formal dances every three weeks during the approaching season; that all dances would be held at the Druid Hills club and that each dance would be given on Friday night. The dates of these dances were announced as October 8 and 29, November 12, December 3 and 24 and January 14.

The second dance of the series will be the Halloween ball on October 29, and will be a fancy dress affair. A dinner-dance will be given on November 12; the past potentates' dance on December 3, a Christmas frolic on Christmas eve night and the potentate's ball on January 14.

Marvyn Conway, vice chairman of the commitee, who with William Bearden will serve as a subcommittee on music, announces that the best orchestras obtainable in the city will be engaged for each of the dances.

All dances will be strictly formal, except the Halloween ball, and will be open only to Shriners and their friends. Each Shriner attending must exhibit a 1926 card at the door.

Vaudevile stunts will be staged during the intermission at each of the dances. R. O. Estes was appointed chairman of the refreshment committee and R. D. Bame was named secretary-treasurer of the dance committee.

Those attending the meeting, which was held in the Atlanta Athletic club, were: Potentate Thomas C. Law, Past Potentate W. Bayne Gibson, Recorder George E. Argard, J. "Cooperation" Is Stressed By Mrs. Farmer in Club Speech

"Cooperation, not conflict, is the answer to many problems that have confronted the people of all ages and still stand unsolved," said Mrs. Farmer when she spoke before the West Point Woman's club last week on the "Cooperation of City and Rural Clubs."

"A coordination of effort of seemingly antagonistic forces and a realization that the interests of all of us are so interwoven with those of our fellow beings as to be inseparable. For many years efforts have been made by men to bring about a knowledge of interdependence of town and country and a closer cooperation between them and now the women have undertaken it through that source which is common to us all, the home.

"The General Federation of Women's Clubs in concentrating on the American home department, with particular attention to that division which has for its object the cooperation of town and country women, the division of home demonstration and the committee of rural organization, which is combined in Georgia. Mrs. Sherman, general federation president, wants to establish a standard American home; she believes the place to do this is on the farm, and she is calling on the club women of America to help the country woman in her endeavor to make of her home the place where home making is not drudgery and a place where the boys and girls will want to remain," said the speaker.

Farm Woman's Income.

"The farm woman is the only woman who can produce an income as a part of her home making. In the town and city the woman's work is of her home a thing apart and she goes forth as does her husband, if she is also a bread winner. But the country woman has a productive industry in the by-products and the surplus of her home making. The town woman can help her find a market for her products and this has been worked out successfully in West Virginia, where thrift shops, open certain days a week are maintained by the town clubs and where the wares of the country women are sold.

"One-third of the human race is now feeding the other two-thirds. Two-thirds of the population of our cities are replaced each year from the country. These figures alone should show our dependence upon the women of the farm. If this great nursery of the human race is to be maintained, the educational and health conditions must be at least equal to those of the town. The city club woman can help her sister in the country to secure for herself, through proper legislation or other means, these advantages that will make her home a place in which to live and not to leave at the first opportunity.

"The club woman in the small town is the connecting link between the rural woman and the woman in the larger cities and with her closer contact has a greater opportunity to bring about the cooperation of the home maker on the farm and in the city and town. But the city woman also has her share in this as has been demonstrated in Augusta by the splendid aid the Woman's club gives the home demonstration agent. The Atlanta Woman's club has started work in Fulton county that promises marked results.

Federation Hopes.

"The Georgia federation hopes to see in every rural section an organized body of women, whether federated or not, working with the women in the nearest town for the establishment of a closer relation, a better understanding, and a coordination of effort. And all these women have as an ideal, that home portrayed by Grace Noll Crowell.

"What makes a home?
I asked my little boy.
And this is what he said:
'You, mother, and when father comes,
Our table set all shiny,
And my bed;
I think its home.
Because we love each other.'
You who are old and wise,
What would you say
If you were asked the question?
Tell me, pray,
And simply,
As a little child, the old
Wise ones can answer nothing more;
A man, a woman, and a child;
Their love
Warm as the gold hearthfire
Along the floor;
A table, and a lamp for light,
And smooth white beds at night;
Only the old, sweet, fundamental things.
And long ago I learned
Home may be near, home may be far,
But it is anywhere that love
And a few plain household treasures are."

Mrs. Alden Heads Literary Department Of Decatur Club

Mrs. William Alden was elected chairman of the literary department of the Decatur Woman's club at a meeting held last Tuesday at the clubhouse on Ponce de Leon avenue. The other officers include Mrs. W. J. Sayward, co-chairman, and Mrs. W. D. Hoyt, secretary. Mrs. Roy Jones, president of the club, presided over the meeting.

Mrs. Cole Jones, Mrs. R. T. Gillespie, Mrs. Frank Gooding and Mrs. S. J. Ramage were requested to bring to the next meeting a number of books so that the course for the year might be decided upon. A meeting will be called for Wednesday, October 6, at 10 o'clock at the clubhouse. All members of the D. W. C. desiring to join this department are urged to be present.

West End Club To Petition Council To Build Library

The West End Woman's club will petition council to build a public library for that section of the city, utilizing the city's building lot on Gordon street, the city having already agreed to make adequate appropriation for a public library for the West End section. The club also went on record as indorsing other improvements presented in six other resolutions the text of which included: Bus line from West End to Girls' High school; clean sidewalks; opening Oglethorpe avenue one block from Lee street to Whitehall thus relieving traffic at Lee and Gordon; widening Whitehall street from Forsyth to the Central of Georgia railway crossing; traffic underpass at Willingham's; widening and paving Chapel street, paving Greensferry avenue thereby making a straight thoroughfare from the terminal station to West End, which would relieve traffic.

These resolutions were drafted by Mrs. C. F. Cole and presented to the club by Mrs. Luther Still, chairman of the resolutions committee, at the regular business meeting of the club, held last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. C. M. Settles, on Cascade avenue.

Mrs. Julius Spier, chairman of the hospital committee, reported 3,378 bandages folded at Grady hospital, and a number of flowers carried to the different wards. This committee meets each Friday morning at the hospital.

During the month of September, 230 magazines were collected and distributed to jails, hospitals and convict camps by the library chairman, Mrs. A. B. Thompson. This committee is formed of the following ladies: Mrs. A. B. Thompson, Mrs. C. F. Cole, Mrs. H. W. Gullatt, Mrs. J. H. Legien, Mrs. W. N. Ponder, Mrs. S. L. Grant, and Miss Gussie Eberhardt.

Mrs. J. S. Nunnally, gave an interesting report of the work accomplished by the child's welfare committee, and announced that this committee would spend the day at the Atlanta Child's Home and sew, next Tuesday.

Mrs. Charles R. Cunningham gave a report of her work as chairman of "Forget-Me-Not day," September 25. With the cooperation of her committee $101 was collected to go toward this worthy cause.

All club members and their friends are asked to visit the West End Woman's club booth at the Southeastern fair, which is very attractive and will be well worth while. Many lovely hand-made articles, as well as canned goods, art, cakes, bread, candies, will be on display, all made by the members of the club. Mrs. O. J. Huie is the chairman of arrangements with the following co-chairmen: Mrs. J. P. Withers, fancy work; Mrs. H. W. Wilder, baking; Mrs. J. J. Edwards, art, and Mrs. George Grant, canned goods and candies.

Following the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed, with a delightful program furnished by the hostess.

Mrs. Chester Johnson, president, announced that the next regular business meeting would be held at the home of Mrs. W. C. Griffith and Mrs. Charles Fife, 1355 Lucile avenue, October 13.

Jewish Woman's Club To Celebrate Eighth Anniversary Tuesday

The Jewish Woman's club will celebrate its eighth anniversary at the club house, Tuesday evening, October 5, at 8 o'clock. A surprise program has been arranged.

More than eight years ago a number of prominent Jewish young ladies were bidden to the alliance by the late Miss Melanie Feibelman, to form a club which should have for its object mutual pleasure and improvement. Plans were formulated to have classes and clubs, dances and theatricals, outings and socials. The club was organized under the name of the Young Women's Hebrew association and Mrs. Victor H. Kreigshaber was elected president and has been the club's guiding star during its eight years of existence.

In 1918 through its president the club was the recipient of a tract of land for a camp site. The camp was named Camp Victor in honor of its donor and has been a great source of advantage to its members.

In December, 1924, the Y. W. H. A. was asked by the Beth Israel congregation to take over the building located on the corner of Washington and Clark streets, which has since been remodeled into a beautiful auditorium with a spacious stage for theatricals, gymnasium, domestic science kitchen and banquet hall.

In February, 1926, the membership thought it advisable to change the name of the organization in order to have a broader field of activity. The charter was amended and the club took on its present name, The Jewish Woman's club.

St. Philip's Restaurant To Open Monday.

Announce a 15-Day Selling Plan That Places Fine Furniture Within Reach of All Lovers of Better Homes

In putting the following plan into effect, we believe we have devised an arrangement that will be of untold financial assistance to all home-lovers whose tastes and inclinations are for the better and more beautiful type of home furnishings but who heretofore have felt that it was beyond their income.

The plan in a nut-shell is this: Select any living room, dining room or bedroom suite in our display, and if the price is $175 to $250 we will divide the purchase price into 14 equal monthly payments for you. If the price is $250 or more we will divide the purchase price into 18 equal monthly payments for you. This means that on the 14-month plan your cash payment will be one-fourteenth of the price, and on the 18-month plan your cash payment will be one-eighteenth of the price.

Here's an example: Suppose you select a suite amounting to $210. You would pay $15 cash and $15 a month for 10 months. Or suppose you select a suite that amounts to $450. Your cash payment would be $25 and balance $25 monthly for 18 months.

Don't Miss Today's Window Display

Silk Velvets

Velvets—silky, supple, soft-pile velvets—will always be the stylists' devotion for the design of the dress of splendor. Today a new note of caste is reflected in the beautiful chiffon velvets that Paris says is the correct vogue, that New York accepts with distinct approval, and that Atlanta women have received with enthusiasm. The quality, beauty and grandeur of former velvets have been perfected with a richness, softness and lightness that affords a luxurious draping effect for street, dinner, evening, formal and demi-formal wear.

They are shown at Keely's in a host of newest colors, including Jungle, Chanel, Valencia and plenty of Black. Widths are 40 to 41½ inches. Prices

$6.50 to $13.50

New Velveteens

Of equal favor but in a less expensive range are the new velveteens. Their softness of construction and beauty of finish are at once appealing. The colors, too, are rich, and include all the leading shades so popular for fall. We are showing the famous A. W. B. Boulevards, a quality of velveteen generally conceded to be the finest, and surely the choice of makers of the smarter gowns. The pile is fast, the colors are fast and they have Lyons finish that is characteristic of the finer velvets.

A new shipment of velveteen has just arrived and includes some dainty figured pieces of conservative design ideal for dress and dress trimming.

Velveteens are 36 inches wide and priced

$2.95 and $3.95

Dramatic Reader Will Open Atlanta Drama League Season

Mrs. Ten Eyck Brown, the popular president of the Atlanta Drama league, announces the opening of the drama season Tuesday afternoon, October 19, with Bernard Czold, dramatic reader and director of the Little Theater guild, of Birmingham, Ala. Mr. Czold will read at this time one of Eugene O'Neal's newest plays, "The Great God Brown." The meeting will be held at the Atlanta Woman's club.

The second artist to appear on the program of the Drama league will be Mrs. Benton McMillan, wife of the former governor of Tennessee, who was the charming guest of the Drama league last season, when she delighted the members with one of her favorite readings. She will give to the Atlanta league, on October 26, a reading of the attractive Spanish play, "Daniela," by Guimera.

Professor Thomas H. English will give a series of lectures on the different phases of drama, during the month of November. In January, the league will present the well-known character reader, Beatrice Horford, who will give several of her famous sketches.

Other artists of note have been discussed and those chosen as very attractive members are Dr. William Lyon Phelps, and Schnitzler, who hopes to visit America this winter and may have a part on the Atlanta league program. One regular meeting of the Drama league will be held each month at the Atlanta Woman's club and artists meetings, as the engagements may be made.

Those wishing to join the league will please send in their names to the secretary, Mrs. Marvin Perry, and she will send out cards.

News Notes of Agnes Scott College.

Agnes Scott opened her doors last week to some hundred freshmen. The enrollment of 550 boarders and day students surpasses that of any previous year. In addition to more than a hundred freshmen, there are a number of new students in the upper classes.

Eight new members have been added to the faculty staff during the summer months. Henry A. Roberts, professor of mathematics; Miss Mary Westall, assistant professor in botany; Miss Gladys Freed, assistant in Latin and Greek; Miss Llewellyn Wilburn, associate professor in physical education in the absence of Miss Isabel Randolph; Miss Vivian Little, acting instructor in French in the absence of Miss Margaret Bland; Miss Janet Preston, instructor in English while Miss Emma Laney is on leave of absence; Miss Leslie J. Gaylord, associate professor of mathematics.

"Grandmothers' Party."

One hundred and fifty freshmen dressed as little children were taken to a grandmothers' party Saturday night. The older students were the grandmothers. Mrs. Alma Sydenstricker, head of the Bible department and a real grandmother, told stories, and Miss Martha Johnson sang nursery rhymes.

October 9 at Agnes Scott is stunt night, at which time the freshmen and sophomores put on competitive stunts. The freshmen recently elected Miss Margaret Armstrong, of Suchowfu, China, as temporary president to lead them through the stunts. Miss Armstrong is the daughter of one of the Presbyterian missionaries and she came from China only a few weeks ago to enter Agnes Scott. Atlantans are invited.

Wedding Bells Ring in Griffin.

Griffin, Ga., October 2.—The marriage of Miss Annie Gossett and Willard Coggins was solemnized Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Cull, on West Popular street, the Rev. Mr. Cull officiating in the presence of the immediate families of the couple. The bride was lovely in a becoming traveling suit with a small hat and accessories to match. Her corsage was of sweetheart roses and ferns.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Coggins left for their wedding trip, after which they will be at home in Griffin.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hancox, of Griffin, announce the marriage of their daughter, Jack Leo, and Ernest Sherman, of Chicago, Ill. The young couple motored to Anniston, Ala., and were quietly married Thursday evening. The bride, a beautiful brunette, was lovely in a modish gown of black satin trimmed with red and worn with a black moire hat, hand painted.

After the wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman will go to California to make their home.

A wedding of Saturday was that of Miss Flossie Merritt and Buford Wells, of Experiment, which took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Thaxton, on North Eighth street. The ceremony was performed at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon by the Rev. Mr. Thaxton. The lovely bride wore a chic model of tan satin with hat, hose and slippers to match.

Miss Edna Peeples and Marvin Foster were quietly married Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Foster went to Macon for a short wedding trip, after which they will continue to make their home in Griffin.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Ball announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Josie Ball, of Griffin, to Clarence Smith, of Calhoun, Ga., which took place September 10. The young couple motored to Center, Ala., where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. T. Chestnut.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith will make their home in Atlanta.

Girl Scout Workers Personnel Is Announced by Mrs. Holland

Mrs. Frank D. Holland, commissioner of the Atlanta Girl Scouts, has announced the official personnel of the local Girl Scout workers for the season of 1926-7. "It is with great pleasure," said Mrs. Holland Saturday at headquarters, "that so many names of Atlanta girls who have grown up in the scout work and are for the first time promoted to leaders are included in the list. These girls have been trained in scouting for the past five years under both local and national directors, and we are expecting outstanding work from them."

In outlining the season program, Miss Jane Smith, assistant local director, has set a minimum standard that each troop is asked to comply with. The principal points of the requirements are as follows:

1. Every girl registered in five weeks. 2. Every troop with at least one good song and yell. 3. Every troop with at least one simple dramatization. 4. One visitor to give a 15-minute inspirational talk. 5. One hike. 6. Every girl passed part of some test. 7. Every patrol total 25 hours of home service and 5 hours of community service. 8. Sixty per cent subscribers for the American Girl Magazine.

Troop Leaders.

The following leaders and their troops are announced by Mrs. Holland: Troop No. 12, Miss Marian Woodward, captain, volunteers as lieutenants Miss Josephine Newbury, Miss Ann Wynne Fleming, Miss Virginia Heard; Troop No. 18, Mrs. Carl Karston, captain, offers for lieutenants Edna Karston, Rose Sanders, Louise McCoy and Josephine Polson; Miss Betsy Smith, Troop No. 20, has been trained for leadership by the captain, Mrs. C. V. Logan, and is now acting as lieutenant of the troop.

Miss Maurine Faulkner, one of the first scouts in the city, has developed into an experienced leader, and will be the captain of Troop No. 10 at Tenth Street school.

Mrs. L. D. Hall, who comes from Memphis, Tenn., where she was a leader for a number of years, will have charge of a large group at the W. F. Slaton school.

Group Meetings.

Groups are meeting at the following places: Miss Adelaide Nelson, captain, Druid Hills Presbyterian school; Miss Ruth Kehrer, captain, Edgewood public school; Miss Beatrice Hirsch, captain, Jewish Educational alliance; Mrs. J. E. Mayo, captain, 97 Dodd avenue; Miss Elizabeth Floding, North Avenue Presbyterian school; Mrs. William F. Talley, captain, Calhoun Street school; Miss Helen G. A. Humphries, captain, Peachtree Heights school; Miss Eugenia Linch, captain, Goldsmith school; Miss Reba Jernigan, captain, Faith Street school; Mrs. H. E. Newbury, captain, Decatur; Mrs. Neely Daniel, captain, Decatur; Miss Marian McDonagh, senior scout troop, Decatur; Mrs. F. F. LaRoche, captain, East Lake.

In addition to the number of organized troops, five new troops with leaders are located at the following places and the starting the scout work: Washington seminary, Mrs. Harvey L. Parry; Spring Street school, Miss Jane Smith; Center Hill school, Miss Alma Wade; William F. Slaton school, Mrs. L. D. Hall, and Community group, West End, Mrs. A. C. Eubanks.

Miss Mary Freeman Honors Miss Cowan.

One of the loveliest social affairs of the week was the tea of Thursday afternoon when Miss Mary Freeman entertained at the East Lake Country club, in honor of Miss Sara Will Cowan, of Conyers, whose marriage to William Dean will be an event of the early fall.

Receiving with Miss Freeman were Miss Cowan, wearing a lovely fall model of vivid blue georgette with trimmings of velvet; Miss Seaman Langford, in georgette and lace of soft shades of tan and brown; Miss Virginia Skeen, in blue taffeta, and Miss Betty Cole, in taupe with rose brocade. Miss Freeman wore black velvet with side drape embroidered in pearls.

The spacious sun room where the guests were received had for its decoration a profusion of Michaelmas daisies effectively combined with marigolds of varying shades of orange and yellow. Baskets of roses were arranged about the broad terrace overlooking the lake where sandwiches and tea were served throughout the afternoon.

Assisting Miss Freeman in the entertainment of her guests, many of whom were from the college set of Agnes Scott, where both Miss Cowan and Miss Freeman were members of the graduating class of last year, were Mrs. L. O. Freeman, Miss Frances Gooch, Miss Margaret Dean, Miss Fay Rhode, Miss May Belle Barrett and Miss Christine Tremble.

Invited to meet Miss Cowan were Miss Jennie Lynn Duval, Miss Philippa Gilchrist, Miss Mildred Greenleaf, Miss Mary Sayward, Miss Frances Freeborn, Miss Lillian Clements, Miss Virginia Beales, Miss Eloise Bramlett, Miss Avis Patterson, Miss Elizabeth Mason, Miss Mildred Nesbitt, Miss Virginia Hollingsworth, Miss Estelle Bryant, Miss Florence Perkins, Miss Lillian White, Miss Virginia Skeen, Miss Betty Cole, Miss Seamans Langford, Miss Eloise Olds, Mrs. Harold Youmans, Mrs. Julian Youmans, Mrs. Alfred Drake, Mrs. Mary Goode Lester, Mrs. Paul Solomon, Miss Cleo McLaurin, Miss Sara Smith, Miss Roselyn Monerief, Miss Sarah Flake, Miss Nina Stansell, Miss Sarah White, Miss Marian Veale, Miss Mary Lambert, Miss Kathryn McConnell, Miss Margaret Rogers, Miss Hortense King, Miss Edith Edwards, Miss Margaret Lawrence, Miss Janie Culpepper, Miss Irene Singleton, Miss Elizabeth Moore, Miss Susan Pierce, Miss Mary Sue Potts, Miss Minora Conley, Miss Thelma Holt, Miss Lucile Settle, Miss Annie Parham, Miss Lillian LeConte, Miss Sara Carter, Miss Joe Houston, Miss Georgia Mac Burnes, Miss Elizabeth McCallie, Miss Martha Crowe, Miss Gene Dozier, Miss Julia Napier, Miss Louise Sherfesee, Miss Frances Chambers, Miss Polly McCleod, Miss Marian Brooks, Miss Fay Rhode, Miss Sarah Robinson, Miss Charlotte Hunter, Miss Elizabeth Scandrett, Miss Margaret Dean, Miss May Belle Barrett, Miss Christine Tremble, Miss Frances K. Gooch, Miss Sarah Bowden, Miss Lenore Lotspeich, and Mrs. Willis Moore.

Annual Meeting at West End Baptist.

An enthusiastic meeting of the W. M. S. of the West End Baptist church was held on Monday afternoon at which time the annual election of officers took place. Annual reports from the various committees were heard and there was a spirit of thanksgiving because of the good work accomplished during the year.

Stress has been laid upon mission work here at home at the Good Will centers, Orphans' Home at Hapeville and Georgia Baptist hospital, also on home missions as carried on by our home mission board, and on foreign missions in the many countries where the foreign mission board is conducting work. Ten mission study classes have been held, with over 150 taking examinations.

A hearty note of love and thanks was given to Mrs. E. J. White, the retiring president, and her able corps of officers for their untiring efforts toward making the past year one of achievement and advancement. This W. M. S. was one of 17 in Georgia to win the W. M. U. banner for making all the points on the standard of excellence.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are:

Mrs. J. H. Zackry, president; Mrs. T. H. Stewart, first vice president; Mrs. T. D. Body, second vice president; Mrs. J. P. Snelgrove, recording secretary; Mrs. Jesse Armistead, treasurer; Mrs. C. F. Cole, corresponding secretary.

Chairmen of circles are: Mrs. C. E. Johnson, Mrs. T. E. Suttles, Mrs. C. M. Settle, Mrs. C. C. Chamberlain, Mrs. J. B. Stanley, Mrs. J. J. Hemperly, Mrs. C. E. Broach, Mrs. W. D. Marshall, Mrs. W. H. S. Dorsey, Mrs. I. M. Sheffield.

The counsellor for the Y. W. A. is Mrs. Parish; for G. A., Mrs. E. J. White; for R. A., Mrs. J. B. Davies, and for Sunbeams, Mrs. G. C. Barrow.

With this fine group of women as leaders the very best year in the history of the society is confidently expected.

Brides and Brides-Elect of the Autumn Season

The lovely group above includes, at upper left, Mrs. John Bennett Ross, who before her recent marriage was Miss Maxine Adams, belle of Atlanta society. The charming figure at upper center is Miss Athleen Dickey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lon Dickey, of Fitzgerald, whose marriage to Kenneth Curtis Crouse will be an event of wide social interest, taking place Tuesday, October 5, at Trinity church in New York city. The beautiful bride at the upper right is Mrs. Otey McClellan, of New York, who until her marriage last Monday evening was Miss Frances Pardee Traylor, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Traylor. The lower figure is Miss Catherine Strode Raine, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Raine, whose engagement to Marion Noble Watson, announced today, is of great social interest to southern society. Home-Coming Tide Turns With October Calendar

By Bessie S. Stafford.

THE home-coming tide has set in with the turning of the October Calendar leaves and every day records new arrivals. Society's ranks were augmented last week by the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Little from abroad, who, after spending some months at the famous European spas, lingered sufficiently long in Paris last month to give several dinners at the Ritz-Carlton. Mrs. Henry de Give and Miss Pauline de Give were cordially welcomed after more than a year's absence from Atlanta, traveling over continental Europe and the British Isles, to take their place in the social activities of the forthcoming season. They are hostesses of great charm, and their delightful entertainments are always planned with a deal of originality.

Apropos of European travelers Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson and family are among recent arrivals from the other side, having reached New York last week. Mr. Richardson came directly to Atlanta, but Mrs. Richardson remained in New York, and will go to Catonsville, Md., to place her daughter in St. Timothy's, an institution of learning highly regarded in Mrs. Richardson's family connection, for her niece, Mrs. Frank Owens, also attended this school. Mrs. Richardson soon returns to Broadlands, her English estate on North Side drive, one of the handsomest homes in Atlanta, which has been closed during her absence.

MR. AND MRS. HARRISON JONES will move shortly into their residence, Whispering Pines, the Georgian colonial brick mansion being completed on the left of West Pace's Ferry road, just after North Shore drive crosses the fashionable boulevard, with the most attractive scalloped white picket fence enclosing the property and an envy to all beholders. They spent the summer in the comfortable log cabin built to the side and a little in the rear of the new residence, in order to be quite near and personally superintend the building of the imposing house. The tall pine trees surrounding the home whisper and sing the most tuneful songs by day and night, and far in the southernmost end of the acreage a cool spring rises to earth, its bubbling, sparkling waters winding its stream-like way all through the grounds.

THE NEXT WEDDING of importance listed on the social calendar will be Miss Margaret Young Whitman's to Albert Hall Lakin, of New York, taking place at a fashionable high noon ceremony next Saturday with the North Avenue Presbyterian church as the background and the bride-elect's only sister, Miss Elizabeth Whitman, as her maid of honor. Little Agnes Rosina White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James White, of Athens, will act as flower girl, scattering rose petals in the bride's pathway. Miss Whitman will present a lovely picture in her bridal robes of chiffon, real lace and tulle, the ivory-like costume bringing out the wonderful exotic beauty of the bride-elect, who is one of Atlanta's most charming young women and was voted the most popular girl in the Junior league two years ago.

Miss Whitman inherits much of her poise, charm and beauty from her mother, Mrs. James R. Whitman, who as the lovely Miss Emily Marshall, of Chattanooga, Tenn., was admired by a wide circle of friends, whose father was the late Warren Robert Marshall, and graduated from the Citadel, in Charleston, S. C., going forth to fight for the Confederacy, moving to Tennessee shortly after the civil war.

The groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Lakin, his cousin and best man, Marshall Warren, of Emporia, Kas., arrive Thursday for the marriage, adding their presence to the event in which many friends and relatives have a cordial interest. Mr. Lakin and his bride will leave immediately after the ceremony for New York, expecting to make their future home in the metropolis and for the present will reside at the Hotel Roosevelt before going to housekeeping later on in the winter.

WHILE WELCOMING some Atlantans, au revoir was being said to others, as Mrs. Inman Sanders and her daughter, Mrs. Catherine Sanders, left last Wednesday for New York, from whence they sailed on the steamer Volendam to reside in Paris this winter so that the younger Mrs. Sanders can pursue her art studies under masters in the French capital, for she is talented to a marked degree and has been quite busily engaged recently in turning out very artistic work.

Mrs. Sanders has a decided flair for decorative art, her taste and knowledge bringing forth splendid results in beautifying her own home, so that study in Europe will make her even more experienced in this artistic subject. No part of Europe is strange to these Atlantans, who lived abroad for many years and have made numerous trips across the Atlantic.

MISS JOSEPHINE CONNORS and her mother, Mrs. George W. Connors, have been in New York on a shopping expedition, and details of her wedding to John W. Grant, Jr., of Atlanta, have not been revealed, but the marriage will be a smart affair, taking place in Birmingham, Ala., the latter part of the month, and the elite of Atlanta society will go over for the occasion. In a long-distance chat with Miss Connors Saturday she promised the news of the bridal personnel in time for next Sunday's papers, which will be eagerly looked forward to by Atlanta's beau monde.

Personal intelligence that the bride-elect was at the Plaza hotel in New York, completing the trousseau which will later be worn when Mr. Grant brings his bride here to reside and she is entertained by Atlanta's beau monde.

MISS CATHARINE RAINE is a busy little bee these days, planning a trousseau, as her engagement is announced today to Marion Noble Watson, with but a fleeting six weeks intervening before November 22, which is set for her wedding day, and also marks the wedding anniversary of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Raine. Miss Phoebe Yancey, of Glen Ridge, N. J., and Miss Ellen Newell, who made her debut in the same circle with the bride-elect two years ago, will be bridesmaids. There is quite a note of sentiment attached to this feature, for the late Robert Yancey, of Rome, and Mrs. Alfred Newell, as Miss Ellen Hillyer, stood

Raine-Watson Engagement Is of Much Social Interest

Notable among the weddings of the early autumn will be that of Miss Catherine Strode Raine, to Marion Noble Watson, the engagement having been announced today by the lovely bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shelton Raine.

The brilliant ceremony uniting these socially prominent and popular young people takes place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raine, on West Peachtree street, with Monday evening, November 22, chosen as the date, and expressive of a bit of sentiment, as it also celebrates the anniversary of the bride-elect's parents, their marriage having been solemnized more than 20 years ago at the First Methodist church.

Miss Raine was educated at Washington seminary where she was a leader in the school activities and became a member of the Pi Pi sorority. Afterward she finished school at St. Mary's in Raleigh, N. C. For two years during her young ladyhood, she had conferred upon her the honor of being elected sponsor for the Tech Marionettes, which is regarded as quite a distinct honor in college life.

Makes Formal Debut.

She made her formal debut at a reception given by her parents, on November 22, 1924, and was among the debutante contingent of 1924-25, joining the Young Ladies' Cotillion club which was the foremost social organization formed that year. She is also a member of the Atlanta Junior league, taking part in the production of the "Follies of 1925," the invitation being extended to her to join the league as one of its most attractive and worth while members. The bride-elect is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raine, prominent in Atlanta's social annals, and Misses Edna, Dorothy, and Mamie Raine are her sisters, while Joseph S. Raine, Jr., and John Miller Raine are her brothers. She comes of most distinguished lineage as her ancestors were outstanding figures in the upbuilding of Kentucky, and the names of Hall, Miller, Strode, Raine, and Hutchison are engraved upon the early history of that state. On her maternal side, her grandparents, the late Captain and Mrs. John A. Miller, were highly esteemed and beloved citizens of Atlanta, having moved here from Kentucky soon after their marriage. Captain Miller was one of the first financiers of the city, and they both took active parts in every civic undertaking; and were identified with religious and charitable work. Mrs. Miller who was Miss Mary Hall, of Maysville, Ky., served as the first president of the Home for Incurables, and was also president of the Atlanta Needlework Guild. She assisted in raising the original fund toward building Wesley Memorial hospital, and was vice president of the woman's auxiliary. Captain Miller served in the civil war, being the youngest member of his company, the Ninth Kentucky cavalry, and left college to join the Confederate forces and fight for the lost cause.

The late Major and Mrs. Joseph S. Raine, paternal grandparents of the fair bride-elect, were from Louisville, Ky., but became residents of Atlanta soon after their marriage, and were recognized as eminent and representative citizens. Mrs. Raine, who was Miss Mary Belle Hutchison, a belle and beauty of Louisville, was one of the most public spirited citizens of the city. At the time of her death she was president of the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., and was one of the founders of this patriotic organization. After serving as president of the Ladies' Memorial association, of which she was a charter member, she was made life president, an honor she richly deserved. Major Raine was a well-known and successful member of the insurance world and was identified with many civic and social interests. The bride-elect's father, Joseph S. Raine, is an outstanding leader in the southern insurance field, and her mother, who was formerly Miss Edna Belle Miller, is a popular leader of the social world, and from whom she inherits much of her charm, poise and graces.

Mrs. Geddinga Tupper, of New Orleans; Mrs. Clark Frazier and Mrs. John H. Raine, of Atlanta, are aunts of the bride-elect, and Hall Miller is an uncle.

Maternal Relatives.

Mr. Watson is a son of Mrs. Lillian Gordon Watson, and the late Isaac Saunders Watson, of Rome. He was graduated from Rome High school and completed his education at Emory university, where he was a member of the Chi Phi fraternity, and is now connected with the Alabama inspection and rating bureau in Montgomery, Ala. On his maternal side, Mr. Watson is a grandson of the late Captain William Thomas Gordon and Mrs. Ella Nix Gordon, of Covington, Ga. Captain Gordon was a very prominent citizen of Bartow and Floyd counties, he served with the Confederate army during the civil war. Captain Gordon was a first cousin of the late General John B. Gordon.

On his paternal side he is descended from the late Mr. and Mrs. Noble Gordon Watson, very prominent and highly honored citizens of Rome. His grandmother was before her marriage, Miss Sarah Watson, of South Carolina.

Mr. Watson has made marked progress in the insurance business in which he holds a responsible position with the Alabama division, and after their marriage, he and his charming bride-elect will reside in Montgomery.

Debutante Club To Be Honored At Brilliant Dance at Biltmore

The outstanding social event of the week will be the dinner dance Wednesday evening to be given by Holland Judkins, vice president of the Biltmore hotel, at the regular dinner dance at the Atlanta Biltmore, in compliment to the members of the 1926-27 Debutante club.

This affair will be one of the most prominent and important events of the much filled social notebook of the Debutante club, as it will be the initial appearance of the entire club. In previous years the club has made it's first appearance at the Halloween ball at the Piedmont Driving club, but due to the popularity of the Biltmore hotel for not only members of the younger set, and the college contingent, but older members of Atlanta's exclusive social circles, Mr. Judkins has planned this affair as the first brilliant party to the attractive group of girls who are members of the club.

The large oblong table will represent an old-fashioned garden, with Japanese pergolas covered with pastel shaded flowers. Large French dolls dressed in crioline, representing the debutante of 1860 and vieing in attractiveness with the group of 1926 debutantes will be placed at intervals on the table. Each place will be marked by an attractive souvenir.

The grand march lead by Miss Isabelle Bristenbutcher, president of the cluub, and Edwin Thompson, will herald the approach of the club. During the evening the table will be in the center of the room around which will be smaller tables where a number of reservation have been made by the parents of the honor guests.

Covers will be placed for Miss Isabelle Breistenbucher, president; Miss Sara Hurt, vice president; Miss Heneritta Mikell, secretary; Miss Anne Lane Newell, treasurer; Misses Clara Belle King, Runa Erwin, Jeannette Bailey, Elizabeth Little, Mary Middleton, Martha Maddox, Sara Smith, Elizabeth Phillips, Louise Arnold, Martha Ridley, Idolene Lewman, Yolande Gwin, Lucille Stone, Frances Floyd, Mary Rhorer, Mary McCarty and a group of young men.

Mrs. Chase Entertains For Mrs. W. M. Jones.

One of the most enjoyable events of the past week was a "spend-the-day party" given by Mrs. Frances Brown Chase, scrap book chairman of the Atlanta Baptist W. M. U., at her home, "New Canaan" on Brown Mill road.

The occasion was to honor Mrs. W. M. Jones, newly elected superintendent of the union. Those enjoying the hospitality of Mrs. Chase were: Mrs. Jones, Mrs. W. P. Anderson, Mrs. J. R. Little, Mrs. W. O. Freeman, Mrs. J. W. Awtrey, Mrs. J. W. Smith and Miss Clara B. Stephenson.

Sinclair-Parsons Wedding Plans Announced Today of Interest

Social interest centers in the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Christine Sinclair and William N. Parsons, Jr., whose marriage will be solemnized Saturday evening, October 9, at 8 o'clock, at the St. Mark Methodist church. The Rev. Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, will perform the ceremony and Miss Eda Bartholomew will have charge of the music. Mrs. E. B. Lester and Edwin Caldwell will sing, accompanied at the organ by Miss Bartholomew.

Miss Pattie Sinclair, only sister of the bride-elect, will be maid of honor and Mrs. Henry MacFayden, of Asheville, N. C., will be the matron of honor. The bridesmaids will include Mrs. Edward Hodge Havis and Miss Caroline Parsons, the groom's sister. Little Miss Mary Alice Lemon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Lemon, will be the flower girl. Bryan Merry will attend the groom as best man and the bride will be accompanied to the altar by her brother, Jack Sinclair. The groomsmen will include Jefferson Stacy, Hugh Saussy, Lewis E. Crook and Shellman Boston.

Following the marriage service, the bride and groom will leave for a wedding trip to New York. On their return, they will make their home at 30 Cumberland Circle in Morningside.

College Park Club To Hold Initial Meet, October 6

The initial meeting of the College Park Woman's club will be held Wednesday, October 6, at 3 o'clock at the home of the president, Mrs. Oscar Palmour, 206 West Hawthorne avenue, College Park.

A full attendance of the club is requested by the president, as business of importance must be transacted for fall activities.

"Education," the first program on the club calendar, will be in charge of the chairman, Mrs. B. D. Gray, who will present Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick and Mrs. J. K. Ottley as speakers on this occasion. Tallulah Falls will be the theme.

Mrs. W. W. Bateman, efficient chairman of music, will present the delightful artist, Mrs. Julian de Bruyn Kops, soprano soloist at St. Philip's cathedral.

Miss Ellen Lura Wages Weds Lawrence Morris.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Wages, of Auburn, Ga., announce the marriage of their daughter, Ellen Lura, to S. Lawrence Morris. The groom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. S. L. Morris, of Jackson, Miss., formerly of Atlanta.

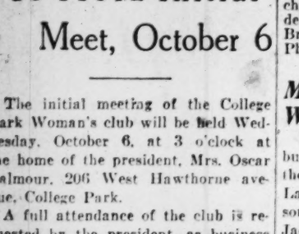

Mr. and Mrs. Morris left Saturday for Jacksonville, Fla., to visit the bride's brother and sister. They will be at their home after October 15, at 1911 Boulevard drive, S. E.

Mrs. Julius Talmadge Pens Message on D. A. R. Magazine

Mrs. Julius Talmadge, of Athens, vice president general for Georgia, U. S. D. A. R., and national chairman D. A. R. magazine committee.

Georgia Daughters: Again I call upon you to put Georgia "over the top." This time it is in the D. A. R. Magazine subscription contest.

I consider it an honor, indeed, to serve you in our national society as national chairman of this committee. I did not realize the wide field of endeavor and the vast opportunity to serve our society that this work afforded when I accepted this appointment.

I wish it were possible to have a personal talk with you concerning the different phases of our magazine—our hopes and ambitions for its future, its far-reaching influence, its mission of carrying to the thousands of D. A. R. over the United States and into the foreign chapters, the message of what the national society is doing and the part each chapter is playing in the general plan. The thought is an inspiration to me. The magazine is larger and better than ever before and is growing constantly. I hope we may enthuse each D. A. R. with the desire to become a subscriber and thus become a better informed member.

Therefore, in seeking to bring this about I have decided to hold a "subscription contest." There will be two prizes of equal value. They will consist of two chairs in Constitution hall, purchased in the name of the successful contestants. One chair is to be given by the four vice chairmen of this committee, and the other by the chairman.

The conditions of the contest which started August 1, 1926, are:

"One prize to go to the state magazine chairman in the states having a D. A. R. membership over 2,000 who secures the greatest number of subscriptions. The other prize to go to the state chairman in the states having a membership under 2,000, who secures the greatest number of subscriptions.

In forwarding subscriptions of the treasurer general, the name of the state magazine chairman must be sent with subscriptions in order that they may be credited to her and counted in the contest.

A subscription for a period of years will be counted as one subscription. Renewals will also be counted in the contest.

Those desiring subscription blanks can secure same by applying to magazine department, Memorial Constitution hall, Washington, D. C.

The yearly subscription is $2.

How proud I should be if Georgia wins one of these prizes. Will you not do your part in bringing this about? In times past I have never made a request of you that you did not do all in your power to grant. Our state report last year showed the result of your combined effort and splendid cooperation; and now I am asking for your cooperation in this, not only because I am ambitious for the Georgia Daughters and wish to see our state lead in all endeavors, but also because I feel that in subscribing to the magazine you will derive untold benefits yourself.

To those who have never been able to attend a state conference or national congress the magazine is almost a necessity; and to those who do attend these meetings, it is of especial, vital interest. It is the only means we have of keeping in touch with the national society for the magazine always carries the minutes of the national board meeting, and in addition, there are always interesting historical papers, a splendid genealogical department, the new registrar general's department (which makes its debut in the October number), accounts of state conferences and chapter meetings, the standing of the states according to membership, and many, many other interesting features.

Following is a copy of a circular letter, which I have recently sent out to every chapter regent in the United States, and which I felt would be of interest to you:

Letter to Regents.

My dear Chapter Regent: You have probably heard from your state chairman of the D. A. R. Magazine relative to the whirlwind campaign for new subscriptions which began August 1.

Recently we have perfected plans for enlarging our genealogical department, and adding other interesting features which should tend to make our magazine almost a necessity in every D. A. R. home. I am cooperating with your state chairman in getting this message to you, for I believe it will be one of the greatest incentives to subscribe to the magazine that we have ever had.

The new section is to be called "The Register General's Department," and in each monthly issue there will be one or more verified revolutionary records. Think what this will mean to our readers everywhere, whether they are "prospective members" or members of long standing! I believe this one feature alone will bring in thousands of new subscribers.

We now have 14,000 subscribers to the magazine. Let us take for our slogan "Nothing less than 25,000 subscriptions this year." I hope we may enthuse each D. A. R. with the desire to become a subscriber, and thus become a better informed member of this society.

With best wishes to you and your chapter, I am yours faithfully,

MAY ERWIN TALMADGE.

CHAPTER REPORTS

JOHN HALL.

John Hall chapter, D. A. R., held their September meeting at the home of Mrs. Victor Davidson, when it was announced that LaFayette day had been observed in all the schools at the request of the chapter.

An interesting program was rendered, including a fine paper on the constitution by Miss Willie Davis; a reading, "Revolutionary Puzzle," by Miss Nan Wood; a pantomime, "Gathering of the Nuts," staged by Mrs. L. J. Pritchard. Several delightful musical numbers were included in the program, after which dainty refreshments were served.

NANCY HART.

The September meeting of Nancy Hart chapter was entertained by Mrs. S. A. Cook, author of the History of Milledgeville, and Baldwin County, and in a way this meeting was epochal. It marked the purchase of a chair in Continental hall for the chapter, under the new regent, Miss Leila Lamar, and it closed the great accomplishment of the retiring regent, Mrs. J. C. Garrard, who, during her regime, had published and paid for the history above referred to.

In addition to celebrating LaFayette day and Constitution day, the regent announced that as a happy surprise, the chapter would celebrate "Cook day," that being the 82nd birthday of Mrs. Cook, author of the history. Mrs. Cook was presented a lovely gift on this occasion by the chapter, and responded with a happy speech.

A notable event of the meeting was the burning of the promisory note given for the publication of the history. It is thought that many chapters and individual Daughters will want a copy of this splendid history, which sells for three dollars ($3) per copy, and may be purchased from the regent of Nancy Hart chapter. The Savannah Press gave a fine criticism of this book in a recent edition, and it will be valuable addition to any D. A. R. library.

Lectures and Lantern Slides

Dear Georgia D. A. R.: It has been nearly six months since I mentioned patriotic lectures and lantern slides to you. But it is necessary now, so please listen.

Just when school is starting won't you discuss this phase of work in your chapter? If you do not want the slides, how about just a good D. A. R. lecture? It would be fine and I believe you would enjoy it. If you will write your chairman right away, she will do her best to get you a lecture and slides before Christmas. It will take about a month or six weeks to secure them, so do it now!

Hope you are all still enjoying life as much as you were when I saw you in Americus and Washington.

Let me hear from you.

Yours for D. A. R.,
MRS. M. F. C. STEWART,
State Chairman, Committee on Patriotic Lectures and Lantern Slides, Grantville, Ga.

West End Civic Club To Stage Big Carnival

The Civic club, of West End, will be the scene of a mammoth carnival on the afternoon and evening of Friday, October 15, preparations for which have been under way for some time.

An added feature of entertainment will be a beauty contest staged by Mrs. M. Herzberg and Mrs. Murray Howard will furnish an original stunt.

On Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock the Bible study class will have as speakers for the afternoon Rev. N. R. H. Moor, rector of St. Luke's church, who will take for his subject, "Thaddeus."

On Wednesday, October 6, the literary class will meet at the clubhouse at 2:30 o'clock. A delightful program has been arranged.

On Friday, October 1, the "Bluebirds" held a meeting and it was decided to turn their activities toward sewing for the Needlework guild. Mrs. J. B. Carter is chairman of this group.

Mrs. Edward H. Smith, president of the Civic club, announces that the club is facing the most prosperous and progressive year since its organization.

Fair College Representatives Attend Tech-V. M. I. Football Game

Following an annual custom, four representatives from prominent southern colleges for girls with the presidents of the colleges and their chaperones were guests of the Georgia School of Technology at the Tech-V. M. I. football game Saturday. The guests occupied the Tech president's box and they were accompanied to the game by members of the Tech Glee club and the Tech Marionettes.

Brenau college was represented by Misses Elizabeth King, Sue Wilds, Mary Jim Oliver and Helen Harris. They were chaperoned by H. J. Pierce, president, and Miss Ramsey. Misses Helen Hardeman, Louise Hendrix, Anna Pidcock and Ellen Caswell represented Shorter college. They were chaperoned by Mrs. Richardson and W. D. Furry, president. Bessie Tift college was represented by Misses Cecelia Lawrence, Eleanor Upchurch, Dorothy Bryson and Virginia Bennett. They were chaperoned by A. Chamlee, president, and Professors Polhill and Brantley. The LaGrange college was represented by Misses Elizabeth Hodgson, Lura Lifsey, Helen Walker and Martha McDaniel. They were chaperoned by Dr. A. H. Thompson, president of the college. Agnes Scott college and Wesleyan college were also represented.

Preceding the game, these visitors were entertained at luncheon at the home of Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of the Georgia School of Technology on West North avenue. Dr. Brittain was assisted in entertaining by his daughter, Mrs. Spann Milner, in the absence of Mrs. Brittain, who is in Kentucky.

New Era Study Club Is Entertained.

Mrs. Dwight Bayley entertained the New Era Study club Wednesday morning at her home in Decatur.

The house was attractively decorated with fall flowers. The president, Mrs. E. H. West, presided over the business meeting.

Mrs. Frank Pike read an interesting paper on the Nordic races. Mrs. Leroy Rogers and Mrs. Bayley rendered several beautiful selections.

Promoter Meeting A Junior League To Be Tuesday

The October meeting of the Atlanta Junior league will take place at the Piedmont Driving club Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

This is the first meeting since June and the newly elected officers for the 1926-27 term will preside. The new officers are Mrs. Eugene R. Black, president; Mrs. Lewis Gregg, first vice president; Miss Margaret Nelson, second vice president; Mrs. Philip Wilcox, treasurer; Mrs. William Parker, recording secretary, and Miss Ellen Newell, corresponding secretary.

The Junior league will concentrate its work at the Good Samaritan clinic this season, although work with other charities will be featured. The work with the Good Samaritan clinic has expanded wonderfully in the past few years, and marvelous results have been accomplished in many cases. Mrs. Floyd W. McRae, Jr., is president of the God Samaritan clinic; Hrs. Westervelt Terhune, secretary, and Mrs. Litt Warren, Jr., treasurer.

HOME-COMING TIDE TURNS WITH OCTOBER

up with Mr. and Mrs. Raine over 20-odd years ago.

THE WORLD'S most vogueish and beautiful queen, Marie of Rumania, who follows American as well as continental customs, has been invited to visit Atlanta in December as the guest of the Presidents' club, the news of which is being received with genuine interest, adding a thrilling touch to the winter's social program.

It will be Gate City's first sovereign visitor, and outside of the entertainment planned for the royal guest by the Presidents' club, there are other organizations coming under the influence of this news, for Queen Marie is bringing her lovely royal debutante daughter, the Princess Ileana, reported to have inherited her mother's beauty, and her son, Prince Nicholas, to America, which is particularly important to the Debutante club of 1926.

Then, too, Queen Marie is very anxious to establish contact with American clubwomen, and Her Majesty will meet a national representative in Washington, D. C. Her intention while here is to watch the United States at work and at play, planning to tour every section for this purpose. She sails on the Leviathan October 12, occupying the steamer's royal suite.

THAT ALWAYS muchly-feted visitor, Mrs. Valeria Langeloth, who will come a-visiting from Riverside, Conn., and New York, arrives next Wednesday to spend ten days with Mrs. John M. Slaton at Wingfield, her home on Peachtree road, and there's certain to be a round of brilliant parties complimenting this distinguished woman, whose late husband, Mr. Langeloth, established Valerie home, a recreational resort for business women at Croton-on-the-Hudson. He named it for his beloved wife and endowed it with a vast fortune.

Twice weekly Mrs. Langeloth visits the home and gives a pleasing concert upon the handsome organ she donated, keeping in touch with the directing of its management by attending meetings at the New York headquarters, having been made life president of the board, accepting this honor through her love for humanity. Valerie home is built of stone in several units, with golf links, tennis courts, a swimming pool, and boats for rowing on the lake, being only a few of the amusements features. Situated as it is in the center of one thousand acres, the home commands a gorgeous view of the picturesque Hudson.

Mrs. Edward P. McBurney is spending the week-end with Mrs. Langeloth at her palatial Connecticut residence, and Mrs. Don Pardee, another Atlantan has also enjoyed her gracious hospitality. The close friendship of Mrs Slaton and Mrs. Langeloth has existed over a period of many years in which time they have made several European trips together, and Mrs. Slaton has been a frequent guest in Mrs. Langeloth's home.

Mrs. Pardee's party at the Wednesday evening dinner-dance at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, will compliment Mrs. Langeloth, who has but recently returned from a long voyage to the Orient.

Dinner-Dance At Driving Club.

An interesting affair of Saturday evening was the regular dinner dance at the Piedmont Driving club.

A group of members and their friends gathered for the dinner, and dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Harrison entertained a party of friends. At their table, covers were placed for Mr. and Mrs. William Harrison of Petersburg, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Tift, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gregg, Mrs. Mary G. Miller, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Gregg.

Colonel H. C. Merriam entertained a group of army friends. Covers were placed for five guests.

Others entertaining were Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Gay, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Dan Macdougald, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Calhoun, and E. W. Martin.

Mrs. Lyman Pratt Is Feted Visitor.

Mrs. Lyman Pratt, of New York, is a former Atlantan, who is receiving much social attention as the guest of her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Ransom. Mrs. Pratt was before her marriage, Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of former Senator Hoke Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Ransom entertained at tea following the Tech-V. M. I. football game Saturday at their home on Juniper street, honoring Mrs. Pratt.

Brightly tinted fall flowers adorned the reception rooms of the table, and the tea table was adorned in the center with a graceful arrangement of blue ageratum and pink cosmos.

The guests included twenty-five friends of the honor guest.

Mrs. Ransom will be hostess at a bridge-tea Tuesday at her home, inviting a group of friends to meet this attractive visitor. A number of other parties have been planned, the dates to be announced later.

Miss Scott To Entertain Agnes Scott Club.

Miss Claire Louise Scott will be hostess at a tea to be given in the honor of the Atlanta Agnes Scott club Tuesday, October 5, at her home, 33 West Fourteenth street. Miss Scott has been president of the club for two years and has proved both a gracious and efficient one.

The hours of the tea are from 4 to 6 o'clock, and about 100 callers are expected during the afternoon. The last year graduates of the college have received special invitations.

Mr. and Mrs. Hasson Honor Bridal Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hasson entertained at a dinner party Saturday evening at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel in compliment to Miss Lula Lewis and Bryant Woosley, whose marriage will be a social event of Tuesday.

Dinner was served at 8 o'clock, in the main dining room of the hotel. Two French baskets filled with Kilarney roses were placed at each end of the beautiful appointed table. To the arm of each of the baskets was tied a dainty bow of pink tulle ribbon. Hand painted place cards marked each guest's place.

Covers were laid for Miss Lewis, Mr. Woosley, Misses Sara Fisher, Martha Ridley, Julianne Hagan, Pauline Lewis, Bee Sterling, of Greenville, S. C.; Helen Gude, Harriett Hasson, Edward Merritt, G. B. Strickler, Ardis Lewis, John Lewis, Howard Smith, Joe High Williams, Hal Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Hasson.

State and National W. C. T. U. Conventions

By M. Frances Meadors Burghard.

Interest in the state convention of the Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance union which will be held in Gainesville, October 26, 27 and 28, grows as the time draws near.

A meritorious program has been arranged with "Carry On" as the keynote. All groups will tell the salient points of how they carried on the principles, methods, plans and certain activities during the current convention year, and will pledge themselves enthusiastically to carry on the work of the organization in the new W. C. T. U. year.

Such groups as the general officers, the state departmental superintendents, the district, county and local presidents, the young people's and loyal temperance legion and national prohibition guards and white ribbon recruits (children's) branches, college committees, and the victorious volunteer captains in the membership campaign, will all make carry-on reports and resolves.

A novel bit of the dramatic, spectacular and musical will be injected by each group keeping spectators on the qui vive.

Mrs. Della A. Dillard, of Emory university, will put on the same peace demonstration which she had in charge, as national director of the W. C. T. U. peace department, at the national convention in Los Angeles.

The flag ritual by Mrs. Piercy Chestney, of Macon, which was a part of the youth's demonstration in which 12,000 young people participated at Philadelphia hall in Los Angeles, Calif., last Sunday afternoon, will be given at the Georgia convention in Gainesville. The 10 large silk flags, each of which was the flag of our country in turn, which were used in the national demonstration, will be used in Gainesville.

Convention Features.

The annual address of the state president, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, is eagerly anticipated. Mrs. Armor, a leading prohibition orator, will reach the convention with fresh zeal gained by participation in the great national convention, and a lecture tour through Wisconsin, Michigan, North Dakota, Wyoming, California, Colorado, and Missouri.

Seaborn Wright, of Rome, a nationally known prohibition speaker and who was a leader in securing Georgia's state prohibition law 19 years ago, will speak on "Crime—Its Cause and Cure" on Wednesday evening.

On Tuesday evening William G. Mealor, the mayor of Gainesville, will extend the welcome from the city and men's organizations. Dr. W. P King, pastor of the First Methodist church, who writes "Things New and Old About the Bible," for The Constitution each week, a former editor of The Wesleyan Christian Advocate, one of the most prominent ministers in the Methodist church, will extend the welcome for the churches; Colonel R. B. McGehee, commandant at Riverside academy, from the educational institutions, and Mrs. Hayne Palmour, who has served so efficiently the past year as president of the Gainesville W. C. T. U., for the women's organizations.

Mrs. Marvin Williams, of Atlanta, the state vice president, will respond to the addresses of welcome.

There will be music by special choirs, the Brenau Glee club, and songs by Mrs. A. B. Cunyus, of Cartersville, state W. C. T. U. musical director.

Mrs. Armor will conduct the memorial service by special request, and Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, of Milledgeville, the consecration service.

Mrs. W. G. Cotton, of Columbus, state director of membership campaign, which has resulted in more than 1,000 new members, will be assisted in the march of the victorious vounteers captains, each of whom won 10 or more new members, by a number of Brenau students in "The Eighteenth Amendment and Volstead Act," a silent drama.

Mrs. J. A. Thomas, of Savannah, one of Georgia's great women, will discuss "The Responsibility of Missionary Women with Regard to the Cause of Temperance."

Reports of the national convention in Los Angeles will be made by the Georgia delegates.

W. F. Mott, of Dublin, pastor of the Christ church, a well-known Bible reader, will lead the 11 o'clock devotionals.

Mrs. Nelle Upshaw Cannon, whose report of the world's W. C. T. U. convention in Edinburg, Scotland, made such a hit at the state convention in Macon last fall, the state secretary for the young people's branch, will be the speaker on youth's night.

The songs and stunts of college delegations will be featured that night also.

The Pay Plan.

At the convention last year it was decided that the time had arrived for the W. C. T. U. to cease accepting free entertainment at conventions.

Every union in the tsate is urged to send delegates and pay their expenses, which will not amount to a great deal as Gainesville just would serve free luncheons each day. Many delegates will gladly pay their own expenses which is customary in other organizations.

The indications are that a large delegation will be in attendance.

The Princeton hotel will be the convention headquarters, both the Princeton and the Dixie-Hunt are beautiful, up-to-date hostelries.

Motor parties are being arranged by delegates should the weather permit that mode of transportation.

Miss Goodman Weds Mr. Brogdon At Simple Church Ceremony

A wedding of social interest was that of Miss Marguerite Goodman and George L. Brogdon, which was solemnized in the intermediate department room of the Sunday school at the Baptist Tabernacle, Wednesday evening, September 29.

An improvised altar of palms, dahlias, interspersed with candelabra bearing lighted tapers formed the background.

Preceding the ceremony J. Elmer Slider sang "O Promise Me," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. R. L. Hurst, who was becomingly gowned in blue georgette. At the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march Dr. Will H. Houghton, who officiated, entered.

Miss Catherine Maier, maid of honor, followed. The bride entered with her father, John B. Goodman, who gave her in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and Frank Jamison, his best man.

Of a lovely blonde type, the bride was unusually beautiful in her wedding gown of white flat crepe and a close-fitting white hat. She carried a shower bouquet of brideroses and valley lilies.

The maid of honor wore pink georgette made bouffant style, with a close-fitting black hat. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Mrs. Godman, mother of the bride, was attractive in blue georgette and wore a corsage bouquet of pink rose buds.

Miss Gertrude Brogdon, the groom's sister, wore a flat crepe model of wine-color and with it a corsage bouquet of rose buds.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr., and Mrs. John B. Goodman. She is a graduate of Girls' High school and is very active in Sunday school and church work.

Mr. Brogdon, formerly of Buford, Ga., is now connected with Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills, where he holds a responsible position. After a short wedding trip, he and his bride will be at home at 410 North Boulevard, N. E.

THIRD PYTHIAN DISTRICT CONVENES AT ZEBULON

The semi-annual convention of the third Pythian district of the grand lodge of Georgia will convene at Zebulon, the county site of Pike county.

This is the largest of the 13 Pythian districts in which the state has been divided, and will be represented by large delegations from the lodges composing the district.

Grand Keeper of Record and Seal W. H. Leopold has indicated that he will attend, and Grand Chancellor Seiple of Savannah, also is expected to be on hand.

The chamber of commerce of Zebulon has united with the Pythians of that town in the entertainment of the delegates to the convention. The meeting will be of more than ordinary importance in view of the legislation enacted by the recent convention of the supreme lodge making some very radical changes in the supreme constitution and statutes of the order.

The officers of the convention are: J. T. Waldrop, of Griffin, president; W. H. Mitchell, of Barnesville, vice president; B. L. Owens, of Atlanta, secretary.

Miss Montgomery Honored at Parties.

Marietta, Ga., October 2.—The social calendar for this week has been filled with many affairs in honor of Miss Emma Montgomery, a bride-elect of Wednesday, October 6, and her bridal party. On Monday evening preceding the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tillman will compliment the bridal party with a bridge-supper at the Marietta Golf club. Tuesday evening Misses Julia and Emma Katherine Anderson will compliment Miss Montgomery and Mr. Mayes and their wedding party with a rehearsal supper-party at their home on Whitlock avenue.

The Marietta Chamber of Commerce joined by the Rotarians, entertained at an elaborate luncheon on Friday at the Marietta Golf club in honor of a number of distinguished visitors who were here in the interest of purchasing Kennesaw mountain to be used as a public park. Among the assembly were General John P. Clem, U. S. army; ex-Governor Nat E. Harris, of Georgia; Colonel W. P. Stokely, U. S. army; Senator Harris, Mr. Hoffman, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, and others.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. McLeod and son, Joe Brown McLeod, left Tuesday for Red Springs, N. C., where they will spend two weeks with Mrs. D. C. McLeod, Sr.

Mrs. Morgan McNeel, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Charlie De Foor and Miss Margaret McNeel returned from New York Monday. Miss McNeel arrived in New York Saturday, after spending the summer touring Europe.

Eugene Bryant, of Greenville, S. C., will arrive Monday to be in attendance at the Montgomery-Mayes wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilder Glover returned Monday from New York, where they met their son, Bolan Glover, on his return from a summer's tour through Europe.

Mrs. Randolph Claiborne and Miss Emily Claiborne, of Camden, Ark., are visiting Mrs. Robert Willingham.

Mrs. Fannie Trezevant has returned from an extended visit to her daughter, Mrs. Fred Hopkins in Minneapolis, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Willingham and children and Mrs. Ella Wiley are visiting relatives in Brunswick, Ga. Before their return Mr. and Mrs. Willingham will visit Savannah, Charleston, Wilmington and Asheville, North Carolina.

Misses Mary Wallace and Creswell Morrisette arrived Saturday from Shorter college. Miss Morrisette is spending the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Morrisette. Miss Wallace will remain for the Montgomery-Mayes wedding.

Mrs. I. W. Moon, of Atlanta, visited Mrs. J. R. Collins this week.

Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Holtzclaw, who have been the guests for the past two weeks of their sister, Mrs. L. B. Robeson, returned Wednesday to their home in Perry, Ga.

Miss Nancy Morris will leave Tuesday for Washington, D. C., where she will enter Martha Washington seminary.

ACCOUNTING CLASS HELD BY WOMEN OF COMMERCE BODY

The class in accounting, which is being offered free of charge to members of the woman's division of the chamber of commerce, held the first meeting on Thursday, September 30, at 6 o'clock. Enlisting 18 members it was decided at that time to adopt this date for the meeting, and the first lesson will be given on Thursday, October 7, at 6 o'clock, and each following Thursday at the same hour.

This class is made possible through the courtesy of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and is taught by Professor Gottenstrater. Many inquiries have been received, and anyone wishing information may secure it through the secretary, Mrs. Colvin, at Walnut 0845. A number of new members have joined the organization in order that they may take advantage of this opportunity.

A meeting of the team captains and leaders conducting the drive for new members was held Friday evening. Reports to date indicate that a great many members will be added to the division. The section headed by Mrs. Rae S. Addis has secured the greatest number to date, the team headed by Mrs. Lillian Dove leading the other teams, and Miss Susie C. Wailes has brought in the largest number individually. Three prizes will be offered those bringing in the greatest number of new members at the close of the drive October 18.

PLANS PERFECTED IN INITIAL DRIVE FOR PAINE LIBRARY

At the meeting of the committee of one hundred at Wesley Memorial church, September 30, Chairman J. Lawrence McCord announced that all organization plans were completed for the initial drive to obtain funds for the George Williams Walker memorial library for Paine college at Augusta.

This work, having originated in the Methodist Ministers' association some weeks ago, it is now the plan to ask every Methodist minister in the city of Atlanta to cooperate with the movement by pulpit presentation. It was unanimously agreed by the committee to ask the ministers of the city to present this matter to their congregations on Sunday morning, October 10, and give them an opportunity of contributing to this enterprise. After coversation with some of the leading Methodist ministers of the city, Mr. McCord announces that they promised their support to this undertaking and agreed that they will give special emphasis to the needs of Paine college.

Woman Daredevil To Perform Stunts For Atlanta Crowds

A slim, pleasant faced woman who has faced death in a thousand forms without a quiver or tremor only to come through successfully to the applause of multitudes, will probably be brought to Atlanta the latter part of this week to perform a series of daring aerial stunts over the city.

Mable Cody, known the world over for her apparent disregard for safety in providing thrills for gaping crowds, who three years ago performed the sensational stunt of hopping from the fast New York limited of the Atlanta & West Point railroad to a ladder dangling from a speeding airplane, is the woman.

Arrangements to bring Miss Cody to Atlanta are now being made by R. C. Burns, her advance agent, with a local theater, at which a feature picture, "The Girl of the Seven Wonders," showing Miss Cody in some of her daring stunts, will be shown while she performs on an airplane above the city.

Atlantans will remember Miss Cody for her daredevil work here three years ago. At that time she thrilled large crowds by changing from one airplane to another, from a speeding train to an airplane, and similar stunts.

Camp Fire Week, Oct. 10-16, Will Show Camp Fire Program

Camp Fire Girl's week will be October 10, 16. During that week headquarters will speak at various clubs, schools, churches, etc., to bring before the people the Camp Fire program. This program is for girls of eleven years and older, and lays particular stress on home, health and citizenship. It is a program for character building, leadership and recreation.

Miss Mary Louise Hollands, the executive secretary of the Camp Fire girls has spent the greater part of the past week out at the fair grounds, where a splendid exhibit has been arranged. Those who have given their time and talents are, Mrs. J. Howell Green, Mrs. Harry Hall, Mrs. Kate Bogman, Miss Helen Haggard, Miss Marie Long, Miss Anna Lee Coleman, Miss Mary Zachary, Miss Zyabel Spring and Miss Holland. The entire exhibit is the work of the Camp Fire girls themselves.

Decatur Council Fire.

The Swannanoa group of the Decatur Junior high school with Mrs. J. Howell Green as guardian is planning a historic grand council fire for Saturday night, October 9, at 7:30 o'clock in the gymnasium of the Presbyterian church. The first Camp Fire group in Decatur was organized just after the national organization was founded. Mrs. Harvey Parry came here from the north and being interested in camp fire, started the Decatur group in the spring of 1913. At the council fire next Saturday, there will be a representative from every group since that time. Miss Sarah Fulton will represent the first group appearing in her ceremonial gown and telling of some of the activities of her group. Miss Frances Gardner, who was a member of Mrs. Gosnell's group will also make a short talk. The last active group before the one now under the leadership of Mrs. Green, was led by three guardians during the time it was active. First by Mrs. Kirby, then by Miss Elizabeth Askew and last by Miss Willie Love. Miss Mary Louise Hollands will be in charge of the council fire and the candles of work, health and love will be lighted by the girls of the Swannanoa group. Alice Frierson will give the fire maker's desire and Mary Clio Stead will give the camp fire credo.

The Camp Fire group of Home Park school met Monday. This group was organized the latter part of last year under the direction of Miss Donnie Barrett. This year it has been reorganized under the leadership of Miss Alice Thompson, the kindergarten teacher of the Home Park school. At the meeting Monday eight girls were present. They talked of the camp fire law and requirements from becoming a camp fire girl. Camp fire songs were sung and the watchword "Wohelo" discussed.

"Owakica," the Girl's High Camp Fire group, has been reorganized with Miss Mildred Cole as guardian. The first meeting was held at the school Wednesday, September 29. Mary Zachary, the former president presided and the following officers were elected, Mary Zachary, president; Bonnielynn Hill, vice president; Agnes George, secretary; Ruby Edison, treasurer; Marjorie Gifford, scribe; Sarah Cousins, council representative, and Katherine Bogman, song leader. The regular routine of business was taken up and plans made for the year. It was decided that the first seven meetings would represent the seven crafts of Camp Fire. This week, home craft will be emphasized, and at the weekly meeting on Friday, the same idea followed.

Tuesday afternoon all the members of Camp Fire at William A. Bass, met to talk with other girls' interest in becoming Camp Fire Girls. Miss Mary Louise Hollands was present and gave an interesting account of some of the Camp Fire activities.

The Shuinala group met again Thursday to complete vases. These were enameled at a previous meeting and reed baskets in which to sit them, also made. These will be displayed at the Southeastern fair.

The Ihaha group of Camp Fire held its regular weekly meeting on Wednesday at the home of Elily Perkerson, the president, on Ponce de Leon avenue. Health charts were given to each girl and as all are working for the fire makers rank, the entire group is going to keep the health and thrift charts together. This group is planning a tea to be given to the mothers during the last week of October.

At the meeting Wednesday, the girls learned the work of the city health department and the child labor department. They also discussed what to do in case of an open cut, sprained ankle, fainting, frost bite, and nose bleed. Mrs. Plaster also showed the girls how to use gauze bandage and the triangular bandage. The next meeting will be on civic and personal hygiene.

Mammoth Flower Show To Be Given Oct. 11.

The garden club committee of the Atlanta Woman's club will act as hostesses at a flower show to be held Monday, October 11, in the banquet hall of the Atlanta Woman's club, at which all the flower clubs of the fifth district will exhibit. At a called meeting of the garden committee Thursday, September 30, details of the flower show were discussed by representatives of the seven flower clubs in the fifth district. As soon as worked out, rules governing the show will be published.

Mrs. Joel Hunter is chairman of the garden club committee. Organized three years ago by Mrs. E. P. Crenshaw, the committe now has a membership of 80 and takes an active interest in the civic and cultural life of Atlanta. The meetings are held the second and fourth Thursdays in the month at the Atlanta Woman's club, and the large and punctual attendance is evidence of the interest taken by the members. Lectures are given by experts and frequently round table discussions are held at which the members give their personal experience in the care and cultivation of flowers.

Woman's Club Cookbook Is on Sale at Fair.

The Atlanta Woman's club famous cookbook, from the sale of which $10,000 has already accrued to the club, and has been used for its building expenses, will be on sale at the Southeastern fair throughout this week in the Sears-Roebuck exhibit.

Each year the courtesy is extended to the cookbook committee by some exhibitor, interested in club progress, and the committee this year with Mrs. Charles Harding as the new chairman, will be assured of a pleasant location, since the Sears-Roebuck exhibit is one of the most elaborate ones at the fair.

A committee of prominent clubwomen has been selected by Mrs. Harding, two of whom will be on hand each day.

Mrs. Charles Phillips To Conduct Class.

The first meeting of the literature class of the Atlanta Woman's club will be held Thursday afternoon, October 7, at 3 o'clock in the palm room of the club house. Mrs. Charles T. Phillips, the chairman, will preside.

The program for the year is "Changing Point of View." This will be an organization meeting, and Mrs. Phillips requests everyone interested in this work to attend.

Mrs. Melton Calls Fine Arts Meeting.

A most important meeting of the fine arts committee of the Atlanta Woman's club will be held at the club on Wednesday afternoon, October 6, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. W. F. Melton, chairman, presiding.

Plans will be formulated for the year's work for this department and all members of the committee are urged to attend the meeting. Mrs. Earl Scott, chairman, and Mrs. Clarence Blosser, cochairman of the art committee, will be present.

Even Temperature And Clear Skies Seen for Today

Pleasant weather is expected today by C. F. von Herrman, United States meteorologist.

Clear skies with temperatures of moderate warmth will prevail in Atlanta today, Mr. von Herrman said. "Temperatures will range between 70 and 82 or 83, or about the same as those of Saturday."

Today should be an ideal day for a drive into the country, for the weather map generally is quiet, with only fair weather in view, Mr. von Herrmann said.

Prominent Bankers Are Entertained On Visit Here

Among the distinguished out of town visitors in Atlanta during the past week were Douglas Thomas, president of the Century Trust company of Baltimore; Henry Thomas, vice president of the same institution, and Roger Griswold, a well known Philadelphia banker. They were guests of the Biltmore during their sojourn and were recipients of numerous social attentions.

A dinner party was given in their honor by Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Williams at their home on West Andrews drive on Tuesday evening. On Wednesday a luncheon at the Capital City club was tendered to them by Joseph A. McCord, H. C. Williams and the other officers of the Mortgage Guarantee company.

Miss Jenkins Weds J. L. McMullan.

Mrs. P. L. Jenkins announces the marriage of her daughter, Ethel, to J. L. McMullan at her home in Young Harris, Ga., on August 31. Rev. H. J. Brown officiated. Only the immediate family and a few intimate friends were present.

Mr. McMullan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. O. McMullan, of Miami, Fla., formerly of Elberton, Ga., and he and his bride are recent graduates of Young Harris college and have a host of friends throughout the state.

Mr. and Mrs. McMullan left immediately after the ceremony to make their home in Miami, Fla.

College Park T. E. L. Class Meets.

The T. E. L. class of the College Park Baptist church held its meeting September 27 at the home of Mrs. C. E. Staten. The devotional was led by Mrs. J. A Hanson. Splendid reports were heard from all the officers.

Mrs. Stroiber Believes Women Will Eradicate Future Wars

Mrs. Mary Connell Stoiber, of New York, who is a prominent visitor in Atlanta, believes that women can eradicate future wars if they follow their intentions and natural spiritual tendencies. She pays high tribute to her sex, believing that they have a tremendous capacity for political and social government. Mrs. Stoiber is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Ivan L. Case, at her home on Peachtree way.

By Bessie S. Stafford.

Mrs. May Cornell Stoider, of New York, a member of the prominent family which founded and endowed Cornell university in Ithaca, who is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Ivan L. Case, on Peachtree way, believes that women have a tremendous capacity for political and social government, and if they follow their intentions and natural spiritual tendencies, they will find means to eradicate war.

"Men are quite as spiritual as women," says Mrs. Stoiber, "but have had the law of tooth and nail forced upon them for so long in order to battle with competitive industry, they needed this new element to bring about a new era in living. Suffrage is only an opening wedge. It must now be done by an organized mass consciousness of women. That's a big program to which all women have not awakened." She worked with Harriet Stanton Blatch, daughter of the late Elizabeth Cady Stanton, whose call for the first woman-suffrage convention in 1848 was destined to change the voting power of America, and marched in a suffrage parade in New York with four generations of Stantons who fought for women's rights.

Served as Pastor.

Mrs. Stoiber is a cultured, charming, and highly educated woman, who is endowed with a marvelous understanding of and sympathy for humanity. She is a church worker, having served for three years as pastor of the "New Thought Temple" in Cincinnati, and on resigning, left $75,000 in the treasury to erect a new edifice. She taught practical Christianity and her congregation was entirely free from faddists. Members of all creeds worshipped in the church and her sermons in no way interfered with their regular membership in other churches. Hers is a natural inclination towards religion, which tendency began at 14 years of age, when she worked out life's problems, and studied the relations between God and man.

Georgia clubwomen will recall the brilliant talk Mrs. Stoiber made at the dedication exercises of the Tallulah Falls school plant, when she spoke on "Practical Christianity" and the part it plays in business and everyday life.

Help in Reconstruction.

She expects to go to Miami, Fla., next week to help in the reconstruction of that storm-stricken district, working in hospitals and teaching little children whose parents are ill, and some of those orphaned in the hurricane. In the time of a calamity like that which overwhelmed Miami and its environs, Mrs. Stoiber feels the urge to go and serve constructively. Once she edited a magazine called "Right Thinking," published in Cincinnati, her broad articles applying to people all over the country, and teaching the fine art of living. On the strength of this she was made a member of the American Pen-Women association.

Loves the South.

There is a deep love for the south and southerners deep within the heart of Mrs. Stoiber, and she clings to the possibility of making Atlanta her home some day. "There is spiritual achievement coupled with commercial progress, which is making the south a center of America," she said. At 9:30 o'clock this brilliant visitor will speak Sunday morning before Mrs. Alonzo Richardson's Bible class at St. Marks church, and Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, she will talk in the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce auditorium.

Ga. Normal School News of Interest.

Statesboro, Ga., October 2.—The first vesper service of the year was held in the new college auditorium. The following officers were elected: Leader group 1, Dorothy Thomas; leader group 2, Seaborn Newton; leader group 3, Willie Belle Waters; leader group 4, Ralph Dixon; pianist, Sara Hall; song leader, Inez Durden.

A reception was given Tuesday evening on the campus. The new president, Guy H. Wells, Mrs. Wells, local board members and the faculty, composed the receiving line.

The following officers have been elected for the different classes: Sophomore college class, president, Thelma Johnson; vice president, Marion DuBose; secretary, Alberta Scarboro; treasurer, Inez Durden. Freshman class, president, Rufus Martin; vice president, Loy Waters; secretary, Sara Hall; treasurer, Seaborn Newton; committee, Helen Cone, Eunice Wilson and Maurine Donaldson. Eleventh, president, Ansel Franklin; vice president Ralph Dixon; secretary, Emelyn King; treasurer, George Mathis. Tenth, president, Ralston Geiger; vice president, Harold Coleman; secretary, Elsie Mae Goodman; treasurer, D. F. Warbock; reporter, Amy Gibbs. Ninth, president, Charley Bufe; vice president, Hugh Bedingfield; secretary, Atwood Hendrix; treasurer, Elwyn Coleman.

The Stevens and Oglethorpe Literary societies met Thursday evening to organize and elect officers for the fall term. The following were elected in the Stevens: President, Loy Waters; vice president, Thelma Johnson; secretary, Ruth Coleman; treasurer, Inez Durden; critic, Alberta Scarboro; pianist, Sara Hall; chaplain, Rufus Martin. Oglethorpe, president, Ansel Franklin; vice president, True Watson; secretary and treasurer, Bernice Loe; critic, Dorothy Thomas; chaplain, Emelyn King.

Miss Florrie Mathis, former secretary-registrar, has gone to Peabody to complete her college work. Mrs. Alvin A. Singley has been elected to fill this position.

News of Ga. State Woman's College.

Valdosta, Ga., October 2.—Of the 36 girls graduated from the Valdosta high school this year, 23 are attending college. Nineteen of these are students at the Georgia State Woman's college at Valdosta, only four of the 36 having chosen other colleges. This is the largest representation that has ever come to G. E. W. C. from the local high school.

The freshman class at the college this year, is 30 per cent larger than last year's freshman class.

The annual freshman training course is being held daily by the Student Government association. The object of the course is to help the new girls at the college to get settled in their new surroundings.

A steak supper at the Y. W. C. A. clubhouse was given Friday evening by a group of upper classmen in honor of their freshmen "Little Sisters."

On Friday evening, October 1, the faculty entertained the student body with a reception on the terrace of Converse hall. The first group in the receiving line was composed of Dr. R. H. Powell, president of the college; Mrs. Powell, J. F. Wood, dean of the college; Mrs. Wood and Miss Annie Powe Hopper, dean of women.

At a meeting of the Student Government association, on the evening of October 1, J. F. Wood, dean of the college, gave a very helpful talk to the entire student body. His subject was, "Ideals of Good Government."

Interesting News of Wesleyan College.

Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., October 2.—"Grandmother's day" was the idea carried out at the Y. W. C. A. and student government prom given for the freshmen Saturday night. Girls in hoop skirts served punch from vine-covered wells. Misses Katherine Catchings, Atlanta, and Lucille Jordan, Perry, entertained the guests with the minuet.

Monday afternoon the freshmen were entertained at a picture show party given by their junior sisters. Miss Mary Nell Wiley, president of the junior class, was hostess.

Friday was "Sophomore day." The freshmen were made to dress in gingham dresses, tennis shoes, green hairbows with no cosmetics on their faces. That night at 11 o'clock sophomore court was held and many freshmen were tried for the misdemeanors of the day.

At a recent meeting of the Florida club, the following girls were elected as officers: Miss Margaret Griffen, Sarasota, president; Miss Mary Edna Dowling, Miami, secretary and Miss Suzanne Wilhelm, St. Petersburg, treasurer.

The Veterropt, the college annual, is to be dedicated to Miss M. Virginia Garner, head of the department of journalism, Miss Frances Horner, Atlanta, president of the Student Government association, announced Saturday week in chapel. This was decided by the vote of the senior class.

SLIPPERS!

For Every Mode, Every Mood and Every Moment!

by I. MILLER

Fascinating styles! Beautiful materials! Clever combinations! Where else could you find the dazzling variety that insures the perfect slipper for every mode and every movement?

The Modes of the Moment in Slippers and Frocks!

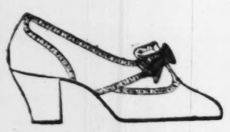

That the slipper is the most important accessory to the successful costume is recognized by every well-dressed woman. The more discerning are also aware that the I. Miller presentation is especially created to include a perfect slipper to harmonize with every smart type of frock.

Paris is sponsoring sports attire for most daytime occasions while I. Miller illustrates many appropriate slippers for such costumes.

Paris says beige and brown while I. Miller concurs, showing many variations of these shades. Satins in frocks, says Paris. Satins in slippers, says I. Miller, and shows many alluring slippers in this lustrous material.

To avoid a long shopping tour in order to obtain a slipper to accompany a certain gown, the knowing woman instinctively turns to the shop that shows I. Miller shoes.

TRY THIS FOR YOUR RHEUMATISM—Miss Helen Coyne, of Los Angeles, who does this high-flying stunt called the "air split," says it's a sure cure. (Herbert)

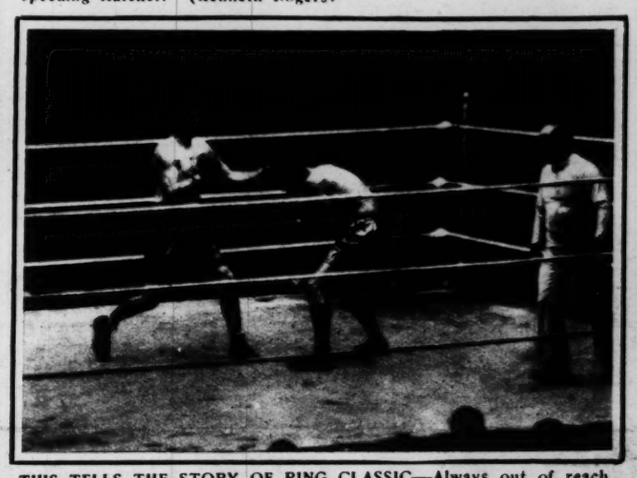

RED AND BLACK SMOTHERS MERCER—The University of Georgia pried the lid off the 1926 gridiron season last Saturday with a 20-to-0 victory over Mercer university. "Wee Willie" Hatcher, veteran Georgia back, is here seen ripping a hole through the Baptist line for a gain of eight yards. John Parks, Mercer captain, right, and Skelton, No. 6, Mercer fullback, are seen clutching vainly for a grip on the speeding Hatcher. (Kenneth Rogers)

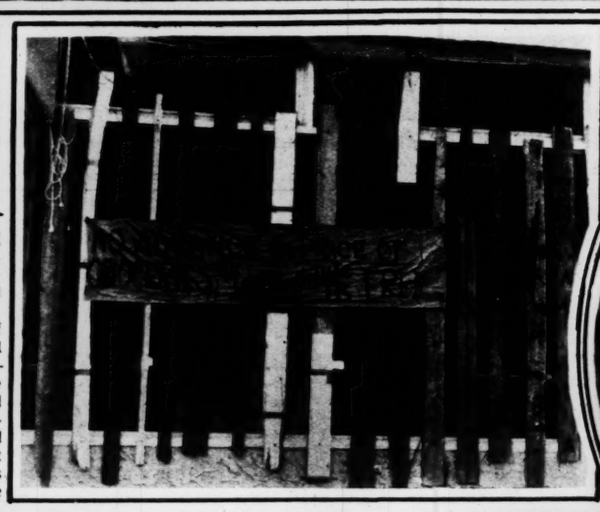

WORLD'S NEW BOXING KING—James Joseph (Gene) Tunney, native New Yorker, with the smile of victory on his face, snapped just after his victory over Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, at Philadelphia. (International)

THIS TELLS THE STORY OF RING CLASSIC—Always out of reach of Jack Dempsey's slow gloves and peppering the former champion almost at will, Tunney gave the whole wide world an opportunity to stand up on its hind legs and shout: "Well, I always did say Dempsey wasn't such a fighter as they tried to make you believe." (Herbert)

VANDY'S FLYING ACE IN ACTION—Captain Cargyle, of the Nashville university's team, here is shown doing a hurdle over Cecil, guard of the Vanderbilt eleven. (Tracy Mathewson)

CARING FOR HER OWN—This sign, appearing on the latticed front of a Miami grocery, the plate glass windows of which were shattered by the recent hurricane, is typical of the spirit that prompted merchants and business interests of all kinds to protect those made homeless and penniless by the tornado.

WHERE DEMPSEY LOST HIS TITLE—And incidentally, where the great American public spent another staggering sum to see two men maul each other. A general view of the great Sesqui-Centennial stadium at Philadelphia. (International)

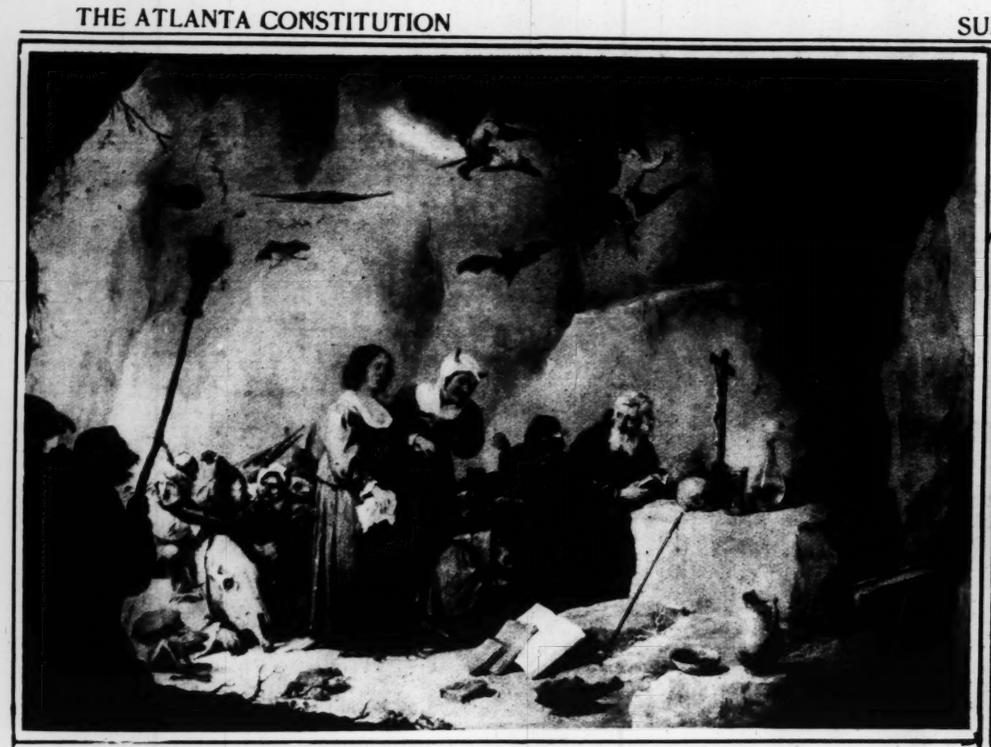

LIFE FLUID FOR STORM SUFFERERS—Captain H. Weir Cook, of the army air service, stationed at Indianapolis, is shown transferring his cargo of typhoid serum designed for the hurricane-swept area in Florida to an airplane at Candler Field after his own ship had been forced down at Marietta by lack of oil. An army plane from Montgomery sped to Atlanta to carry the serum to Florida. In this photo "Doug" Davis, local pilot, is seen refueling while Sergeant W. T. Sherwood, of the fourth corps area headquarters, passes up the precious serum to Captain Cook. (Francis E. Price)

MIAMI TOURIST CAMP STREWN WITH WRECKAGE—Here's a scene in north Miami of what once was a neat and orderly tourist camp. The storm converted it into a twisted mass of wreckage.

MAIL PILOT LEAPED TO SAFETY—When his air mail plane ran out of gas near Ottawa, Ill., Charles A. Lindbergh climbed to 5,000 feet and jumped with his parachute. He fell through 4,000 feet of inky darkness and 1,000 feet of fog to safety in a corn field. See what happened to the plane. (International)

DESTITUTE IN STORM FED AND HOUSED—This picture, which reminds one of scenes of Polish or Armenian refugees, was taken at Hialeah, where all who lost home and fortune in the great hurricane were fed, clothed and housed until permanent arrangements could be made for them.

"TEMPTATION OF ST. ANTHONY," another in the series of the world's greatest masterpieces, was painted by David Teniers, Jr., known to the art world as "Teniers, the Younger." For story of this painting see today's Constitution Magazine.

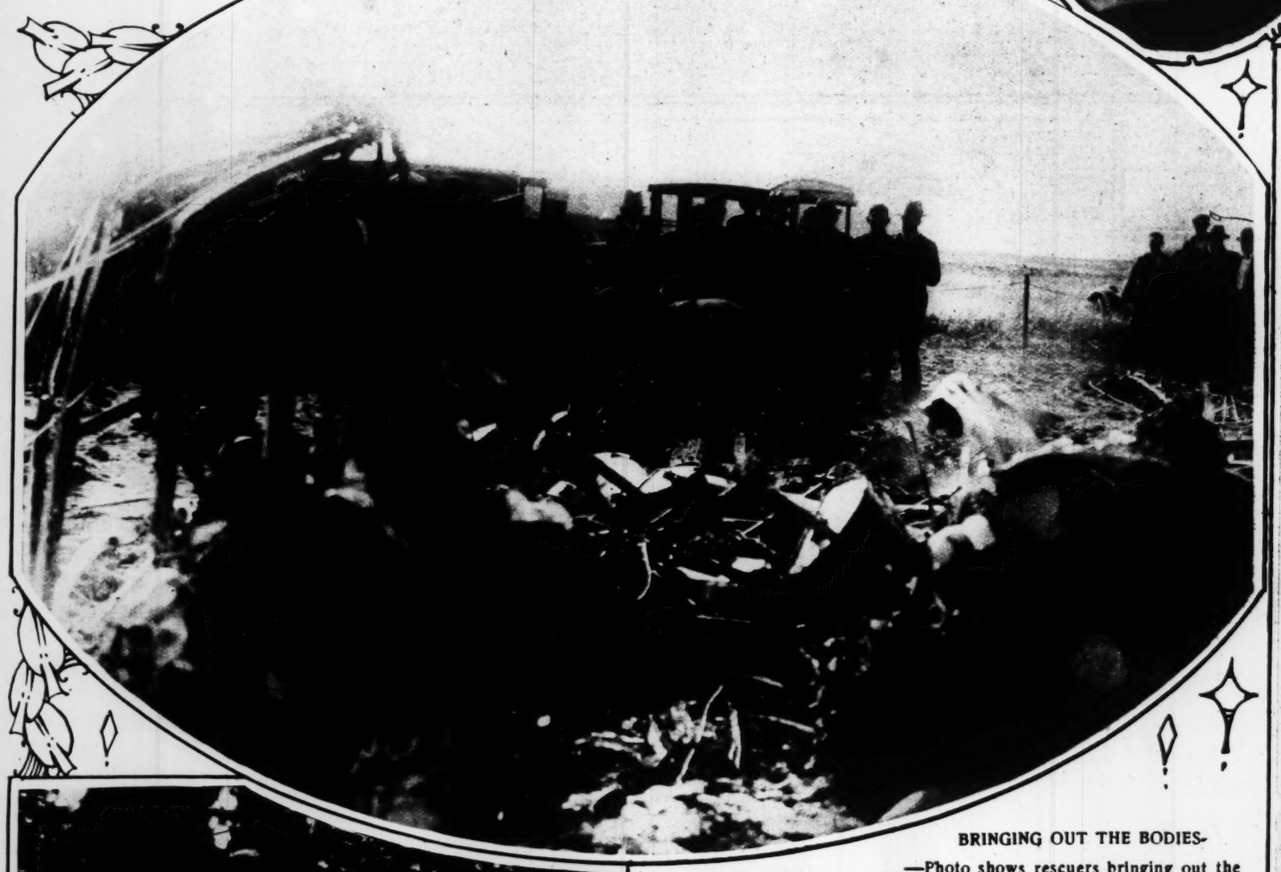

TALENTED ATLANTA STUDENT—She is Miss Helene Verdery Rosenbusch, charming young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Rosenbusch, of Fairview road, who left Saturday to enter Miss Mason's school, The Castles, at Tarrytown, N. Y. Miss Rosenbusch also will take private instruction in dancing under Michel Fokine, Russian teacher.

LOOKING BACKWARD.

As I pass the forty-sixth mile-stone in retail food merchandising in Atlanta. I find myself in a retrospective mood which, I suppose, is only natural under the circumstances.

Forty-six years is a long time and as I glance backward over this near half-century of time I can see many, many faces; some now gone to their final reward, some old ones still with us and many recently made.

These faces represent friends which I have made, literally by the thousands, and they come up before me in this reverie from every station in life, and even in this manner it affords me much pleasure, for friends are one's most prized possessions.

These friends have made the firm of "KAMPER'S" possible by their loyal support. I have tried, always, to merit their confidence and esteem by the manner in which I have conducted my business, feeling that I was not only a merchant and a citizen but that in dispensing foods to my friends and their families—wives and children—I had a greater responsibility as a guardian of their health and physical well-being, and I have tried to keep the faith.

New Fabric

With Charmosette—the perfected elastic—Gossard begins a new era in fine corsetry

Charmosette is a new, superior washable elastic fabric which has revolutionized modern corsetry. It is used exclusively in The Gossard Line of Beauty.

Charmosette wears three times as long as any other elastic fabric. Even the hardest service will not cause it to overstretch or lose its strength.

Gossards in Charmosette suffer no deterioration from perspiration acids—may be laundered daily in hot or cold water without the slightest injury to the fabric or weakening of its elasticity.

This marvelous material may be cut at any angle and altered to please. Will not run, pull, tear or break. Gossards in Charmosette are thus fitted perfectly—cannot "ride"—mould and support the figure as is impossible with ordinary elastic fabrics.

Your new Gossard in Charmosette and Royal Batiste—a new material with the beauty of satin and the durability of finest brocade—will fit, wear and look as good as new even after a year's wear and laundering.

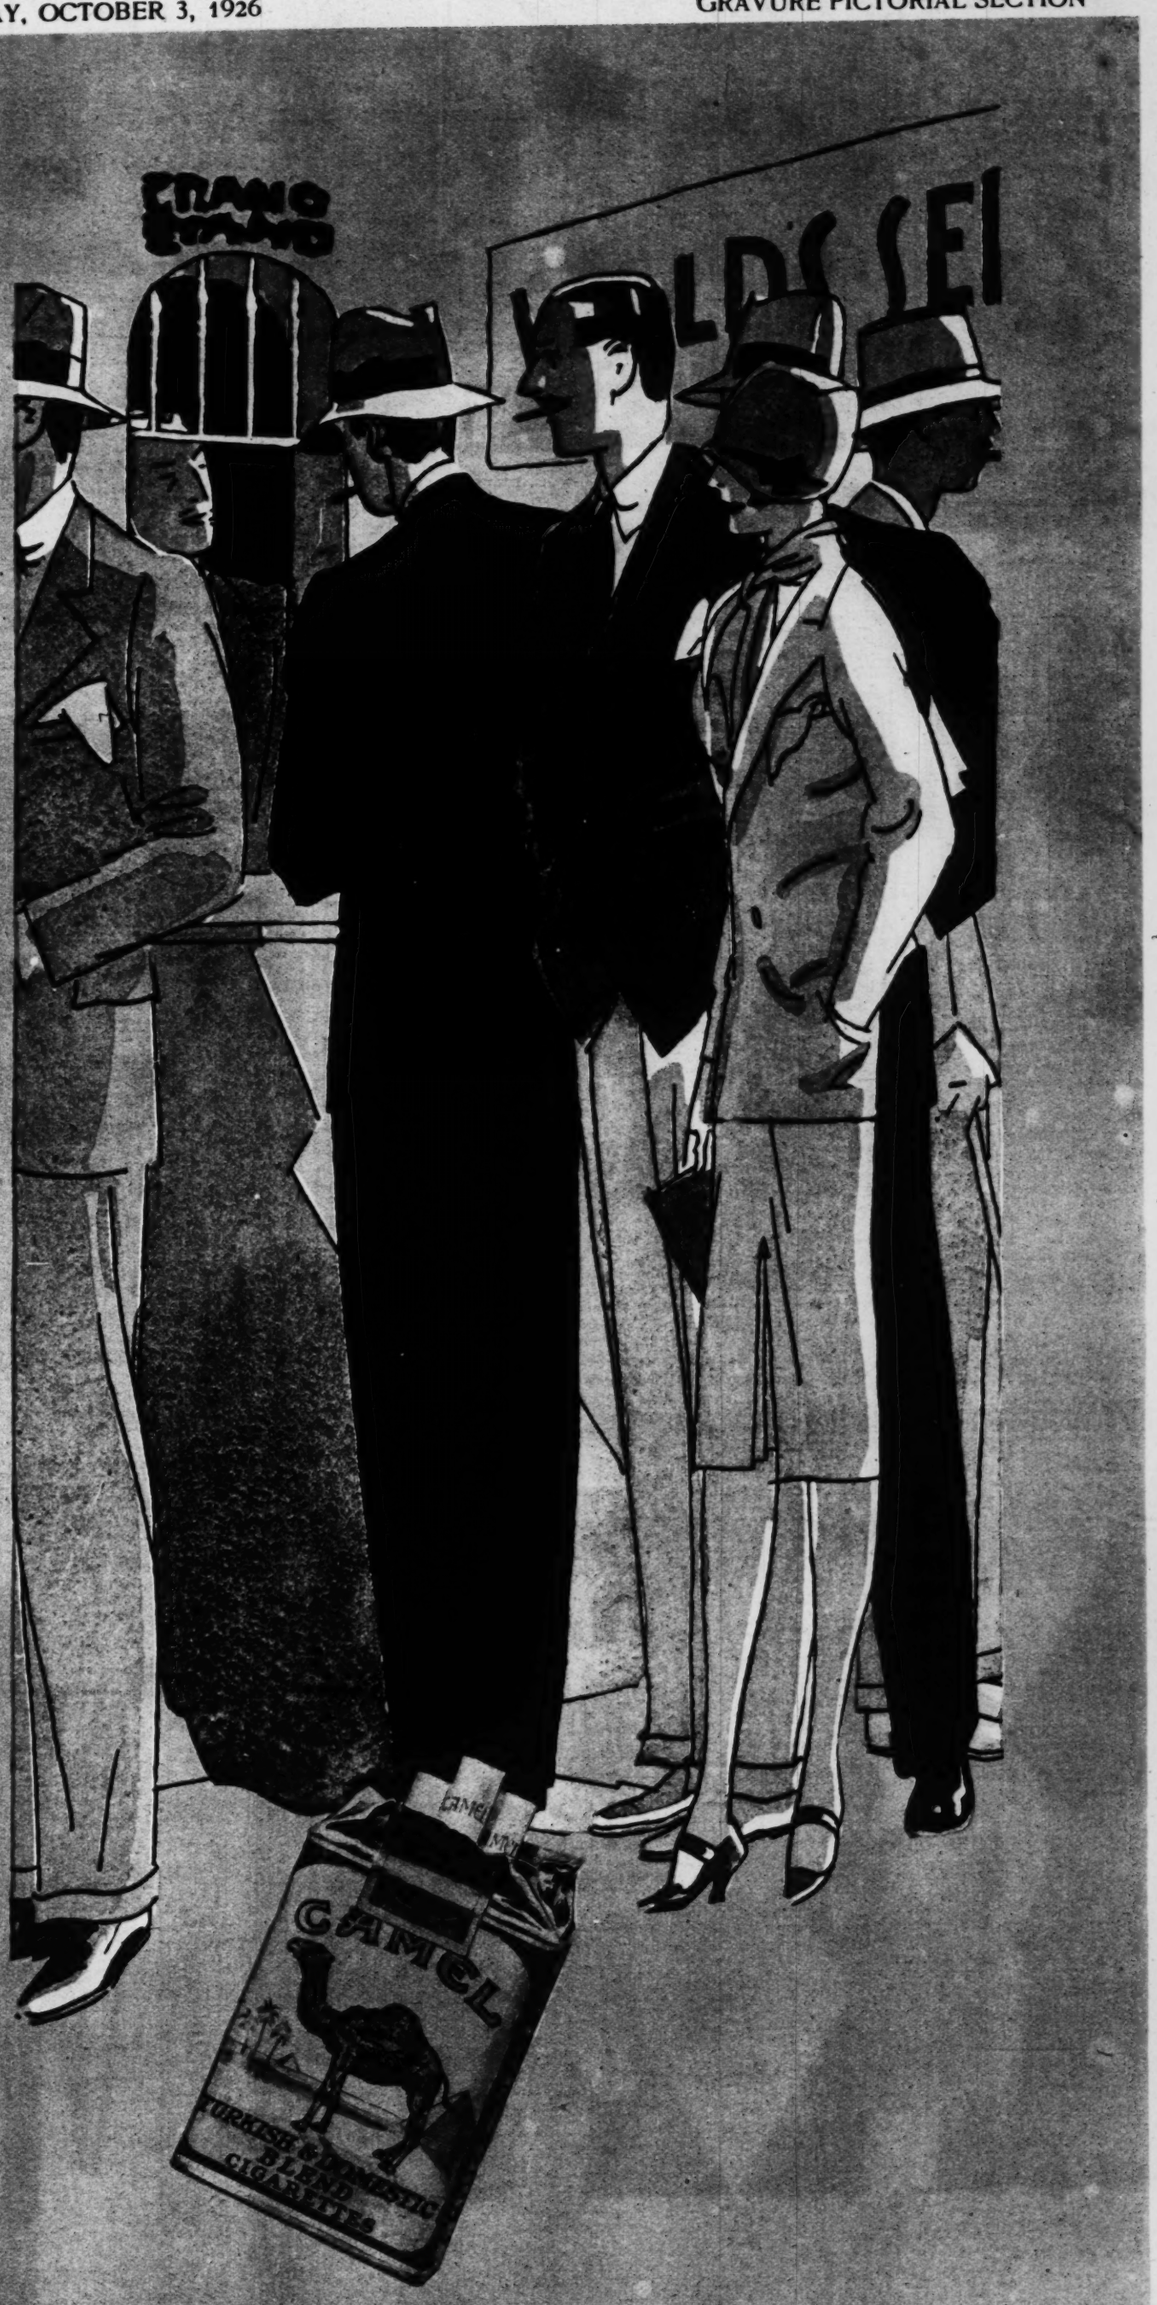

Remember, you can obtain garments fashioned with Charmosette in all cities, but only in stores which regularly carry Gossards, and only in garments honored with the Gossard label.

The VAN DER DONCK MANSION

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

by Grace Torrey

The Story of Honour McMinn, Whose Drab Existence in the City Was Brought to a Sudden End By a Determined and Humorous Aunt.

"She was all that Honour could have wished as her niece wept out her happy story."

THE major advantage of a north exposure is that the half pint bottle of cream, renewed every other morning, enjoys its lease of usefulness, cooling upon the window sill, well into May. After that a minimum of refrigeration is imperative for the kitchenette behind the gingham curtain. This carefully calculated amount is based mainly on what "Ice" is willing to carry up five flights of stairs. Early in her New York career Miss McMinn learned that while the spirit of "Ice" could brook this exercise for fifteen cents per climb, it flagged and flatly declined to soar for ten cents. The summer months, therefore, were sorrowfully budgeted to include an additional fifteen cents every other day.

This may seem frugal finance to an age accustomed to calculate in nothing short of billions. It is true, however, that Honour McMinn, one of the six millions who teem in Greater Manhattan, did her share of teeming by the aid of these and other careful devices, lopping off fifteen cents here or thirteen there, and so bringing the total outgo of her metropolitan venture safely within its monthly income. By safety, Miss McMinn meant more than her New York bank required her to keep in reserve. She had made a vow with that inner self of whose existence no one else in the world was aware to lay by as well a fixed sum each month for emergencies.

By emergencies she meant, among other things, the event which she felt reasonably sure might find itself in the public print almost any day under some such heading as "Hit and Run Motorist Leaves Woman Thirty-eight Unconscious."

When she first became a tenant of the Van der Donck Mansion she saw the heading as "Woman Twenty-eight." Her inner self stuck to twenty-eight long after her candid outer eye suggested a change.

These vital statistics did not, however, affect the nest egg which she continued to lay by, and which she budgeted along with insurance, life and accident, at the beginning of each fiscal year.

Emergencies included also railroad fare for the sudden trip to Agatha which she might, in the course of nature, expect to make.

It was in Agatha, on a sunny June morning, as she and her Aunt Delight walked home from commencement together that a remarkable conversation took place. It was the fifth commencement from which they had walked home since the day when they had not walked home from her own. She was twenty-two on that earlier day, and had walked home with the new English professor. He was a blond, newly come from a greater eastern university. Honour had taken romanticism with him. Romanticism was a course. Courses may be taken without their spirit suffusing the spirit of the taker. Professor Bartlett's course, however, in the case of Honour McMinn was more than a course in name only. Something beyond tales of wonder and terror, or Germanic influences, passed across his desk to the spirit of Honour McMinn, the exceptionally promising senior in seat thirty-two, row seven.

As they walked home together from commencement he was as pale as she was rosy. He lingered at her door. Eloquence looked from his eyes into hers. And yet he dropped her hand and went away. Honour McMinn went upstairs, threw herself down on her neat bed, regardless of the harm to her white commencement dress, and wept bitterly.

The fact was that Professor Bartlett was hideously poor. He was one of those brilliant and undernourished young men to whom the college president refers at each commencement when he states to an approving public that "eighteen per cent of the graduates of the present senior class have either wholly or in part supported themselves throughout their college course."

These young men, as he does not go on to state, are then so depleted in pocket that a source of income is a shrieking necessity. The ones who understand kilowatts or atomic weights can usually sink rather fast to low browed affluence in industry. For an exceptional young man, full of language and facts about liteuature, an idealistic professorship usually offers. Such a professorship at the small, privately endowed college of Agatha served Professor Bartlett's turn. To Agatha, therefore, with some debts remaining from his undergraduate struggle, and with two venerable and now dependent parents, he thankfully turned.

He was sure of two thousand dollars a year. It looked like a fortune. It did, in fact, serve to keep going himself and his dependents in a degree of security which they had not known for many years. There was no question, however, of a family of four. Marriage for Professor Bartlett was a remote dream.

The dream might rosily, nay, agonizingly, invite. But he was a gentleman. He dropped her pulsing fingers and Honour McMinn fled upstairs to weep.

Five commencements later her Aunt Delight said, as they walked home together: "Honour, why don't you strike out for yourself? There's nothing for a girl in Agatha."

Honour looked at her aunt, a wild hope in her eyes. At this particular commencement Professor Bartlett had been so busy with the Academic Procession that he had not even looked her way. She had spent the five years since her own commencement teaching mathematics in the Agatha high school.

As her niece looked at her with large eyes, Aunt Delight continued. "I'm hale and hearty, I've got my friends, and I've money enough. It looks to me like you ought to light out of this town while you're young enough to get some good of it."

"Of course," she went on, after they were inside the house, "if that school board had any sense you and Professor Bartlett could get married. But as soon as you got married they'd fire you. So there you are."

Honour turned very red.

"Professor Bartlett has never said one word about getting married," she said bravely. Her aunt snorted.

"He don't have to say. It's written all over him whenever you come in sight. But you can't wait around in Agatha forever. If I was you, I'd strike out. I could always send for you if there was any need."

It was this last suggestion that made Honour McMinn keep ready in her checking account the amount of her fare out to Agatha. Aunt Delight continued, however, to be hale and hearty. By the time Miss McMinn's inner self agreed that the headline should read Woman Thirty-Eight, instead of Woman Twenty-Eight, Aunt Delight was still more free from ills of the flesh than most women twenty years her junior. Her weekly letters gave a pleasant picture of daily life. She went to the Ladies' Aid, she sided with the minister of the church fight, she served two years on the town council, she was treasurer of the Woman's Club, she gave a tea for the new president's wife, she entertained the bridge club. She helped take care of Professor Bartlett's mother in her last painful illness. She went three times a week, now, and read to the father, blind and bedridden and pitifully alone.

"Professor Bartlett," she wrote, "is that thin he looks like you could pull him through a knot hole. He certainly does set store by your letters."

She reread Aunt Delight's letter, and with her second cup of coffee was ready for the morning paper. The smile and color evoked by the allusion to Professor Bartlett lingered as she scanned the news.

On this morning the insidious chemistry of Aunt Delight's allusion fermented throughout all phases of the morning ritual. By the time her mind apprehended that ice could still be rubbed over the face after it had been vigorously dished with her wa-ter, and that New York society expected to open its social season, as always, with the first night of grand opera, a decision had resulted as the precipitation of these contributing forces. Outwardly, the same neat, quiet, pleasantly sensible figure that always descended her five flights of stairs, she emerged into the nine o'clock crispness of the late October morning inwardly a new woman. Not since that day, over ten years before, when she had turned her back on Agatha had Honour McMinn so defied all those prudent inhibitions which were hers by hereditary right and environmental practice. Her inner self had, without argument or discussion, boiled to the surface.

She walked rapidly along by the iron picket fence around her little park, enjoying the flutter of autumn leaf, and color of bright coated favored children playing within its boundaries. She went half a square out of her way to pass Number Eighty, on whose tight-lipped windows and boarded doorway she gazed with pleasurable excitement. Number Eighty's brown stone front and marble steps belonged to the Willy Westons, those interesting children of the gold spoon intelligentsia who lived in this old quarter and made themselves a center of intellectual friction. The morning paper had told her that the Willy Westons, whose domestic fortunes had seemed to be somewhat on the rocks, had become reconciled. She was returning this week from Paris and he from Alaska. Both would occupy their box in the golden horseshoe next Monday night.

Even as Miss McMinn walked briskly by, workmen were arriving to take down the boards from the doorway and unseal the tight-lipped windows. She looked upon their activities with a brightly conspiring eye. Thanks to her breakfast chemistry, she felt herself to be a part of these goings on. The Willy Westons, occupying their box on next Monday night, might be unaware of it, but she knew that in a good seven-dollar seat, in range of their reconciled figures, would sit an appropriately gowned and coiffured New York woman, Thirty-Eight, but certainly not Unconscious. Her ears would be attuned to the harmonies of the stage, and her eyes would possess a keenness which no detail of domestic harmony could escape.

Her Saturday morning duties in the business office of the All-American Woolen Trades Journal were performed in her customary desiccated manner. She sent out bills for overdue subscriptions and advertisements of a new All-American line of plaids originating on the backs of American born sheep and progressing by successive patriotic stages to the hands of All-American wholesalers and retailers. She made out pay checks, gave good but unwelcome advice to the bleached stenographer and reached one o'clock without varying from her usual reliable and intelligent behavior.

At one she became a drop in the Niagara of human beings that poured out of her downtown skyscraper. There are drops that drop and drops that effervesce. Miss McMinn buoyantly bounded on the surface of her Niagara, permitting other drops to sink into their appropriate subways, while she headed toward those quiet cross streets along upper Fifth avenue where Beauty may be had by all who speak the password. In her neat brown handbag she could hear the password uttered by the voice of Money, talking as always with golden persuasiveness. She had drawn out on the way to the office a sum so eloquent that Beauty, she was confident, would lie submissive in her hand before the afternoon was over.

She lunched expensively at Etienne's and feasted her eye as well as her digestion upon the food provided by his smart clientele and famous cuisine. Then with the golden voice still warbling within her handbag she set out upon her quest of Beauty.

The voice warbled in other hands by sundown, hands expert in effecting such exchange. It was an afternoon of happiness and full reward. Not in vain for ten years had Honour McMinn, breakfasting by her fifth story window, studied the riddle of What to Wear and How to Wear It. The same intelligence that had made her face vivid in seat thirty-two, row seven, had incubated long the ideas provided by style shows, Beauty Hints and shop windows. The adequate and not unpleasing exterior visible to the world for this long decade burst its cocoon on this fateful Saturday and Honour McMinn's inner self knew as she gave her address to one courteous saleswoman after another that Beauty of the sort appropriate to thirty-eight would be hers when the opening strains of "Aida" fell upon her ears and the ears of the Willy Westons in their box in the golden horseshoe.

The brown handbag lay flat upon her bureau that night. Not a whisper came from it save the lonely whisper of her seven-dollar ticket for the opening night. Miss McMinn had even walked home because there was not in its depths the necessary dime for bus fare along the avenue. Happiness sustained her feet along the way, however, and carried them up her five flights of stairs. Happiness flavored the soft boiled egg on which she dined and lent champagne quality to the cup of hot milk with which she washed down her evening buttered toast. As she dined Happiness stood about her in boxes. True to their given word, the courteous saleswomen had sent everything Special. Until nine o'clock breathless boys kept staggering up the five flights, each boy leaving a box mysteriously whispering of Happiness, present and to come.

By midnight Happiness had enveloped her. She had seen herself in everything. Her ankles clad in pale gold silk were slender. Her foot in its brown suede shoe with its glittering buckles was a neat foot suddenly glorified. Silk lay next her whole body. Its outer sheath was quiet in color and subtle in line. Her cloak was soberly magnificent.

"No one," she told herself proudly, "will look at me twice."

What she meant was that in the first night crowd decked in its finest she would not be an alien. She looked at her image and approved without reserve. The brocaded velvet evening cloak was better than metai cloth, less conspicuous, infinitely more to the manner born.

"It's wonderful," she said to herself happily in bed, lights out, creams emollient and astringent rubbed on and off again.

"It's wonderful, just for once, to have one grand splurge!"

On the morning after her dress parade Honour McMinn's pen flew on inspired wings. The actual had invaded her life sufficiently to make her discussion of the week's new play and the approach of grand opera glow with unusual verisimilitude. The boxes standing about her inspired a truthful description of just how she would look in her seven-dollar seat.

"My seat," she said, "is close to the Willy Westons, my neighbors just across the square. They will both be back in time for the gala occasion."

Why should the letter go on to explain the well-known truth that a neighbor in New York and a neighbor in Agatha differed in neighborliness as one star differeth from another in glory? Would it be Honour McMinn's fault if Aunt Delight went ahead and imagined interchanges of crab apple jelly, or neighborly walking side by side in the park in the evening? Decidedly, she could not be her aunt's keeper in the understanding of the English language.

The week went by, devoted to her usual routines, down at what Aunt Delight always referred to as My Niece's Magazine. The discrepancy there, again, rests on Aunt Delight's own shoulders. Some early letter had, of course, said that it was the All-American Wool Trades Magazine, and that Honour was in the business ofifce. It was no fault of her niece if Aunt Delight thereupon identified her with New York's literary elect, and had even, in the decade, built up the belief that because of her connection with this New York magazine her niece got two free tickets to everything in town.

On Saturday afternoon she had a water wave, which accentuated the pleasant tendency of her hair to curl. On Saturday night she slept in a hair net to give the thing a good set. The next morning a knock at her dor disturbed the pouring of her morning coffee.

A Western Union boy handed to the cold fingers of Honour McMinn his yellow envelope. She sighed, and heard him running down the first of the five flights before she closed her door. As she tore open the envelope she knew that the long awaited emergency had arrived and that the call of Nature had come. She read the fateful message.

"Aunt Delight gravely injured motor accident urge come at once.

"GRANTLAND BARTLETT."

Ten words.

She was prepared for the telegram, in a way. Even the splendid extravagance of yesterday had not destroyed the nest egg laid by for this moment. Yet who is ever quite prepared for the ten important words when Fate actually speaks them?

Her first thought, after she finished blushing over the implied intimacy of the word Grantland, was, "I can give my ticket to that bleached stenographer. She'll look ridiculous in that seat."

Such was her efficiency that two o'clock the next afternoon saw her, with all packing done, complete arrangements made at the offices of the All-American Woolen Trade Journal for an indefinite absence, her first-night-seat given to the bleached stenographer, her ticket to Agatha stowed in her brown handbag, and herself in her Pullman speeding westward. At the hour when the opening strains of "Aida" reached the ears of the Willy Westons, Honour McMinn was climbing soberly into upper ten, withdrawing her neat ankle from the top of the step-ladder, and thinking as she did so that in all probability she would never see it again in a pale gold silk stocking.

She had put Happiness into her trunk after some debate. Would Agatha ever offer her any opportunity for the velvet dress and the brocade evening coat? Then she remembered that Aunt Delight would love it. How badly were people hurt when gravely injured?

Gravely, she reflected, as she lay in upper ten, was a characteristic word. No one but Grantland Bartlett would have used it in a telegram. Grantland! As she found herself thinking it her cheeks burned becomingly in the darkness of her berth.

A day and a night beyond Chicago lay Agatha. It was Brantland Bartlett's face that she saw waiting for her in the early morning sunshine outside the new station. For all the excitement of seeing that the station was new, she saw all too clearly that he was too thin, too pale, and that his neat suit had seen more than one season. His smile, as his outstretched hand helped her down from the platform of the Overland, was as she remembered it as she sat in seat thirty-two, row seven.

"Aunt Delight?" she asked him.

"Making a remarkable recovery! An indomitable, an amazing woman."

He was getting her into a little car as he described the accident. Aunt Delight had skidded, as she rounded the corner by the postoffice. Her car collided with a telegraph pole. She had gone through the windshield. Her first words on regaining consciousness had been, "Send for Honour!"

After all, her injuries had been less grave than was at first feared. There was a broken wrist, a badly sprained ankle, some lacerations about the head that bled profusely, but turned out to be fairly superficial. There was shock and weakness. And almost every hour of the day there was the wish that Honour would come.

He left her at the familiar doorstep, and she heard his little car making extraordinary reports of progress as it disappeared up the street. Up in the serene expanse of her old four-poster Aunt Delight, looking like a rosy Turk in her head bandages.

"Turn around and let me see your back," she commanded as her niece entered. "Is that where they have the fullness now in New York? You never said if you cut your hair or not. My opinion is it's going out."

Honour kissed her venerable relative.

"Darling!" she said, her voice a little tremulous and her eyes wet. Suddenly it seemed to her that she had been away a long time, that Agatha was a sweet, green, shady town, and that Aunt Delight's quiet bedroom was heaven.

"Tell me, really, how you are."

"I'm all right," said Aunt Delight, in a surprisingly hearty voice. "First time I'd tried to drive the thing alone. I took a car full of neighbors out to Professor Bartlett's father's funeral. He was eighty-nine, and hadn't seen a thing for five years, poor soul! Fortunately, I'd got everybody home. Nobody hurt but me. And I'd insured it for all kinds of accidents. I'm glad your skirts are short. No use in getting old before your time. Nobody does these days. I'm young myself as I ever was."

The one eye not obscured by bandages verified by its brightness all that she had said.

"I've got Professor Bartlett's housekeeper now. He don't have much need of her, except for meals, and he's coming over here for dinners."

Honour McMinn, sitting by her injured aunt's bedside, blushed a becoming blush. A picture had formed itself before her eyes of herself at Aunt Delight's old pie crust table facing Grantland Bartlett. There would, she foresaw, be many dinners before the venerable invalid sat with them. As she looked solicitously into her aunt's one visible eye she knew that the accident had been deplorable. She realized again the pang that she had felt as she tore open the telegram. She knew afresh that she owed years of devotion to her aunt. And yet there bounded in her veins an irrelevant joy that she had brought along in her trunk the pale gold stockings, the brocaded velvet wrap, and the quiet but undeniably good afternoon dress of that rosy shade of gray that made her eyes so blue. The dress had been a mere incident in her career on that memorable Saturday afternoon two weeks ago.

"As soon as your trunk comes," said Aunt Delight, "I want you should show me all your New York clothes.

Ed Wynn's Question Box

—BY— ED WYNN.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—My son, who is quite a joker, told me he had a dream where he went to bed in a broken down wooden shack and he woke up in a beautiful stone house. What is he trying to put over on me? Sincerely—L. CHUGUM.

Answer:—What your son told you could really happen. He went to sleep in a wooden building and awakened in a stone one. Very easily explained: While he was sleeping a severe wind storm came up and made the building rock.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—It has often been said that women talk less during the month of February than any other month in the year. Do you believe that and if so, how do you account for it? Sincerely—ANN SIRMEE.

Answer:—I not only believe, but I know it is a fact. The reason for it is that February is the shortest month.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—During my two weeks' vacation I spent three days on a country farm. One day I asked a farmer how he could tell the age of a chicken and he said he could tell the age of a chicken by his teeth. Now how in the world could that farmer say he could tell a chicken's age by his teeth? A chicken hasn't any teeth, has it? Yours truly—PEEDEE QUEW.

Answer:—That is very simple. It is true that a chicken hasn't any teeth, but the farmer has.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I went to my first baseball game yesterday and enjoyed it very much. One thing puzzles me, though. Why does the catcher wear a muzzle? Truly yours —A. BRAHAM.

Answer:—The catcher of a baseball team wears a muzzle so he can't bite the man who is batting.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—They say that love can be encouraged with music. It sounds silly to me. For instance: Could any one make love in "B" sharp? Sincerely—BARRY TONE.

Answer:—No, but lots of people can make love in "A Flat."

Dear Mr. Wynn:—A young man has been annoying me for some time because I refuse to marry him. Wherever I go he follows me and asks me time and time again to marry him. I do not love him and have told him so. Last night he said he would never give up and would follow me to the end of the earth. Please tell me how to get rid of him. Sincerely—IVL POYSEN.

Answer:—Let him follow you to the end of the earth and when you get him there just push him off.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am very fond of riding but most of my pleasure is spoiled because I am pestered with tire trouble, punctures, etc. Can you tell me how I could enjoy a long ride without having tire trouble? Yours truly—MAG NETOW.

Answer:—Get on a train.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—There is a man living next door to me who has a very red nose. In fact if you see him walking along and the sun is shining on his nose, it looks like a red light on the back of a car. He told me his nose got red from glasses. Is it possible for a man's nose to get red from glasses? Truly yours—M. T. HEAD.

Answer:—Glasses of what?

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I have just received a circular from a real estate broker advertising some far land on Long Island near Montauk Point. The circular claims that you can get two crops a year on every acre of ground. Is that possible? Truly yours—WILL I. N. VEST.

Answer:—I know the farm land out there, and the only way you could get two crops the same year would be to stand the acre of ground on its end and plant on each side of it.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I met a man yesterday who says he knows another man who was married for twenty-three years and then shook his wife when she was forty-five years old. What do you think of that? Truly yours—GOODE N. KLEVVER.

Answer:—That's not a bad shake.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I have just hired a new cook and she is very tall. Does that mean that she will stay long? Yours truly—MISS CAL. Q. LATE.

Answer next week.

Broadway Banter

—By— FORNEY WYLY.

"JUST LIFE" is the touching title of the play in which Marjorie Rambeau is whiling away her evenings this fall. This play, I am inclined to believe, is a faithful portrait of life as it is lived in Snappy Stories. This "Just Life" is obviously drama of the cheap fiction school, but what is life without a breath of Breezy Stories now and then?

It's all about a retired opera-singer who finds the husband she has been idolizing is as false as Auntie Jessie's teeth. And her daughter, whom she thought the soul of unsophistication, is just before becoming one of the gayest members. This paves the way for Miss Rambeau to come sweeping down the stairs, dragging behind her one of those third-act trains that can never get entirely on the stage at any one time. She is then permitted to make that heart-breaking speech you find on page 45 of any True Confessions you have handy.

There is nothing in "Just Life" to improve your mind. But then who was ever interested in improving their minds?

* * * *

I am more than sure that I saw Anne and Frank Owens being jostled among the theater crowd the other night, but before I could be sure, they had been carried on. You're really much closer to your friends in California than you are the ones you see being swept by you in Broadway traffic. On that very same night, when the sidewalk undertow was so bad, I also thought I saw floating past me Mrs. Murphey and Katherine, with Conkey and Julia Whitehead close behind.

Then at luncheon the other day I saw none other than "Dinnie" McDonald. I proudly pointed him out to some friends of mine as the individual who had taught me the various dance routines I did in the back row chorus of the first three-hundred Junior League Follies. And I still regret having heard one of these friends murmur, as he looked at Mr. McDonald, "He taught you the dance routines? No matter his hair is snow-white."

* * * *

"Castles in the Air" is the musical show which at the moment has to be seen if you ever hope to get anywhere. At dinner-parties these nights, leprosy is far more excusable than the statement that you haven't seen "Castles in the Air." In most respects, this comic opera is entirely deserving of the rush it is getting. Only about its tiresome plot has this show any cause to feel embarrassed. And while the librettists were going about writing a dull book, they seem to have overlooked nothing.

But as for magical music and sprightly dancing, "Castles in the Air" is the one. "Lantern of Love" which found its way to the victrola long before the show reached New York, is perhaps the most enchanting fox-trot of the year. This number is softly played during a great deal of the play's dialogue and deadens as much as possible the pain that dialogue is causing.

Furthermore the spasmodic chorus in "Castles in the Air" have more original dance steps than all the other shows in town put together. And they go about it as if they'd rather be in the chorus than the White House. But as for that matter, who wouldn't?

I thought Vivienne Segal was excellent as the girl, and J. Harold Murray thought he was as the Prince, so everything turned out just fine, didn't it?

* * * *

At the performance I saw of "Castles in the Air" Norma and Constance Talmadge with their husbands were second-row spectators. Constance's new husband was getting a lot of attention from the audience, many of whom were wrenching themselves out of their seats trying to get a good look at him. That woman who I expected to fall out of the balcony at any moment, declined to do anything quite that entertaining. The Constance's husband is extremely good-looking.

Constance, herself, was all in yellow and smoked her cigarette between the acts with evident enjoyment. Norma in black looked lovely but not as much so as the night I saw her at "Sour Grapes" when she seemed a heavenly vision in orange chiffon and ostrich feathers. These two sisters do not act a bit bored at the theater, but appear to be able to laugh quite easily.

* * * *

I knew it was only a question of time before there'd be a piece of music called "Jackass Blues." Think of the many, many people who should be able to dance quite well to that tune.

* * * *

I have previously made casual reference in these columns to the tremendous number of people who seem to have been in DeRussey's Lane the night of the Hall-Mills murder. Each day brings forth another distressed lady who after much agonizing admits she was there with the last person in the world she should have been with. From present indications there was standing room only that night. Wouldn't it be embarrassing if some married couple should spring forward and admit that they were so unpopular that evening that they came to the lane with each other?

What Has Happened to Justice?

Florence Kane's Slaying Not Yet Solved—Typifies Menace to Girls Unescorted

IF THE tragic murder of Florence Kane has done nothing else, it has demonstrated the crying need for a crime laboratory in New York. According to experts who have analyzed the police handling of the case, the murder showed up the New York system as lacking in many important respects, particularly with relation to the investigation for clews at the murder scene. This despite the fact that the detectives on the Kane case did everything possible within the limits of their intelligence.

The body of Florence Kane was found shortly after dawn on May 29, 1925. The police department threw every available detective, the pick of the force, into the investigation, but when it was all over they were no farther advanced than the morning of the crime. All we know today is that the young woman was murdered. Beyond that we know absolutely nothing.

Complete Mystery.

We do not know whether one man or more than one man killed Florence. We do not know whether he was black, yellow or white. We do not know whether he was a degenerate, a disappointed suitor, or a person bent on revenge. We do not even know for sure where the actual slaying took place. All we know is that Florence Kane, a sweet, home-loving young woman, with most all her life ahead of her, was foully murdered.

Miss Kane was 29 years old, and a sister of James J. Kane, a detective on the New York police force. She lived with her mother and younger sister, May, at 1020 East New York avenue, Brooklyn, a section once notorious for its rough and evil characters, but now a well-developed residential community. Her father, John Kane, had died several years before, and the young woman supported herself and helped to support the Kane household by working as a clerk in New York.

Deeply religious and attached to her home life, she had no suitors so far as any one knew. When she did go out it was usually with girls, chiefly fellow members of a sewing guild of St. Matthew's Roman Catholic church. On the evening of May 28 she had planned the party herself. It was the custom of the guild to go to the theater about once every two weeks. There are thousands of similar groups in New York.

From the Utica avenue station of the subway to the Kane home was five blocks, not a particularly lonely journey, but Jim Kane had warned his sister against attempting it late at night. He had advised her to take a taxi. He knew of cases where girls had been attacked, some within recent weeks.

"Never fear," she replied, laughing, "I can take care of myself, Jim."

In many ways she was an old-fashioned young woman, but in this attitude she was altogether modern. She was anything but the clinging, fearsome type of girl, the kind accustomed to being escorted and protected by men. And besides, Miss Kane was no slip of a girl; she weighed 140 pounds.

Into the Shadows.

So when she waved good-by to the other girls at Utica avenue station the young woman evidently had no qualms about the journey home, for she walked past the line of taxicabs and started out on foot.

That was about 12:20 a. m. There were few people abroad. She hurried a little when she reached Montgomery street.

At the junction of Montgomery street and East New York avenue an arc light usually lighted up that part of the street, but on that night the light was out. Boys the previous day had smashed it. The scene was pitchy black.

Florence Kane walked into this area of darkness. . . .

Two hundred yards beyond a light burned on the ground floor of a two story frame dwelling. That was the Kane home and the light was for Florence, coming home alone. The young woman had telephoned from New York and informed her mother that she would be home in half an hour, and not to wait up for her.

One could see the light from the corner of Montgomery street and East New York avenue. Perhaps that was the last thing the young woman saw as she walked into this brief area of darkness. She never emerged. The accepted theory is that some one very strong seized her there and killed her.

But we are not positive of that. As has been said before, we know practically nothing.

Six hours later Christian Junker, a milkman, informed the police that he had discovered the body of a young woman in the vacant lot at Montgomery street and East New York avenue.

First reports of Junker's story stated that while making his deliveries at about 5 o'clock he had seen two men get out of a red automobile and then drag something toward the lot. He was afraid to go to the spot at the time, he said, so he continued with his deliveries. An hour later he went through the lot and came upon the body.

Subsequently Junker changed this story, saying that he had not seen an automobile and had seen only one man, and that this man was stooping over something in the lot.

Florence Kane, the murdered girl

What Neighbors Heard.

The body was about twelve feet in from the sidewalk, face downward. Much of Miss Kane's clothing had been ripped from her body and parts had been used to tie her hands and to gag her. Her pumps had been removed and they were lying near by. She had been beaten and choked. The imprints of muscular fingers were noticeable on her throat.

Several rings with small diamonds were still on the fingers, her bag with some small change was there, and a string of imitation pearls was around the discolored neck. Later it was discovered that a wrist watch had disappeared. A gold crucifix, which Miss Kane had been accustomed to wear suspended by a chain around her neck, was found on her back, as though it had been placed there deliberately.

Was it the gesture of a scoffer or of some one stricken with remorse?

Within an hour crowds of curious folk swarmed to the scene. The police, to keep back the crowd, formed a circle of small automobiles around the body. If there had been any footprints there at the murder scene, they were very quickly obliterated by machines, policemen and spectators. In fact, the only clew to be discovered was a pair of cheap cotton and imitation leather gloves, such as mechanics and other manual workers wear. These gloves were picked up a few feet from the body.

Inquiry among occupants of houses adjoining on the lot indicated that the murder had been committed where the body was found, for several residents recalled they had heard screams. Against this, however, was the testimony of other persons who said they had been wide awake and heard no screams whatever. Furthermore, there were no signs of a struggle in the lot.

Dr. Manuel E. Martin, assistant medical examiner, reported that death had been caused by strangulation. He stated that there had been no criminal assault. Because of the weight and strength of the victim, Dr. Martin was positive more than one man had committed the crime. Beyond that, though, he had no particular reason for this opinion.

Among those who said they heard screams were Mrs. Mary Zalon and her nephew, Charles Beyer, who lived at 1045 Montgomery street, the frame house at the east end of the lot. Mrs. Zalon said she had gone to bed when she was suddenly awakened by a cry close at hand, as though from the vacant lot. She and her nephew peered out of the bathroom window, but could see nothing. Presently they went to bed.

Saw Man Running.

Mrs. Mary Rogers, whose home was at 33 Ford street, just around the corner, reported she was home with her daughter, Mildred, when she heard a woman scream, "Mamma, oh, mamma, mamma!" The voice rose to a wild pitch and then died away. Suddenly Mildred Rogers, who was at the bedroom window, called out:

"Mamma, there's a man running away!"

They looked out and saw a figure hurrying through the dark toward Utica avenue, said Mrs. Rogers.

Sounds of a disturbance of some sort came to Mrs. Kane, too. The distracted mother recalled she had heard groans. Her younger daughter, May, also heard the strange sounds and, peeping from the edge of the shade in her room, saw a man in shirt sleeves walking along a small pathway that cut through the lot. He was taking the direction that would have led him to a Utica avenue surface line. May Kane said she noticed an automobile parked down Montgomery street, perhaps sixty feet from the scene.

All of which would appear to be rather conclusive evidence that the murder had been committed in the lot. Later, however, Mrs. Frances Levy, who also lived at 1045 Montgomery avenue, stated she had been up all night attending her baby and had heard no noise. Still, the weight of the testimony seemed against the theory that Miss Kane had been killed elsewhere and carried to the lot. At least five persons living near by reported they had heard screams.

In their hunt for a possible eye-

—The Story of Florence Kane

witness—always a most important feature in a murder investigation of this sort—the detectives learned from a Mrs. Anna Ruben, who kept a candy store at 319 Utica avenue, three blocks from the scene, that a young man, wearing a blue suit and a straw hat, had entered her place at about the time of the murder and excitedly exclaimed:

"I just saw four cops arrest a girl up at Montgomery street and East New York avenue. They put her in an automobile."

Here, unquestionably, was something to work on—and the detectives did work on it strenuously.

The theory the detectives advanced was that the young man had happened on a whole group of murderers and that some one in the group had casually informed the young man that they were police officers. The slayers might have awaited the coming of the young woman, in a machine parked near the lot. This led to the belief that the motive had been revenge, for Detective Kane had done considerable work in this section and had made a great many arrests among the criminal element of East New York and Brownsville.

Next, a taxi-driver informed the police that at about 1 o'clock, at a point two blocks from the scene of the crime, he was hailed by a young man whose face was bleeding profusely, apparently from deep scratches. He climbed into the machine, and told the driver to take him to an address on the lower west side of Washington square. The chauffeur at first refused, he said, as he didn't want his car to be all smeared up with blood, but when the passenger pulled out a roll of bills and promised a liberal tip, he had complied.

Marie O'Rourke — Rev. William J. Costello

Dead girl's friend and priest who denounced city administration.

Here, also, was something else to work on, but in subsequent days there were no reports of the finding of either the young man who entered Mrs. Ruben's store, or of this other man with the deeply scratched face.

The Arrests Begin.

But this is not to say that there was no lack of reports. On the contrary the police were deluged with them. There were reports of a huge colored man, with abnormally long arms, who had been seen loitering near the vacant lot. There were reports of the red automobile.

In all, the police investigated some 250 stories.

Thirty minutes before the supposed time of the killing a colored man had chased two girls of the neighborhood, the police learned. It was announced that the description of the man fitted the description of the colored man who, two weeks before, had attacked, severely beaten, and robbed Miss Augusta Cooperburg, another Brooklyn girl.

Was this man the murderer of Florence Kane?

It was a slim clew, but the police weren't passing up anything they thought might lead them to a solution of the mystery. They began rounding up colored men of supposedly suspicious activities. The first to be questioned was a certain Walter Johnson, formerly of Jacksonville, Fla., and after Johnson came William Brassfield, among others.

A subway special officer had noticed Johnson, two nights after the murder, weeping on the elevated platform at Broadway and Myrtle avenue. When the officer asked him what the trouble was, he said he had no home, no money, and no friends. He was nervous to the point of being incoherent, it was said. Questioned later as to where he had been the previous Thursday evening, Johnson said he had gone to sleep t 8:30 o'clock in a shack in the yard of a coal company at Middle Village, and that he had slept until 6 a. m.

Brooklyn home of the Kanes

District Attorney Dodd announced that he wasn't satisfied with the man's alibi.

Brassfield was arrested in an apartment at 656 Osborne street, where he worked as a janitor, the police acting on a tip from a colored woman who remembered him as a friend of Frank (Brick) Kelly, murderer of Mrs. Emma McDonald, subway ticket agent, and Catherine Dunn, a housemaid. Brassfield had been convicted and sent to prison in 1912 for assaulting and robbing a New York school teacher.

The suspect was identified by Miss Helen Connors and Miss Irene Coyne as the man who had chased them shortly before Miss Kane was attacked, but he insisted, and his story was backed up by his white common-law wife, Trixie Brassfield, that he had been home all evening.

This alibi was also declared to be unsatisfactory.

In the meanwhile the Rev. William J. Costello, rector of St. Matthew's church, had added to the general discomfiture in official circles by bitterly denouncing the city administration then in charge for the lack of police protection in that section.

"I believe the undertaker should take the crepe from the door of the Kane home and place it directly over the door of the city hall," said Father Costello at the funeral services, "so that those in power can realize the crimes resulting from their negligence."

Cold as Ever."

So a week passed, and while the suspects were still held, the murder of Florence Kane began to give signs of joining the long list of New York murder mysteries. "We have overlooked nothing," said Captain John J. McCloskey, in charge of the hordes of detectives working on the case, "and the case is as cold as ever."

But what of the gloves found near the body? They had been sent to the Central Testing laboratory for examination, but when it was found that this city institution was not equipped for the work, the gloves had then been dispatched to Dr. Alexander O. Gettler, chemist and toxicologist at Bellevue hospital.

Dr. Gettler found the gloves marked by mineral grease, such as a motorist would collect in changing a wheel. He found a woman's blonde hair, corresponding to Miss Kane's hair, on one of the gloves. He reported that there was no trace of ashes on the gloves, a finding which indicated that the gloves had not been worn by a janitor. He gave it as his opinion that the gloves had been worn by the murderer.

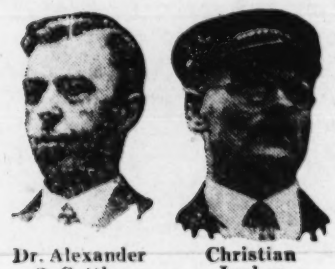

Unfortunately, these gloves had been handled by quite a number of policemen and others before they reached Dr. Gettler, five days after the murder. The young woman's clothes, also, had been handled, as well as the gold crucifix which the murderer had placed on her back. There had been no microscopic examination at the scene, such as would have been made in countries where the science of crime detection has been developed to a degree not yet realized in the United States, or at least, in the great city of New York.

Several weeks after the murder the police were startled by a report that a cripple in Philadelphia had confessed to the crime. He was Thomas McAvoy, who said he murdered Miss Kane to avenge himself on her brother. It was decided the man had been suffering from alcoholic delusions. The cripple was without hands.

Justice Fails.

Finally all suspects had to be released, the police admitting that they had no evidence to hold the men any longer.

In September, three months after the murder, John and Mary Kane, uncle and sister of Florence, asked police to investigate some things they had learned since the first inquiry. They reported that two police officers had been drinking in a saloon less than 100 yards from the scene that Thursday night. A girl had been with them, but had left when one of the officers drew a pistol jokingly.

Dr. Alexander O. Gettler — Christian Junker

Scientist and finder of body.

The Kanes said that the two policemen had left this saloon and gone to another just across the street from the Kane home, and had left this second place at about 12:30 o'clock, or at about just the time the murder took place.

But fate seemed determined to keep the murder of Florence Kane a mystery. Nothing came of the new disclosures. Justice has been a cripple in this case, as powerless as McAvoy, who was without hands.

Isabel Cotton Smith, New York Soc Writes 700 Page Cook Book A Hours in Her Own Kitchen an Wealthy Debutantes to Don A and Learn the Art Most Ap ciated by Prospective Husba

ALTHOUGH the author of a new cook book, Mrs. Isabel Cotton Smith, a New York society woman, has never had to put her hands in dish water, she has spent six years experimenting in her own kitchen in order to convince the world lthat every society woman ought to know how to cook.

Mrs. Smith has been in the past few years the hostess to hundreds of women who have never actually worked in their own kitchens and the guest of as many more of her friends who have never talked with the butcher and baker.

She has come to the conclusion that the system for educating debutantes is all wrong. It is her conviction that society girls should shine in the kitchen as well as in the drawing room.

"I believe that every society girl should know how to cook, and to put over my philosophy I sat down and patiently wrote 700 pages to explain how easy and yet how fascinating it all is," says Mrs. Smith, one of Manhattan's social registerites and a daughter of the late Frederick R. Townsend.

"When I suddenly became what is known as highbrow," Mrs. Smith continues, "of course everybody thought that I must be writing blank verse or a new book of etiquette. Then when the inquiries became so pressing that I had to give out some information, it was a little disappointing it seemed that I was only writing about how to make soup stock and the chemistry of bread making.

"Naturally, it seemed to my friends that since I had secluded myself for so many days I ought to come forth with a startling novel about Riverside drive or Fifth avenue. And, of course, I had to explain to every one just how I had become an authoritative cook when most people believed that bridge was my forte and that my dinners were entirely the work of a very efficient hired cook."

Before Mrs. Smith wrote her book she labored very hard to acquire every bit of culinary information possible. All the recipes in her "Blue Back Book of Cookery," published by Funk & Wagnalls, were tested many times in her own kitchen by her or under her personal direction.

All her experience in cooking came after she was married, this new author says, and her example she hopes will be ver yencouraging to young wives whose husbands are suffering from delicatessen meals and who have despaired of ever learning to cook because they didn't start early enough.

When the author of "The Blue Book of Cookery" married her first husband, S. Osgood Pell, she had never been in her mother's kitchcen except to beg a ginger cookie or ask the cook to make some cinnamon toast for tea.

Like all fashionable society girls, Miss Townsend went to an exclusive boarding school where she learned the parlor tricks that all debutantes are taught. She acquired a little French, was carefully instructed on walking into a drawing room and was well grounded in the one thing that every society girl must master, the art of sophisticated conversation.

So far Miss Townsend's training was very effective as she became one of the most popular debutantes of the season and succeeded in winning a husband with the ease that testified to the merits of her finishing school training.

After she became a bride, Miss Townsend decided that being a good wife was also being a good cook, so instead of giving all her time to the nerve strain of bridge, dansants and teas, she became ecquainted with her kitchen.

"I found out," Mrs. Smith says, "that cooking is not like playing the piano because you can learn learn cooking at any age. Of course, girls ought to be taught right along with their other studies, but if they aren't, they can learn after they are married just as I did.

"When I began my apprenticeship I didn't know a frying pan from a bread tin, but instead of getting submerged under the terrifying extent of my ignorance I went right to work discovering the difference between an egg beater, a waffle iron and an apple parer.

"I don't know whether I am an exception or not, but I found that I had a special knack for cooking. I wanted to read recipes all the time and it isn't any exaggeration to say that I spent many afternoons in a hammock reading, not fiction, but the recipes of famous chefs. Being such an enthusiast, it is no wonder that I began to amaze people with the intricate dishes served at my table.

"After I seriously took up cooking and spent four or five hours in the kitchen every day, I couldn't help talking about my new accomplishment. I hope I didn't become boresome like most people with a hobby. Mainly I wanted to interest all my friends in making jelly and French rolls and the other dishes I was experimenting with.

"Then I found out there are two types of people. One of these types types of people. One of these types has a distinct food sense. He or she has a wel-developed sense of taste and so they know a nicely seasoned soup from one that is as savorless as dish water. This type greatly enjoys a well-cooked meal and in their homes always serve delicious menus. But the other type takes no particular pleasure in the choicest of viands.

"I have attended more than a few dinners in Fifth avenue mansions with butlers and footmen that were ordeals. The very least one can hope to escape with is a very bad headache. The hostess probably never knows just why she has such a hard time getting a dinner party together.

"But this is only one of the reasons why I think society girls ought to learn to cook. Being a good and popular hostess is an important matter but keeping a husband happy with two well-cooked meals a day and food bills at the end of the month that are not tremendous, in my opinion, is the duty of every wife.

"One of my own conclusions," Mrs. Smith says, "is that men haven't changed a bit in twenty-five years." The old-fashioned husband, she points out, was a man who must have three meals a day well-cooked and well-served, and in her opinion the modern man has the same aversion to canned goods and frequent pantry shelf suppers as the husband of 1900.

With this in min dMrs. Smith included in her cook book a chapter that caters particularly to the male palate. To quote from her book in this regard she says:

"The problem that often puzzles even the most experienced and well-equipped hostess is to provide dinners for her husband and his men friends which will please them and increase his pride in her.

"A glance at New York's social history, or that of any other large city in the country, will show that the original motive for the forming of men's clubs was dining and social intercourse. In fact, some clubs have been noted for special dishes of their invention."

In nearly all her dinners for men Mrs. Smith has listed pie for the dessert course because she believes that most women today who carefully watch their diet will not eat such a heavy dessert while men still incline to a good pie in favor of any other kind of sweet. One dinner that she suggests for men and which is particularly suited to winter nights is as follows:

Oyster Cocktail
Consomme a la Duchesse
Celery Salted Nuts Olives
Terrapin
Saddle of Mutton
Currant Jelly Mint Sauce
Peas Potatoes Anna
Quail on Toast
Endive Salad with Mayonnaise Dressing
Hot Mince Pi Cream Cheese
Demi-tasse

Another interesting chapter in Mrs. Smith's book is entitled "On Doing One's Own Housework." In this chapter she describes the system which she devised when she did the work in her summer cottage without the aid of a servant. In this connection she says: "If you have dinner at night, as I have, and want to spend the afternoon enjoying yourself, the best plan is to arrange everything possible for dinner immediately after lunch. It does not take very long to prepare a dinner. For example, many menus will not take more than two hours all together—half an hour for the preparation and an hour and a half for the cooking, and this may include a roast.

"If steak or fish is to be broiled, half the time mentioned will be sufficient. After making the preparations after lunch, I often managed eighteen holes of golf in the afternoons and felt all the better for it."

In another chapter Mrs. Smith quotes several economical dinner menus. One of them which is very simple to prepare, she says, is as follows:

Cream of Corn Syrup
Stuffed Breast of Veal
Browned Potatoes
Fried Eggplant
Cocoanut Cornstarch
Pudding
Demi-tasse

For each season of the year Mrs. Smith has outlined suitable menus. The winter breakfasts are heartier and more substantial than the ones planned for summer mornings. She suggests for a frosty morning:

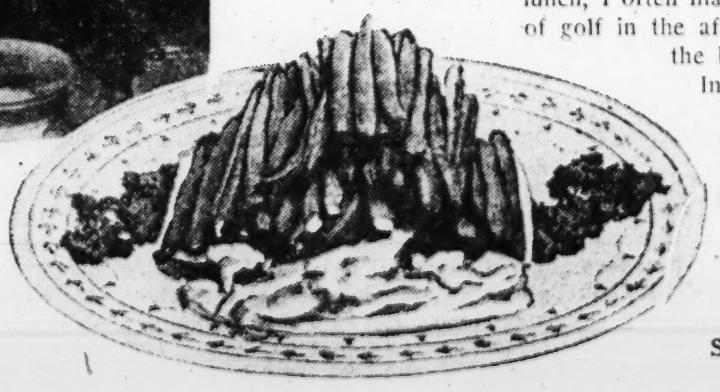

Stewed Pears
Cereal
Lamb Hash with Poached Eggs
Baking Powder Biscuits
Coffee or Tea

String beans on toast, one of the illustrations in Mrs. Smith's book intended to induce young society girls to gain a personal knowledge of the cooking and serving of meals

On a spring day when the air is a little chill and one's appetite is not laggard, Mrs. Smith suggests the following luncheon menu:

Clam Broth
Hamburger Steak
Stuffed Potatoes
Boiled Spring Onions
Chocolate Eclairs

Strange as it may seem, Mrs. Smith's book is not written with only wealthy households in mind, but is largely devoted to the needs of the small family with a small income. Economy in the amount spent for food is stressed in many of her chapters.

Many wealthy debbies who move in the upper social circle may not agree with Mrs. Smith that the planning and preparation of meals is an essential and interesting part of social life, but their prospective husbands may well be impressed by the sense of the suggestion and have a more attentive eye for the girls who not only believe that "the way to a man's heart is through his stomach," but who also know just how to put the old adage in practice.

The Van Der Donck Mansion ::

I'm having the Ladies' Aid on Tuesday. You'll have to put them all on. We're studying women of the harems, but since I'm sick, and they're meeting in my bedroom and all, I guess it'll be all right."

Not only was she guest of honor at the next Fraternity luncheon, but she was booked for a speech before the Literary Twelve, and for a series of talks on "Tendencies in Modern Drama and Art" before Professor Bartlett's seniors.

"Your letters," he told her over their third dinner table together, "have been an inspiration. Your wonderful aunt shared them with me. And my classes profited. There was something so warm and vital in the pictures you conveyed that no amount of reading of reviews could give. My boys and girls owe you much more than they owe me."

Honour McMinn, seeing his eager face across the piecrust table, did not know what to say. In the end she gave the series of talks as he asked. She wore the rosy afternoon gown to each of them. The young creatures sat about her entranced. She was not in their eyes Honour McMinn, old maid niece of Mrs. Witherspoon. She was that fascinating modern, a bachelor woman, with ten years behind her of life in the inner literary circles of New York, a woman of sophistication, grace and charm, modishly attired, a woman from whose lips dropped jewels of mystery and romance.

"She paid eighty-five dollars a month for one room," the whisper went around. And her talk on modernist sculpture sank deep into their young minds.

Aunt Delight's recovery, despite her good cheer and excellent appetite, was slow. Long after the broken wrist was out of its splint the strained knee kept her in bed. Something proved to be the matter with her back as well. It caught her when she tried to rise. Undue exertion also brought on headaches. There were, the doctor said, undoubted contusions that could not be lightly taken in one of her age.

It was, indeed, the end of a rainy March before Aunt Delight did more than perhaps walk about her room each day. She never dined below stairs. For four months Honour reigned as arbiter on style and literature in Agatha. For four months she and Professor Bartlett faced each other at pleasant dinner upon the piecrust table. Then on the evening after the March faculty tea, at which she had been a special guest and the new president's wife had shown her marked attention, she faced him, charming in her bois de rose gown and realized his manner was distrait. He did not look at her as usual. He was pale. He had eaten little of the housekeeper's excellent dinner. They rose from the table after an almost silent meal. Foreboding gripped her. This was how he had looked long ago on that dreadful commencement day.

Yet when she made as if to go up to the invalid's room he checked her.

"I must tell you something," he said.

He began once more with what her letters had done for him.

"Out here in this little place," he told her, towering above her as she sat in the big chair by the fire, "I felt so isolated. There was no one to prod me, excite me, shame me into effort. The little college library was so poor in scholarship! I was deadened with a mass of teaching. When I was not in the classroom I was in some airless committee room listening to men of imagination debate some detail of no importance to exhaustion. Poverty was a ball and chain. And I had—I had anxieties."

In the pause she could see his bleak years as he had lived them.

"Your life was so vivid, so varied, so big, significant. You poured it all out to us with such fullness! You poured life into me. I began to write. I started some critical studies in the drama, towards my thesis."

He stopped again, this time for a long while. Honour scarcely breathed.

"Well, I got something done and sent it off. I had a letter today offering me a two-year fellowship if I'd come on. It will pay more than my salary here. And I dared to hope perhaps you might come with me."

Later when she did at last go up to the invalid's room Aunt Delight gave her one perceiving glance.

"Well!" she said. "Don't tell me he's done it at last!"

She was all that Honour could have wished as her niece wept out her happy story.

"I guess," she said, as they parted for the night, "I'll try to come downstairs tomorrow."

They were married on Commencement day. Once her improvment really set in, Aunt Delight explained, its progress was something miraculous. By June you would not have known she had been hurt. Even the sprained knee caused no trouble and the back never caught her at all.

"Talk about me being old!" she said as she drove the bride and groom to the station. "I'm only sixty nine. Nothing but a girl. I've a good mind to come east in November and take you to the opera. I owe it to you, seeing I cheated you out of it last year."

Her rosy face beamed its last upon them from the platform. Certain strategies had succeeded just as she planned them. Better. Not only did Grantland Bartlett have his fellowship but the All-American Wool Trade Magazine had telegraphed its wish for Mrs. Bartlett's services. Even in New York efficiency is no drug on the market. Her young folks were to be happy. And they were to be relatively quite rich. Aunt Delight beamed as she waved after them.

"Do you know what will mean more to me than any opera?" Grantland Bartlett asked his wife as the train rolled out of the station. "To look out of your window at the little park and the front steps of the Willy Westons."

Looking at him she knew that the hour of her retribution had struck. How was she to tell him? Day by day she grew wan over this question. As each click of the wheels brought her nearer to New York her panic and her despair increased. How could she have failed to foresee this? How could she confess? How show herself the sham she had been? She met his happiness with a sick heart. Each day, she thought. "Today."

Then as the hours went she thought, "No! Tomorrow!"

By the time there were but a few hours between her and New York she had decided that the way to tell him was to take him up the five flights to the little back room, show him the window, the delicatessen, the tailor shop, the tenements, the L, picture her thrifty, commonplace daily life, strip the glamour from it all and cast herself upon his pity.

They took a cab straight for the Van der Donck mansion. He wished for it as the climax of his happiness. She sat with a cold hand in his as they threaded the busy avenues eastward. Once she turned to him.

"Will you love me always?" she asked, "No matter what happens?"

Wondering at her intensity he promised. The cab turned into the familiar street.

"At the corner," she directed and let him help her descend.

"Perhaps he'll never want to hold my hand again," she said to herself as he helped her from the taxi.

She waited while her husband paid the fare. And as she waited she was conscious of a change that penetrated even the blindness of her misery. The square lay beside her, sweet in the evening light. The Van der Donck mansion was gone. A huge sign reared itself instead, reading, Manhattan Wrecking company. Behind the sign, a vast sound of falling bricks and rending frame work gave token of those night and day activities to which New Yorkers are habituated. She read the further legend on the sign and knew as her husband turned to her that the Van der Donck mansion, forever vanished, would be replaced in fifteen months by a twenty-story apartment hotel with electric refrigeration and all other distinctive marks of modern home life.

Grantland Bartlett looked as she was looking at the sign. Then the two looked at each other.

"Gone!" he said.

"Gone!" she whispered. How should she tell him now? He saw her pallor.

"Never mind, you darling!" he laughed. "You've given it all to me with your eyes. I know it better than if I had seen it myself. And here's the dear little square. I used to walk in it with you in my dreams, and take heart and live my life like a man. What if the room is gone! We can walk in the square together."

Even as he drew her hand into the curve of his arm a cataract of bricks came down the chute.

"Maybe that's the last of your room," he laughed.

Curiously enough a half-pint cream bottle careened empty and unbroken along the sidewalk at her feet. She looked at it.

"The last of it!" she said. "It's just a dream room now."

She smiled at him. Even her devouring conscience was appeased. Why invade with drab realities the sanctities of his beloved dream? Why take away a glowing vision? Why give him a woman less desirable than he had won?

"Let's walk in the park," she said. Grantland Bartlett looked first up, then down the street. Only in that quiet island in that multitudinous town could a deserted block have been found at that hour.

"Not before I kiss you," he said boldly. Before the ardor of that kiss her last scruples fled. The unseen plays, the imagined gayeties were forgotten.

"How wonderful it's going to be," she half whispered, "really to see everything——"

"With me?" he filled in the pause.

"You were with me always," she confessed. "I haven't ever told you. But that was my part of the dream."

The Yaqui; Mexico's Super-Fighting Man

Prepared and Issued by THE NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY

THE Yaqui Indians of southern Sonora, Mexico, again on the war path, and the fertile country in which they have torn up railway tracks in the last few days are described in the following communication to the National Geographic society from Herbert Corey, who recently visited the region.

"Guaymas is on the edge of the Yaqui country," writes Mr. Corey. "We had been conscious of the Yaqui all the way south, of course, for in Sonora he forms the background to every conversation; but it was here that he stepped into the foreground.

"When things go wrong in Yaquiland he is apt to beleaguer Guaymas. It is not so very long ago that no one dared walk out of the dangerous end of town. The Yaquis have burned railroad bridges and held up railroad trains and murdered passengers.

"At one time the Yaquis may have numbered 30,000 souls; now there may be 5,000 in all. Their home was in the fertile valleys of the Yaqui and Mayo rivers, with the hills behind as hunting grounds. They were as tireless on the trail as the Apaches or the Navajos, and, despite three hundred years of contact with a more or less diluted civilization, are today about what they were when the first Spaniard came to Sonora.

"They live in shacks made of brush, prefer the meat of burros to beef, and preserve jealously the purity of the Yaqui blood. They are religious after their own fashion, mingling the rites of the Catholic church with those of their own barbaric faith.

"Most Americans who know the Yaqui say that if he had been let alone he would have let the white men alone. But he owned fertile valleys and mine-rich mountains. The history of our own west teems with analogous cases. The miners and the farmers established themselves in his territory, and the Yaqui declared war. The technical honors seem to have gone to the Yaqui.

"It is true that at one time mines were opened everywhere in his mountains and the fat river bottoms were taken from him; but the troops sent against him were cut up time after time.

"Of course, that sort of thing could not be endured by the Mexican government. Without discussing the rights and wrongs, the fact remained that the Yaqui stood in the path of progress. President Diaz at first tried to conciliate and then to defeat them, and finally resorted to a policy of extermination.

"A Yaqui scalp had a cash value over the counter. I have talked with a man who sat at breakfast with a Mexican general to whom was reported the capture of 200 Yaqui braves. Without leaving the table, he ordered that half be shot and the other half deported to Yucatan, where laborers were needed on the sisal plantations.

"One hears in Sonora that not all the ships that sailed for Yucatan voyaged farther than the first shark fishing ground.

"Diaz had cowed the Yaquis if he had not completely subjugated them. The river valleys were given over to the plow and the prospectors roamed at will through the mountains.

"Then Francisco Madero, practical idealist, enlisted them in his fight against Diaz, and the Yaquis discovered that they could play a part in politics.

"The Yaquis have been pursuing a policy of more or less peaceful penetration into what was once their own country.

"The Yaquis are riding nearer the superb rice farms of Cajeme, operated by Americans through sheer grit and stubbornness, during years when the Mexican government could not protect them, and their own government would not. The American settlements at Esperanza, where one of the greatest modern irrigation works in Mexico is in operation, are likewise being visited. Not threatened; just visited."

Things New and Old About the Bible :

BY REV. W. P. KING
Pastor First Methodist Church, Gainesville, Ga.

A BOOK bearing the title, "These Sayings of Mine," is written by Lloyd C. Douglas, and published by Charles Scribner's Sons. The price is $1.50. Those who have read "The Minister's Everyday Life" by this author will welcome this volume with eager anticipation.

DR. W. P. KING

We are always grateful to a writer who gives a fresh and vigorous expression to truths of primary importance, which we have vaguely felt, but have not expressed. We are ready to acknowledge our indebtedness to him. On account of the unique and timely emphasis of the author, this entire article will be devoted to his volume.

A free discussion will be made of ideas set forth and the reader will be left uncertain as to the dividing line between a quotation and my own elaboration.

It is only in modern days that the teachings of Jesus are receiving the stress and interpretation and application which should characterize the words of him who speaks with the accent of authority.

The creeds of the church are the great landmarks of Christian thought, but the real message of Jesus finds little place in these confessions of faith.

In the most ancient, most authoritative and most widely accepted creed of Christendom, there is nothing between Jesus' being "born of the Virgin Mary" and his having "suffered under Pontius Pilate," but a comma.

But there is more between these events than a comma, there is his life and teaching. The ancient creeds do not set forth those principles which must redeem our social order from its present light. We are not truly orthodox only as we make a right interpretation and a right application of the words and principles of Jesus to the problems and needs of the individual and society of today.

According to the real meaning of the term the most unorthodox people in the church today are those who satisfy themselves of the faith and who do not expect "new light to continually break forth from the word of God."

In no one of the ancient creeds is there the slightest reference to the Sermon on the Mount, the Golden Rule, or the great missionary commission.

Jesus was very insistent on his message, the divine revelation which he conveyed to the world. "Heaven and earth shall pass away but my words shall not pass away." "Not every one that sayeth unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in Heaven." "Why call ye me Lord, Lord and do not the things which I say?" "Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I shall liken him unto a wise man." "The words that I speak unto you; they are spirit and they are life." "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." "If ye love me ye will keep my commandments."

It is a serious omission to limit the whole career of Jesus to its earthly beginning and end.

Ecclesiastical art reveals the astonishing fact that almost every great picture finds him either in his mother's arms or dying on the cross.

One wishes to say it reverently, but one must say it strongly, that when the Lord Christ does contrive to project his message into the minds of Christians, he has literally to fight his way past his baby pictures.

It is true beyond question that Europe would have escaped her awful catastrophe if her churches had possessed fewer pictures of the nativity and death of Jesus, and the authoritative teaching of the Lord of Life had permeated the minds of the people. This is not said to minimize the beginning and the end of his earthly life, but simply to point out the misplaced emphasis.

No other eminent teacher in the world's history has fored so badly, nor Socrates, nor Plato, nor any other great teachers deserves to be remembered for their teachings, and most of them are; all of them are, but the greatest of all.

The historic creeds have been of inestimable value in binding Christians of all ages together in a common cause. We do not disbelieve or depreciate them. They are imperfect in their omissions.

This is not an undiscriminating criticism of the ancient creeds of Christendom, but rather a criticism of that type of mind which regards them as complete and final.

These historic confessions were inevitable in the thought world which formulated them. Their set purposes was to express the Christian belief in terms of the living thought and controversy of that day.

They expressed the verities by which Christianity then lived and by which it survived and continued. It is an absurd anachronism to demand that they should have been applicable to the intellectual needs of today.

But what has been a fortress of truth in one age must not be permitted to become a prison house in another age.

Systems of doctrine are not to be fixed and rigid. Our own age demands a creed in conformity with the modern Christian conscience and in harmony with modern knowledge. This demand for a faith apart from logical subtleties is the result of a resolute determination to have Christian ideas and Christian principles vigorously applied to the whole range of the individual life and to the whole range of man's social problems.

Nothing will meet our need today except the application of the divinely authoritative teaching of Jesus to all the complex relationships of our modern life.

We cannot imagine a great declaration of faith today that would fail to give emphasis to this authority: "As my Father hath taught me, I speak these things." "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed." The reader will be richly repaid by the study of the ten chapters of this volume from the first one, "I am the Light of the World," to the last one, "Ye are the light of the world."

The World's Greatest Pictures

"THE TEMPTATION OF ST. ANTHONY"
BY TENIERS THE YOUNGER

This is the 33rd of a series of 52 greatest paintings, which represent the choice of the art directors throughout North America. Reproduction of this art masterpiece appears in the rotagravure section of today's Constitution.

BY EUGENE P. CONLEY.

David Teniers, Jr., known to the art world as Teniers The Younger, lived and grew up with Rembrandt, Rubens, Hals, Van Dyke and Hobbema—names that made Flemish art. Environment would have made Teniers a great painter, but he was doubly blessed by inheriting much of his gifted ability.

His father, known as Teniers the Elder, was a painter of note, likewise his uncles and grandfather. His four sons adopted the profession, but early despaired of rivaling their father's talents for "genius never reproduces."

Sometimes the only difference between a really fine painting and a masterpiece is no more than another stroke of the brush. George Sand once said, "A masterpiece is but a successful attempt." In the case of this painting family of Teniers, all were great, all tried, but all, save one, seemed to lack the final five per cent that makes a masterpiece. It is about this one called Teniers the Younger we are interested in at the moment.

Favorite subjects furnish inspiration, and to the master, inspiration is as necessary as paint itself. The life of St. Anthony fighting the temptations that visited him in that lonely cave far out in the desert, scourging him so terribly that oftentimes he lay as dead, was ever a favorite subject with Teniers.

His painting, "The Temptation of St. Anthony," now the property of the Prado at Madrid, depicts the story of Temptation, assuming the hideous forms of various insects, imps and apes, approaching and attacking the saint who kneels before his crude stone altar and calls upon God to protect him. All is confusion about him, but the torture inflicted upon him by these puppets of the Evil Spirit could not shake his conviction. The beautiful woman near the entrance is said to be a portrait of the painter's first wife, Anne Brueghel. The painting measures two feet eight inches by three feet ten inches. It was completed in the year 1647, when the artist was 37 years old.

Teniers was born in 1610. Little is known of his early life, but it is supposed that his father instructed him in the art of painting while he was still very young. He developed rapidly, and though never a pupil of Rubens, he imitated his style as closely as he could, as all others did in his day, for no one could come within a radius of the great Rubens' brush and escape the magnetic power that earned for him the appellation "greatest of all Flemish artists."

The crowning event in the painter's career occurred when he was made painter to the Spanish Court of Netherlands, then ruled by Don Juan, son of Philip IV., king of Spain. Don Juan ardently admired Teniers' ability, and sent many of his paintings to his father in Spain. As a result, the Prado is far richer today in Teniers' works than any other museum.

The great artist lived to the ripe old age of eighty, dying in the year 1690. Properly speaking he was the last of that great list of painters whose names emblazoned the Dutch Renaissance.

A Baby in Your Home

So many married couples yearn for children that thousands of copies of a new book by Dr. H. Will Elders are being distributed without cost to childless women. Any family interested in overcoming conditions of nature that hinder the gift of children should write for this free book today. It describes a simple home treatment based on the use of Steriltone, a wonderful scientific tonic that has had marvelous success all over the country in relieving constitutional weakness.

Every woman who wants to live a normal, happy home life with little ones around her should consider it her first duty to know what Steriltone is and why it should be so wonderful an aid to her. Read this little book which is sent without charge or obligation in a plain envelope. It unfolds facts that most women never have had explained to them. Send NO Money. NO Obligations. THE BLACK ABBOT :: A Blue

INSTALLMENT XV.

Scented Cigarettes.

SHE turned the handle of the old-fashioned instrument and gave the Red Far mnumber.

"Is that you, Dick? How lucky!"

"I expected it was you. Is anything wrong?" he asked anxiously.

"No; Mary Wenner has something she wants to tell you." She lowered her voice. "She thinks she knows where Harry is hidden."

There was a silence at the other end.

"She's not——"

"No, no, no." With Mary within earshot, it was impossible to assure Dick that the girl was not trying to make a sensation.

"I'll come over right away," he said.

They went out to the head of the drive to meet him ,and Mary offered her theory.

"I must have been mad not to have told you about this before. I don't know where my wits have gone," she said. "After all my treasure hunting and the horrible experience I had that night with Gilder, and not to think of it now, when I practically came down to show Mr. Gwyn the place . . . well, I'm surprised at myself!"

Dick listened with growing impatience to this preliminary.

"Where do you think my brother is?"

"Where?" said Miss Wenner triumphantly. "Why, under the Abbey—that's where. I'll show you."

They walked side by side across the meadow, and as they went Miss Wenner related the startling story of her adventures after treasure.

"Of course, I always knew that it didn't belong to me, even if I found it," she said virtuously; "but Mr. Gilder was so very pressing that I couldn't very well refuse him, especially after what he'd written in vanishing ink, though I've got the ink back again, as he'll find out one of these days."

Leslie listened, scarcely crediting her ears. Yet, unless Mary Wenner had an imagination of a particularly inventive nature, it was hardly likely that she could have made the story up.

Dick examined the great cornerstone of the tower. He stood by, watching curiously, whilst, with a pair of scissors which she took from her bag, the girl pressed back the catch and sent the cornerstone turning noisily on its invisible hinge.

The opening was between twelve and fifteen inches wide. A stout man could never have entered by that way, as Dick pointed out.

"You had better stay here; I'll go down," he said.

"You'll want a light," warned Mary.

There was a lamp in his pocket. He had spent the morning peering into impossible dark places. In a second he had disappeared down the moss-grown stairs, and Leslie waited with palpitating heart for his reapearance. Presently they heard his voice.

"Come down."

"Not me," said Mary hastily. "I've been there once, thank you!"

And Leslie went alone, guided by the light he showed from step to step.

Now she was standing with him in the vaulted room. He tried first one and then the other of the two doors leading from the antechamber, but neither yielded to his touch. It was pitch dark save for the fan-shaped ray of the lamp. He swept the light along the wall and floor, and presently she saw the focus halp upon a broken flagstone.

"What is it?" she asked.

"Nothing," he said quickly. He had moved the light to the narrow entrance of the room. "Up you go; there is nothing here but mice and memories. I have always known there were underground vaults in the Abbey. In fact, I think there was a report on them by one of my recent forbears."

Although he was immediately behind her, his voice seemed to come from a distance. She was walking, and he gave her no help with his lamp, so that she had to feel her way up. Turning her head, she saw that he was ascending the stairs backwards, keeping the light covering the stairs below.

"Hurry," he said tersely, and she stumbled up the remaining steps and emerged into the blessed daylight.

It was some time before he joined them, and when he came out she saw that he was white to the lips.

"What did you see, Dick?" she asked.

He shook his head.

"Nothing," he said, and slammed the stone door tight.

Of the little party only Miss Wenner was unaffected by the atmosphere which Dick Alford brought from that vaulted room.

". . . so far as Mr. Gilder said—and I don't trust the man entirely, as you can well understand, Leslie—there were only pieces of music in lead cylinders—that was the word, 'cylinders.' To me they looked rather more like rolls. And this Black Abbot must have cleared them out while we were gone. Mr. Gilder was disappointed. In fact, he was quite rude to me over the telephone. I do think a gentleman should keep his temper in all circumstances, don't you, dear?"

Leslie agreed mechanically.

What had Dick seen? What object was it that showed for a second in the light of his lamp?

Near to the house he made an excuse to them. He had to go back to Red Farm to finish his interview with the obstinate Mr. Leonard; but he did not take his car. He said he would take the short cut, and Leslie thought it was not the moment to question him. She watched him until he disappeared in the fold of the ground. He was heading for the Abbey. The other girl had gone in to finish her lunch and Leslie hesitated. The thought of his going back to that dark room again filled her with blind panic. She wanted to call out to him and bring him back, but he was out of hearing now and she obeyed an impulse and went after him.

He was not in sight until she climbed the second of the gentle slopes. Here she stopped; he might resent being overlooked, and she lay down on the grass, watching him. She saw him come to the square tower, pause at the corner, and disappear apparently into space. From such a distance the effect of his entry was eerie. The entrance was so small that he seemed to melt into the solid stonework. Ten minutes passed, a quarter of an hour, and then a long, interminable wait; she heard the village clock strike two. A lark in the blue was singing his passionate song; over by Red Farm a donkey was braying—a ludicrous accompaniment to what might be stark tragedy.

She was on the point of rising and running across the ruins, to follow him into the depths, when he appeared again. He came slowly forth, turned and closed the stone door and leaned against it, his head on his arm, a picture of tragic despair.

She stopped and sank down on her knees, the better to escape observation, and presently he walked slowly away, and it was the gait of a broken man.

Hurrying back the way she had come, Leslie joined Mary in the study. Puttler she had not seen since the early morning, when he cycled to Willow House to bring the notice he had found.

"My dear," said Mary, "I'm not so sure I shall stay here tonight. This place is full of shocks! I'd like to see your brother very much indeed, but you can tell him all about the room under the abbey, can't you? That's where the gold is — you mark my words!"

"The gold?" Leslie for a moment did not understand. "O, you mean the Chelford treasure?"

The horrible thing! It was behind all this misery; behind the killing of Thomas and the disappearance of Harry. She said as much, and Miss Wenner, not pausing in her typewriting, calmly expressed the view that it was very likely.

Shock followed shock indeed! At half past four Leslie's maid brought a letter which had come by special delivery. It was in Arthur's writing; she tore it open and read:

"Dear Leslie: You are, under no circumstances, to marry Gilder. I refuse to allow you to sacrifice yourself for me, now or at any time. I am going away to France for a few months, and will return when things have blown over."

Ordinarily quick-witted, it was a long time before Leslie could understand the significance of this message. When she did, she took the letter to Dick, and he read it without comment and handed it back to her.

"What does that mean, Dick?"

"It means that Arthur has taken the line of least resistance," he said. "To put it vulgarly, he has bolted!"

Her heart sank, and in that moment she felt terribly alone. As if he read her thoughts, he went on:

"He has certainly precipitated the crisis, but I don't see exactly how it will affect you. There was nothing else in the letter?"

She shook her head and opened the envelope, and then saw a slip of paper which she had overlooked. It was an authority to sell his business, drawn up in legal form, and had evidently been added as an afterthought.

"If there are no further defalcations that ought to be worth something," said Dick. "I'll see what I can do."

But on this point she was firm.

"I think you've enough trouble without mine," she said quietly. "Did you find anything in the ruins?"

He started.

"Why—no," he said, a little unconvincingly. "Did you see me go back?"

"I'm afraid I spied on you," she said, with a pathetic little smile. "Dick, I'm so worried about you; I wish you wouldn't go into these places alone."

"There was nothing to fear," he said. "I thought I saw something on the floor which gave me a clew to Harry's fate, but it was nothing—nothing."

He changed the subject abruptly. She had a feeling that he was not telling her all that he had seen.

Mary and she had dinner alone, and Glover, the butler, free from the restraining presence of Dick Alford, was inclined to be talkative.

"There's no doubt Mr. Alford looks after the policemen. I have had to get a food basket ready—thermos flask and everything the heart can desire. Personally, miss, I don't believe in pampering the police. They're only dissatisfied when they go back to their own homes. He won't have anybody take the basket down to them, either. 'No,' he said, 'I'll take it myself. You have it ready at nine o'clock, put it just outside the servants' door.' My own opinion is that they'd be much more pleased with bread and cheese and a bottle of beer. What's the good of making chicken sandwiches for policemen? And having a bottle of the best wine up from the cellar! It's a waste of good food!"

Leslie listened, petrified. Now she understood!

The food was not for the police—it was for Harry! Harry, held prisoner in Chelford Abbey—by whom?

The bane of life that day had been the London reporters. The "Red Lion Inn" at Chelfordbury was already filled with them, and not an hour passed that one did not make his way to the house in a vain endeavor to interview the second son. One intercepted him in Elm drive, and to him, as to the rest, he gave the same reply.

"You boys can't expect me to tell you any more than I already know," he said, at bay. "My brother has disappeared, but I believe he is still alive."

"Who do you think is responsible for these outrages, Mr. Alford?" asked the reporter.

Dick shook his head.

"If I knew, it isn't reasonable to suppose that I should discuss the matter with you."

"Is it the Black Abbot?"

"The Black Abbot has nothing whatever to do with this crime," said Dick shortly. "Unless I credit you with being so foolish as to believe in ghosts, it is unnecessary for me to tell you that there is no such thing as a Black Abbot, and the figure that has been seen in these grounds was somebody masquerading for his own purpose."

"A practical joke?" suggested the newspaper man.

"I don't think it was a practical joke; indeed, I am sure there is something very serious behind it. But I can't tell you any more."

"Mr. Alford," said the reporter, "I'm going to ask you a very delicate question, and I hope you won't think it an impertinence. If your brother is dead, then the title comes to you, does it not?"

"Yes," said Dick.

"You won't be offended if I tell you that there is a little talk in the village of some antagonism between your brother and you. I am told there have been frequent quarrels."

Dick mastered his anger with a great effort, realizing that the reporter was not intending to be impertinent, but simply epitomizing the gossip of the countryside.

"My brother was very nervous and quick-tempered," he said, "but I've never had a serious quarrel with him in my life."

"Is it true that Lord Chelford's fiancee, Miss Leslie Gwyn, recently broke off her engagement with your brother?"

"Perfectly true," said Dick, stifling his impatience.

"And yet she is staying at Fossaway Manor as your guest?" The keen eyes of the reporter were watching him closely. He saw the blood mount to his victim's cheeks and hastened to add: "I'm merely telling you what other people will tell you, Mr. Alford. I have a much wider experience of the uncharity and suspicion that surrounds every man associated with a crime like this. If you are annoyed with me I can understand it, but I can assure you that I only want to help you."

"That I quite believe," said Dick with a smile. "But you can understand just how embarrassing your questions are. I will tell you the truth and you may put it into your paper. I am satisfied there is a very terrible danger overhanging Miss Leslie Gwyn, and it is for that reason, and that reason alone, I have asked her to stay at the hall, which is under police protection and where I know she will be safe. Her brother has gone abroad, and I cannot allow her to stay at Willow House alone."

"You mean she is in danger from the same person that killed Thomas the footman, and who is responsible for the disappearance of Lord Chelford?"

Dick nodded, and the newspaper man made a mental note.

"Thank you," he said. "You will find that this little talk has cleared the air. In cases like this, if you clear up the minor mysteries as you go along, it makes for everybody's comfort."

Dick, who had been trembling with anger through the interview, had to agree, in the calm moments which followed, that the reporter had taken a sane view of the matter. When he met Leslie a few minutes later he told her of the interview. She was in the study alone, and had just finished writing a letter, which lay face downward on the blotting pad. She saw him him glance at the envelope and turned it up. It was addressed to Fabrian Gilder.

"What have you said?" he asked.

"I've told him that I've considered the matter, and I've decided that I could not marry him—in any circumstances it would be impossible now, so soon after Harry's disappearance."

He picked up the letter, and taking out his pocket-case, tore off a stamp and affixed it.

"I'll see that this goes," he said grimly. Then, seeing her tired face: "Poor old girl, you're having a bad time."

The pressure of her hand, the love and sympathy in her voice, were almost too much for him, and he had to set his teeth or he would have taken her in his arms and, in that place of tragedy and horror told her of the love that was shaking him, and which had added a new and fearful burden to his overstrung nerves.

"Go to bed early," he said, with an effort at gayety, "and rise with the dawn. I shall be busy till very late."

"The butler was telling me that you have ordered a basket of food for the policemen."

Not a muscle of his face moved.

"That is so; one or two men who are patrolling the cutting need a little light refreshment. They cannot get to the house and we haven't men to relieve them."

She was sensible enough not to pursue the subject.

It was only on her earnest entreaty that, as the night grew on, Mary Wenner remained. The girl was a bundle of nerves, started at every sound, paled and flushed with the opening of a door, and the sound of a falling plate in the servery while they were at dinner had made her scream.

"I can't help it, my dear; I'm naturally temperamental," she explained. "And this house has got me shivering! I can't leave another young lady without a chaperon, or I'd fly off to London before it got dark."

She had been in the library that afternoon, she told Leslie, and the sight of that familiar room with its empty chair had been almost the last straw.

"I had to have a good cry," she confessed, "and I'm not ashamed of it. Harry was one of the best—you don't mind me calling him Harry, do you, dear?" And, when Leslie shook her head: "I can't say that I was fond of him as a young girl ought to be fond of a man she loves, but he was very nice. He had his tempers, the same as the rest of us, but they were only his high spirits. I could never understand why he hated Mr. Alford."

Leslie looked at her incredulously.

"Hated Mr. Alford?" she repeated. "Surely you're mistaken? They were very good friends."

Mary shook her head.

"No, they weren't," she said. "It all arose out of her ladyship's picture."

"The late Lady Chelford?"

"That was the lady," nodded Mary. "It happened three years ago. Dick Alford suggested that the portrait should be moved to the gallery. I think he was silly to say it, knowing how Harry adored his mother, and when he said the picture was depressing—and that was the silliest thing of all—Harry got right up in the air! It was dreadful, the things he said to Mr. Alford—and before me, too! Dick Alford realized his mistake: I could see that, and he tried to pacify Harry, but for a fortnight they didn't speak."

The face and shoulders of the picture had been cut from the frame.

Leslie was silent. Slowly the inner life of Fossaway Manor was beginning to reveal itself to her; she had seen nothing of these cross currents, had not suspected, even dimly, the conflicting antagonism which must have been visible to Harry Chelford's secretary.

"They were very friendly sometimes. You'd think that Harry was fond of him, and I think he was," Mary continued; "but the quarrels used to break out every now and then, once because Dick always stood with his back to the picture, and never looked at it at all. He hated it, I'm sure of that. Of course, he never took me into his confidence. We were not what you might term good friends. I suppose it was foolish of me to take up Harry's quarrel, but I never liked Dick—you don't mind me calling him Dick?—after that."

She glanced nervously through the window. She sun had set, and dusk was creeping over the great park.

"If I get any sleep tonight I'll be lucky," she said. "Do you mind if I leave my door open and keep the light burning?"

"Why, of course not," smiled Leslie.

"There is a lock on the door, and I asked Glover to find me the key," Miss Wenner went on. "And I'll tell you frankly, Leslie, that if he hadn't found it I wouldn't have stayed, not for all the money in the world."

Leslie felt that it would be indiscreet to offer encouragement to a further discussion of this subject, for she was as reluctant to spend the night under that roof as her new found friend.

Though she waited up till nearly eleven, she did not see Dick, and, in response to the repeated hints of the girl, they went upstairs together.

The Manor was lighted by a power plant which was accommodated in a small shed midway between the house and the Ravensrill, and owed its installation to Dick's enterprise.

Harry always had candles in his room, Mary told her, but accepted the lighting of his library as a compromise.

"It's a very strange thing," said Mary from her inner room, "but Harry was afraid of electricity. In thunderstorms he always went down into the cellar and stayed there until they were over. He used to have a bed which was made every day in the summer in case of a storm coming on in the night, and——"

At that moment all the lights in the room went out.

"Have you turned the lights off?" asked Mary's anxious voice.

"No, I haven't been near the switch; I expect a fuse has gone," said the girl.

There were matches and candles on the dressing table, she remembered, and, groping her way to the table, she lit the two candles. Mary was standing in the doorway, very pale and wide-eyed.

"What was the meaning of that?" she asked, her voice sharp with fear, which was beginning to communicate itself to Leslie.

She forced a smile.

"That happens in the best regulated houses," she said, with spurious gayety. "The door is locked, so there's nothing to be afraid of."

And then she heard footsteps in the corridor; there was a knock at the door that made Mary jump.

"Are you there, Leslie?" It was Dick's voice. "Something has gone wrong with the lighting arrangements; we'll put it right in a minute or two."

"Are the lights out everywhere?" asked Mary, but he was gone.

Twenty minutes passed and again Leslie heard his footsteps approaching.

"I'm afraid we shan't be able to fix up the lights till the morning. Have you candles? Did Glover put a flash light for you?"

"We've everything we want," said Leslie. "Don't worry about us; we shall be asleep in ten minutes."

"Not me," murmured Miss Wenner tremulously. "I shan't sleep a wink!"

By the light of her candle she had replaced most of the garments she had discarded when the lights went out.

"I knew I oughtn't to have stayed—there's somebody coming along the corridor!"

"It is only Mr. Alford."

But her ears caught the sound of two pairs of feet, and presently Dick's voice spoke.

"Do you mind if I leave one of Puttler's men outside your door?" he asked. "Don't be alarmed if you hear him walking about in the night."

"Is anything wrong, Dick?"

"No, no, nothing wrong; only I knew Miss Wenner was rather nervous."

"I am," quavered Miss Wenner, loudly. "It's very good of you, Mr. Alford."

"You had better keep your windows fastened," said Dick. "There is a system of ventilation in the room, so you needn't be afraid of waking with a headache. Good-night."

When he had gone, Mary Wenner looked solemnly at her companion.

"Did you hear what he said about keeping the windows shut?" she asked hollowly. "My Gawd!"

"Don't be silly, Mary."

The girl was past feeling comfortable, but she had need to set an example.

"Come along, I'll help you fasten the windows."

"'Keep the windows fastened,'" repeated Mary Wenner. "There's something doing!"

They went from one to the other of the leaded windows, closed them and pressed down the catches. Suddenly Mary clutched the girl's arm fiercely.

"There's a man under my bed!" she gasped, staring wildly at the drooping counterpane.

With a fluttering heart Leslie lifted the cover, and pulled out a pair of riding boots, the soles of which the frightened secretary had seen, and they both laughed hysterically.

"I wish I could bring my bed into your room." Mary looked helplessly at the heavy four-poster to which she had been assigned.

"You can come and sleep with me," said Leslie. "I've got a big bed." And this offer was most gratefully accepted.

"Have a look under your bed first," said Miss Wenner nervously, and not till this ritual had been observed did she commence very slowly to undress.

Down below in the library Dick was in consultation with Puttler, who had just returned from a hasty visit to Scotland Yard.

"The batteries were smashed, and an attempt had been made to cut the main cable," reported Dick. "I got to the power house just after it happened, but I saw nobody."

Puttler pulled at his comic little nose and there was a look of trouble in his brown eyes.

"The commissioner thinks you ought to have a dozen men down here and make a cleanup," he said. "I've brought three, and I think they all ought to be inside the house. One we've got in the east wing, another in the west, and a patrol in the hall. That will leave you and me and the local 'flatties' for the grounds. Though I think we might as well stay here—you want a battalion to patrol the estate properly. By the way, when I was looking around early this morning I found a great mound of earth in the northeast corner of the estate, near the river. One of your game-keepers told me it was called Chelford Greed. What is the idea?"

The Black Abbot

"One of my ancestors—I don't know which one—planned and carried out a big steal. You probably know that the charter by which we received these lands from King Henry confines the northern boundary of the estate to the course of the Ravensrill, and the ingenious Chelford of the times had the idea of changing the course of the Ravensrill so that the estate would embrace another thousand acres. The Chelford Greed was the dam he built. The natural course of the Ravensrill runs through the Long meadow. It was one of those clever little pieces of robbery that has made us landed proprietors what we are! As I say, I don't know which of the Chelfords planned this piece of larceny, because there is no written record, and the legend has come down from mouth to mouth, so to speak."

He looked up at the big portrait above the fireplace and shook his head.

Puttler was interested.

"As how?" he asked.

"I'll tell you one of these days," said Dick. "I wonder if those girls are asleep?"

He stole quietly up the stairs. The man on duty in the corridor flashed a lamp upon him as he approached.

"No sound," he whispered, and Dick crept downstairs again.

It was arranged that he and Puttler should snatch a few hours' sleep in turn, the other patrolling round and round the block of buildings. At two o'clock in the morning he was aroused from a deep slumber to feel Puttler shaking gently at his shoulder.

"Nothing has happened," said the detective, eying with a friendly look the sofa from which Dick struggled. "I've warmed up some grub for you."

A spirit stove was burning on the desk and the kettle above was steaming. Dick poured the black coffee into a glass and scalded himself to wakefulness.

"One of the local men thought he saw somebody moving and challenged," reported Puttler, settling himself down with a luxurious sigh. "But it was probably only a bush. These birds are jumpy—they see a Black Abbot in every shadow!"

Dick sipped at the boiling fluid and broke a biscuit with his disengaged hand.

"Thank God this can't go on much longer!" he said. "By the way, did you bring those papers from London?"

"I gave them to you in the library; they were in the blue envelope."

He crossed the hall, unlocked the door of the library and went in, mechanically switching on the light, and only then remembering that for the time being Fossaway Manor was denied the services of the little power house. He went back to the study and got his lamp and picked his way across the room to the desk. The envelope was where he had put it, and he slipped this into his pocket. As he did so, he was aware that a cold wind was blowing. He sent his light along the windows. That at the end was open; one of the curtains, which had been drawn across, lay in a heap on the ground.

He went to the door and called Puttler softly and the detective joined him.

"Somebody has been here, he said, and pointed to the curtain and the twisted pole that had supported it.

It was easy to see how the intruder had made his way into the library. Two of the panes near the iron handle which fastened one leaf of the window had been broken, and evidently the midnight visitor, in entering, must have fallen and, catching hold of the curtain to save himself, brought it to the ground, breaking away the pole which was hanging drunkenly.

"I passed here ten minutes ago, and the window was shut then," said Puttler.

"He may have been inside at the moment," replied Dick thoughtfully. "I wonder what has been taken?"

He examined the desk. Evidently the intruder had not opened any of the drawers, though, if he had done so, his labors would have been in vain, since Dick had cleared every document out of the room early in the day. As they circulated the room, Puttler stumbled over something.

"Where did this come from?" he asked.

It was a light ladder, and Dick recognized it as one of two that were part of the library furniture, and was employed to reach books from the top shelf of the lower tier.

"When I saw this last it was standing at the end of the room," he said.

He flashed his lamp up on to the shelves, looking for a gap in the long line of books. So doing, his lamp swept across that space intervening between the shelves which was covered by the portrait of the late Lady Chelford. He could see the big gold frame, caught a glimpse of one white hand hanging gracefully, and then something brought his lamp back. He heard the church warden detective swear softly. Himself, he was speechless. The light of his lamp focused on the place where the woman's face had been, and where now was a black emptiness.

The face and shoulders of the picture had been cut from the frame, and the ragged strands of canvas told him that it had been cut by an unskilled hand.

Neither man spoke until they were back in the little study, and then Puttler looked gloomily at his companion.

"What do you make of that?"

"Heaven knows!" groaned Dick.

The study door was closed, and he had pulled across a dark curtain which had been hung that day for the purpose.

"I suppose I'd better get out, though I don't suppose I shall find anything."

"Wait until I've had the remainder of your coffee and I'll come with you," said Puttler. "No, Mr. Alford, I never felt less like sleep. We shall have daylight in a couple of hours. Wait."

He turned out the oil lamp which had been requisitioned from the kitchen, blew down the glass chimney and the room was in darkness.

"Now you can pull open those curtains and go out," he said, "if that is your way."

Dick moved the curtains slightly and looked out. The world lay peaceful, silent, in the pallid light of the moon, and as he opened the door the sweet scent of the earth and the cold morn greeted him fragrantly.

His foot was raised to step across the threshold when Puttler's big hand closed round his arm.

"Wait," he whispered again.

Dick stood motionless.

"I see nothing," he said in the same tone.

Still Puttler held him, his head bent, listening.

"All right," he said, released his grip and stepped out on to the little terrace before the second son.

He gave a swift glance left and right.

"What was it?" asked Dick, in surprise.

"Somebody breathing," was Puttler's astonishing reply. "You won't believe that I could hear a man breathing a dozen yards away, but I can. It's one of my many animal qualities."

He took a little run, cleared the gravel path in a bound and went noiselessly along the grass to the left. Presently Dick saw him returning at a jog trot. The detective went past and disappeared round the wing of the block. In the few minutes he returned.

"Hearing and scent are my two qualities. Can you smell anything?"

Dick sniffed the morning air.

"No," he confessed.

"Come along with me."

This time he walked softly across the path, explaining that he was afraid of waking the girls who slept almost immediately above them.

They went to the end of the wing, and then the sergeant halted.

"Now do you smell anything?" he asked.

Dick sniffed again. There was a sweet odor in the air, the scent of some exotic flower that seemed familiar to him.

"Does anybody in this house smoke scented cigarettes?" asked the detective, and Dick went suddenly cold.

"Harry!"

"Your brother, eh" Puttler's deep-set eyes surveyed him in the half light. "That doesn't necessarily mean that he is smoking them. Where were they kept?"

"In the library as a rule."

Puttler began searching the grounds with the aid of his lamp. He had not gone far before he saw something and picked it up. It was a half-smoked cigarette with a rose-leaf tip.

"Humph!" muttered Puttler, and continued his search—a search which yielded no further evidence.

Retracing their steps, they passed the study door, and Puttler, who was walking a little ahead, stumbled over something, and put his light to the ground.

"You keep rather a lot of ladders about here, Mr. Alford," he said, in a low voice. "A library ladder outside? What's the great idea?"

The ladder was lying parallel with the gravel drive, and Puttler examined it rung by rung.

"That wasn't here last night, I'll take my oath," he said.

"No," said Dick, puzzled; "it usually hangs on two pegs near the garage."

He lifted it up. It was a long, light, triangular ladder tapering to a point at the top, and used by the staff for outside window cleaning.

"You had better have it chained up," was all Puttler said after he had finished his inspection. "The man who brought this here was the man who cut off your light supply, and, incidentally——"

Far away in the grounds came the faint sound of a man's voice, challenging in military fashion."

"Halt! Who goes there?"

"That's Renwick, a local man," said Puttler immediately.

They ran towards the sound of the voice, and presently saw the flicker of his lantern; and it was a badly scared man who challenged them a few minutes later. He had seen nothing, he said, but he had heard voices.

"One of them was laughing. I thought at first it was you, sergeant, but when I heard it again it was so wild that I got a little nervous."

"Did anybody answer your challenge?"

"No, but the voices stopped. I couldn't hear the woman's voice—"

"The woman's voice?" said Dick quickly. "Was it a woman? Surely you're mistaken?"

"I could swear to it," said the watcher. "It was the woman's voice I heard first, and the man who laughed. I think the voices must have stopped as soon as I put my lamp on."

"In what direction?"

English Print Material Will Make Cover-all for School Girl's Frocks

A cover-all for school days can be easily made by hand or quickly put together by the girl who uses the ewing machine, and is a good-looking and useful article when finished.

The material for the cover-all is English print in any color desired. The width of the cloth should be 27 inches, while the necessary length can be determined by measuring the length of your dress from the top of the shoulder to the bottom of the hem, multiplying by two, and adding 1-4 yard. One bolt of bias lawn tape is required for binding the edges.

The first sketch above shows the material folded in half, after 1-4 yard has been cut from the end of the strip. Measure the breadth of your shoulders and mark this width off on the middle of the folded edge. Then with a yardstick draw lines from these marks to the bottom of the material, as shown by the dotted lines in the sketch. The hole for the neck, large enough to allow the cover-all to be pulled on over the head, should be marked with pencil also. Then with the material pinned securely at the lower corners, cut very carefully along the pencil lines.

The next group of sketches shows the pocket and ties which are cut from the extra 1-4 yard of material. The pocket is cut from a square piece, with the two lower corners rounded. The top is bound with a strip of the tape, a piece is sewed on 3-4 inch below the binding, and all of the edges are turned to the wrong side and basted into place. There are four ties about 12 inches long and 2 inches wide, which are made double by seaming on the wrong side and turning out. One end of each tie is trimmed with tape like the pocket.

The third sketch shows the cover-all opened up, with all the edges bound with tape, and with the pocket and ties sewed into place. The last sketch shows how the finished article looks when worn.

Children of the Circus

EDWIN P. NORWOOD
—By—

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Norwood, who has written the following article expressly for The Constitution's Boys' and Girls' Section, is, besides being an executive of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus, the author of the "Diggeldy Dan" books for children.]

What of Spangleland's children?

They who travel along with the circus? Do they love the clowns? Do their eyes dance, too, when the pretty ladies go by on their snowy white horses? Do they wave to Cinderella when she drives past in her coach, bound for the billowing big-top to be greeted by those other children that await her inside?

Or are they blase? Or sometimes forgetful of all the wonderful things that surround them—just because they are near them, day after day?

Rolling all these questions into a ball, I think all can be answered in exactly ten words.

"The children of the circus are just like other children."

Only, as you may well guess, they have a far more marvelous adventure. Every little girl who travels with the circus is an "Alice in Wonderland;" every boy a "Toby Tyler," with Toby's sadder experiences left out of the story. Theirs is the finest playground in all the world. It is filled with more "uncles" and "aunts" than you can imagine; uncles and aunts who are clowns or riders, or tumblers, and who, arrayed in pink and white costumes, swing from trapezes high in the air.

Needless to tell you, the most of them are merely make-believe uncles and pretend-to-be aunts. But mother and father are sure to be near.

As, for example, little 'Lizabeth Clarke's. 'Lizabeth's father is Ernest Clarke, the greatest of all men on the flying trapeze. Her mother is Elizabeth Hannaford Clarke, herself an equestrienne of note.

In 'Lizabeth, aged three, is blended the blood of two of the world's oldest circus families — families whose arenic achievements date back six generations. There is every reason to suppose that 'Lizabeth will grow up to be a great circus artist. But just now she prefers to listen to the stories that "Uncle Jules" knows so well how to read and to tell. "Uncle Jules" is Jules Tournour, seventy years her senior, and dean of the Big Show's ninety-nine clowns.

Jules loves the children and the children adore Jules. Often, while waiting to go into the big-top, this veteran among "Joeys" will find a seat on an elephant-tub and there, surrounded by 'Lizabeth, and Dolly Jahn, and Glenn Graves, and Paul Nelson, recite strange tales of the days when he trouped through Spain. Or he may read them a page from some favorite story book.

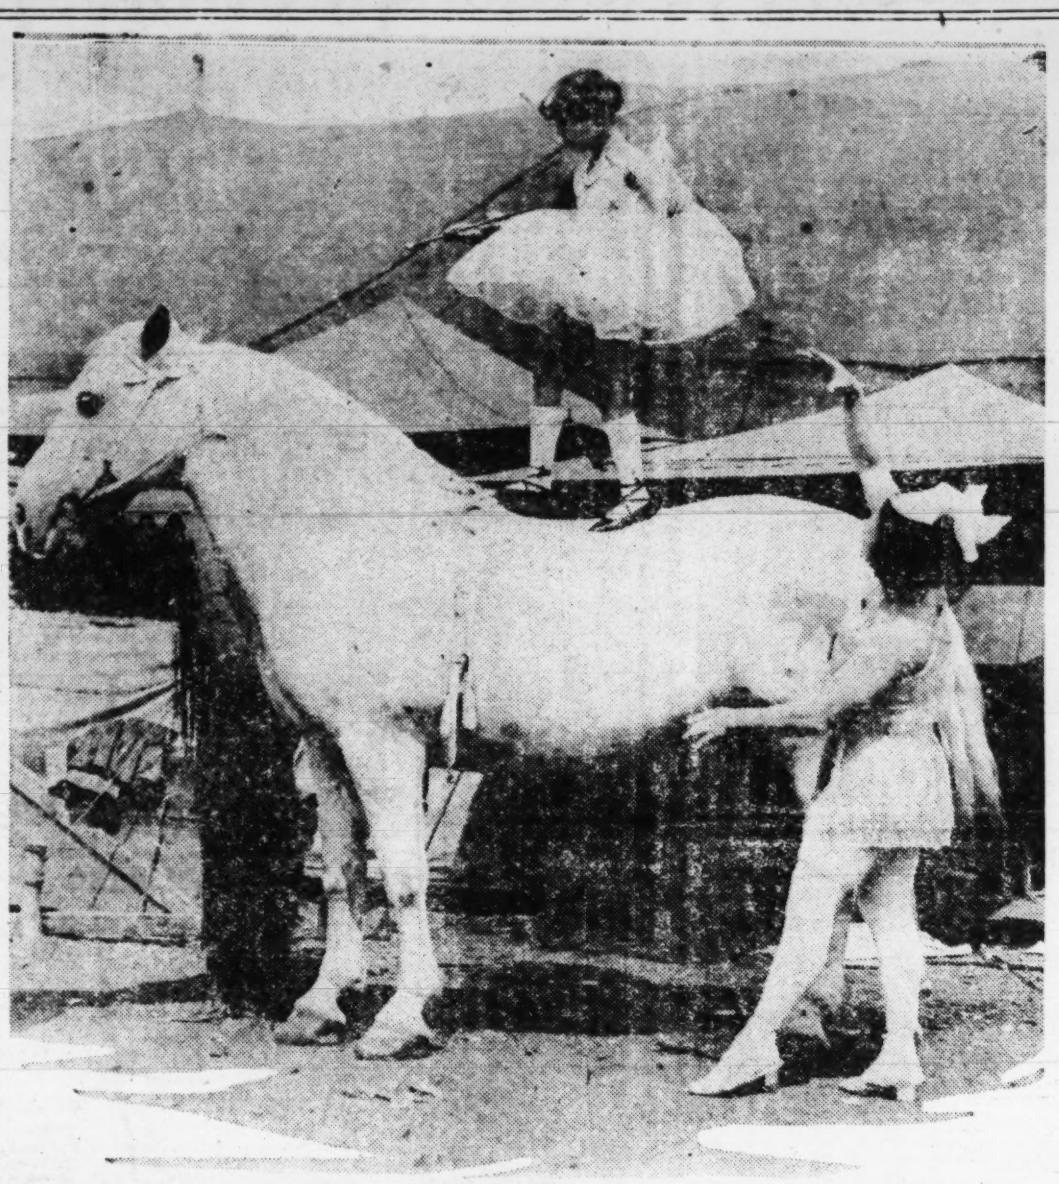

And when he is done, along will come "Uncle Buck," perhaps, to take them for a bit of a ride in his trick, jiggling, "shimmy" Ford—you know, the one that wobbles and sways and sometimes goes almost straight in the air!

Glenn Graves is the son of "Boss" Graves, who, with his hundred men, takes all the "properties" in and out of the biggest of tents.

"My papa makes rings," Glenn will tell you with pride. "He makes five at a time." By which he means, not circles of smoke but the round, wooden enclosures in which the trained horses prance or the five herds of elephants perform no end of stunts.

Glenn has a passion for being "made-up." Some days he is a prince, and it is then that he rides on one of the floats in the opening pageant. Again, nothing will do but that he be an Indian—head-dress, striped face, fringed trousers and all. His "Uncle Spader" Johnson, another of the clowns, is the one to whom he goes "for to have his face fixed up brown."

Dolly Jahn is the daughter of that famous performer who holds a tall perch-pole aloft. She, too, likes the clowns, and nothing pleases her more than to be set astride "Beauty," one of May Wirth's handsomest mounts. But most of all, Dolly finds fun in the menagerie tent. It is there one may find her during the mid-afternoon, talking with her "Uncle Art," (he's Arthur Rooney, who bosses the menagerie), or her "Uncle Denny," (that is George Denman, who has charge of the elephants), or, even more likely, listening to Old Andrew's version of just how the twelve baby elephants came to be with the show.

May Wirth teaching her protegee, little Stella, the rudiments of the equestrian art

Andrew is the keeper of the mile-high giraffes. Of all things, he is fondest of the "spotted girls," as he calls his elongated charges. Next, I think, comes his pipe; and thirdly, Dolly Jahn.

Andrew never tires of telling the story of the twelve elephants, and Dolly never wearies of listening to it. The tale always ends in exactly the same way. It is too long to be repeated here, but the substance of it is that "Mary Elephant came first." But she left her other eleven friends "way, way back there in the deep, deep forest."

Now they wanted to come, too. So what do you suppose they did?

"What did they do?" demands Dolly, though she knows well enough.

"Why, they cried, and they cried, and they cried," drones Andrew, "until at last Mr. Charlie and Mr. John (that's Charles and John Ringling, you know) said, 'All right, you can come, too.' And so they packed their trunks and did."

But you must not suppose that all is play with the children of Spangleland. On the contrary, they go to school each day. Lillian Leitzel, the pretty lady who twirls, pinwheel-like, in the dome of the big-top, is their teacher, and her private dressing tent is the classroom. Here, for an hour, "Aunty Leitzel's" pupils work with slates, paper and books. Spelling is taught by the object method and fancy bred by having each in the class "make up" a story about a lion, or a horse, or a monkey or two.

And since this is a story about the "children" of the circus, you may be interested in learning that even some of the menagerie "youngsters" must have their faces washed every single day.

Those who undergo this ordeal are the twelve baby elephants. And while the operation is in progress, these wee fellows act precisely like so many children. Some squeal, some protest, some shut their eyes and make the most outrageous faces. Others, though they are few, enjoy the sponging.

For the washing is always done with a sponge. One of "Boss" Denman's men provides himself with two buckets of warm water, in each of which he puts a pinch of salt. Then he starts down Elephant Row, scouring first one face and then the next until all look like—well, not exactly like red apples, for the pachyderm's skin isn't of the kind that brings such glowing results. But anyway, they are made to shine, and the elephant babies are that much better off for the cleansing.

And why must they have their faces washed? First, so they will not develop sore eyes; and, secondly, so they won't have chafed cheeks. You see, it is the dust that is likely to give trouble. Dust gets in their eyes. It gets there because, not yet having acquired the "aim" for which the older elephants are famed, your infant pachyderm flings dust in his own eyes when he merely means to toss it to the ridge of his back or the top of his head!

As everybody knows, dust in the eyes starts the tears to flowing, and tears, even on an elephant's thick-skinned cheek, will result in much irritation if allowed to remain.

Kitty is the youngest of the twelve babies. She is eighteen months old and was born in India. Her parents are still in the jungle, so while on tour she is placed under the special care of "Old John," a bachelor elephant of some sixty-five summers. Kitty is always at John's feet or squeezing in and out between his post-like legs. The two stand together in the menagerie, sleep together aboard the circus train and, side by side, march together to and from the circus lot. Should you be at the railroad yards when the big show comes to Atlanta you will see these two—"the big and little of it"—striding way at the head of the great gray battalion. Only Kitty doesn't stride; Kitty trots. She has to, to keep up with John.

Kitty, and another midget elephant named "Little Mary," are not among the performing elephants nor will they be taught tricks until they have passed their second birthday. For, though even a very young elephant is strong and rugged, its spine might be injured were it asked to stand upon its front or its hind legs in performance. So these two lead a life of idleness.

When the troupes of older babies and the troupes of giant "grey ears" file out of the menagerie to go into the big-top to do their many tricks, "Little Mary" always trumpets mournfully. She misses her companions of Elephant Row.

But Kitty doesn't mind. She has Old John by her side. For neither is John a performer. As she is too young, he is too old. Yet in his day he was a great actor.

Away back in the decade when John L. Sullivan was champion among men, there was a certain elephant owned by Adam Forepaugh. I think the elephant's name was "Pete." Or it may have been "Emir." It doesn't matter. For one winter he was fitted out with boxing gloves and taught to spar with another elephant. His name—whatever it may have been—was changed to "John L. Sullivan." He was advertised as the "world's great boxing elephant."

That elephant was "Old John." As the years went by, more agile of his fellows took his place in the ring. He was relegated to the menagerie. His nom de plume was cut in half. He became merely "Old John." There he stands today—munching his hay, a nursemaid to a baby! But you should not smile at this—at least, not thoughtlessly.

For John, though he is doubtless wholly unconscious of the fact, is doing what many old-time human performers are doing. He is, in a way, a dumb counterpart of those arenic stars who were famous in their prime but who are now, as grandfathers and grandmothers, "bringing up" the next generation of circus performers. For not all of the children of the circus travel with it. The great majority are back on the farm, or living in the winter "home towns," going to schools, under the watchful eyes of their grandparents. That is the way the business is kept up. For every parent of the "white tops" looks forward to the time when his child will grow up to become a greater performer than himself. Thus there is an ever-present crop of potential artists—the children of today's circus are but the stars of it's tomorrow.

Puppet Shows Are Found Everywhere

Puppet shows, though always more popular in Europe than in this country, nevertheless have considerable interest for children all over the world. And even grownups find a great deal of entertainment in the modern developments of these figures. Puppets, you will remember, are little doll figures that are made to act by the use of strings and wires in the hands of skilled operators, who also carry on the necessary conversation from their places of concealment.

The French call these puppets marionettes. In England and this country they have been known in the past as "Punch and Judy" shows. In the latter case, the figures were commonly moved by placing the fingers in the figures instead of using strings.

In 1674 there is a record for a puppet opera in Paris. There are a number of regular puppet theaters in Paris and others in the larger cities in Italy. Germany, too, has quite a number of these shows, but they move from place to place and are not so widely patronized as in other countries.

MILNER, GA.

Hello Everybody: Yes, I'm a new member, but wont you let me join your club?

Now I just wonder if I have a twin? My birthday is August 22. I am a blonde, have brown hair (bobbed, of course), brown eyes. I guess we will have some great poets if the boys and girls keep writing such good poems.

Well, I have got to go feed the chickens, so everyone write and send your pictures.

EMMA BUCHANAN.

COPPER HILL, TENN.

The story below was written especially for the "Young Folks' Section" of The Constitution, by Earl Henry, Box 513, Copperhill, Tenn.

THE RATTLER'S SEIGE.
By Earl Henry.

With our faithful guide, Jim Carson, father, my older brother, Hall, and I started out for a hunting trip in the mountains. The first night in camp my father, Jim and Hall related snake tales until I was afraid to go to sleep.

Next evening I was out hunting alone when I came upon a small level on top of a hill. All around me were small weeds, somewhat like a milkweed in shape and size. These weeds contained a small, dry pod. I bent to examine the plant when, in my imagination, I saw a dark coiling form and heard the rattle of a rattlesnake about to strike.

About midway of the level stretch I stopped to take some pictures. While backing to secure a better view I brushed against one of the weeds, instantly I heard the warning whir of the rattler. I jumped back and started to run in the opposite direction when from behind and from each side of me came the whir. Turning to the opposite side I heard the same thing. I was hemmed off from escape by a rattler on every side. If my heart ever sank in any of my boyish adventures it sank then. I had heard that if you stood still a rattler would not bite, so believe me, I was still.

It had begun to get dark and a soft breeze was blowing. Repeatedly I heard the angry whir from the weeds but never did I hear the swissing sound that would herald the departure of one of the snakes. I was beginning to get desperate. At last I hit upon a scheme, gathering myself slowly I leaped one of the weeds and went over the level toward the camp as fast as my legs would allow and begging them to go faster.

When I told Jim of my adventure I heard him chuckle softly to himself. I could not believe that my hair had not turned gray until Hal rudely jerked a handful from my head to show me.

Next morning as we were passing the level Jim pulled one of the dry pods from a weed and shook it in my ear. It sounded exactly like the whir of a rattler.

"There's your rattler," he laughed.

"Aw! It might have been a rattler I heard," I retorted weakly.

"Naw, they ain't a rattler in this country," answered Jim.

THE END.

DRAKETOWN, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Please admit another boy to your club? I have been a silent reader for a long time and decided I wanted to join, too.

I will describe myself now. I have light hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, 4 feet 6 inches tall and weigh 108 pounds. I go to Bulah Junior High school, and am to study the eighth grade next year.

I live on a farm of 160 acres, and think a farm is the grandest place in the world for boys who like outdoor sports, such as hunting, fishing, boat riding, horseback riding and swimming. All these are my sports I enjoy, but most of all swimming and hunting.

For pets I have a dog whose name is Rip and a mule named Jack.

I almost forgot to tell you I am 14 years old and my birthday is June 16. Who is my twin? If I have one please write me.

LOUIS ALLGOOD.

P. S.—Will be glad to hear from any of you friends and I will assure an answer. —L. A.

GASTONIA, N. C.

Dear Unknown Friends: Will you admit a lonely North Carolina boy into your lovely club of boys and girls? I have been reading the letters for a long while, but have never written before so I hope I will get a hearty welcome.

I have brown eyes, brown hair, fair complexion, weigh 120 pounds and am 16 years old. My birthday is April 8. My father is dead so you know I don't know the love of one. But I have a dear old mother I love and I know she loves me.

I am very fond of the funnies. I like them all.

For pets I don't have any, but love all animals and fowls. I play baseball on the Rex first nine. I just love baseball, too. I play second base. I also like basketball. Do you folks like to read? I do, especially Zane Grey, and I love James D. Vaughan's song books. I sure love music of all kinds. Do you?

Well, I want all you folks to write to me. I will answer all mail received.

Dear Friends: I will write you to let you know there is one more girl in Florida.

Well, as I see the rest of the boys and girls describe themselves I guess I will begin. I have light hair, blue eyes, fair complexion and my weight is 118 pounds. My height is 5 feet 2 inches. My age is 15.

I am going to school at present. For my pastime I go to church and to parties.

I wish I could hear from you boys and girls, for I am fond of writing to young folks.

IDA MAE CONNER.

FORT BENNING, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: For some time since coming to Georgia I have been an enthusiastic reader of The Constitution and more especially the "Young People's Section." I have been reading the list of cheers of the various schools and it has brought some of my own old school cheers. I am sending two of these and hope to be able to recall some more in the near future.

With best wishes to all Constitution readers and to the editors of your splendid page, I remain,

Sincerely Yours,

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you squeeze over and let another little Georgia girl in? This is my first letter to your wonderful club, but I read them every Sunday.

I am ten years old and in the fifth grade. Our school started August 30. I have dark brown hair, brown eyes, medium complexion, weigh 62 pounds and am about 4 feet 2 inches high. Who is my twin?

I take music and like it very much. This is my third year.

I have one pet which is a dog. He is a Fox Terrier. His name is Frisky. He is a great jumper and he can jump as high as my head.

Which of the funnies do you like best? I like Orphan Annie, the Gumps and Winnie Winkle best.

I have one sister and two brothers.

Hello Everybody: Here comes a Hapevillan instead of an Atlantan like I was.

How many kiddies are glad that school has started? I am. I will be in the sixth grade. We have six teachers, one for each lesson.

I sure do like the movies. I could just live in them. My favorite stars are Tom Mix, Fred Thompson, Bebe Daniels and Colleen Moore.

Tennis is my favorite sport, then skating. I can't do either one very well.

Do all of you love pets? I do. I have a little black and white cat. It sure is cute. I call her Katinka.

My letter is growing longer each minute. I will answer all letters I receive, so let them fly to

SARAH FRANCES BAKER.

CHATTAHOOCHEE, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Here is another lonely girl that wants to join the club of letter writers.

Perhaps I had better give a description of myself, so here goes: Age, 14; height, 5 feet 5 inches; weight, 137; eyes, blue; hair, black, and complexion, fair.

This is all I will write for this time. I will close looking for lots of mail.

GRACE BELL CARLILE.

KING FUZZY-PAWS

BY GLEB E. BOTKIN.

Tickletail and Jumpy realized that they would have to do something to keep Uncle Reddy out-of-doors, because they did not want him to find the bear in their playroom. "You promised that you would teach us how to ski, Uncle Reddy," said Tickletail, "and I have the skis all ready and waiting for us." Uncle Reddy looked up at the playroom window. Perhaps he hadn't seen anything, after all. Tickletail brought the skis and they started out. At first Tickletail had a hard time standing up, but he finally discovered that he was not as liable to fall when he went a little faster. Uncle Reddy took them down a little hill and Tickletail fell, but Uncle Reddy only laughed and told him that he was learning very quickly and would soon be able to keep his balance even on a hill.

As Uncle Reddy helped Tickletail to his feet again he glanced in the direction of the palace and this time there could be no doubt as to what he saw. There was not only a bear's face in the playroom window, he was actually leaning out! Tickletail wanted to shout to Woofer to pull his head in, but he knew that would only make Uncle Reddy more suspicious.

"We must go up to the playroom at once," cried Uncle Reddy, "and see what this strange animal is doing."

"I think it's a new servant," said Tickletail. "At any rate I shall go and find out," said Uncle Reddy, so Tickletail and Jumpy took off their skis and followed him up the stairs. Tickletail was hoping that Woofer had the door locked, but such was not the case. There he was leaning out of the open window catching snowflakes on his tongue! Just as though he weren't in danger of being thrown in jail! "What are you doing here?" said Uncle Reddy. "Eating bananas," said Woofer calmly, "I'm a great bear for bananas." And he pointed to a corner of the room where there were at least four dozen bananas which he had brought up from the kitchen.

"Who are you?" asked Uncle Reddy. "I'm just a friend of Tickletail's, who is a servant of His Majesty King Fuzzy-Paws," answered Woofer, balancing on the window sill. "I think there's something very funny about this," said Uncle Reddy, pointing at the paint on the bear's face.

"What's that noise I hear in the hall," said Woofer, and Uncle Reddy went to the door and looked out. When he came back the bear had disappeared!

As a matter of fact, the moment Uncle Reddy turned his back Woofer had simply gone backwards over the window sill and, clinging to a trellis which ran outside the window, had let himself down to the ground. He was really a very acrobatic bear and this came in handy when he was up to his tricks.

"Tickletail," said Uncle Reddy, leaning out the window, to see whether he could catch a glimpse of Woofer or not, "What do you know about this bear?" "Not very much, Uncle Reddy, said Tickletail, "but I am sure that he is very nice." "I think that there is something very funny about it all," said Uncle Reddy, shaking his head, "but that bear is liable to get lost in this snow storm, because I see him over there taking the road to the river valley instead of to the forest." Sure enough, there was a black speck against the white background, which Tickletail felt sure was Woofer.

"When it snows, no one can go through the pass," said Uncle Reddy, "so that bear will punish himself, because he will never find his way out unless he knows it very well."

"Oh, Uncle Reddy, I couldn't have anything happen to Woofer," cried the Crown Prince. "I thought you didn't know his name," said Uncle Reddy. "Now tell me the truth about him if you don't want him to die out there in the snow."

"It's the bandit bear," said Tickletail, "but really, he is very good and I wouldn't want him to be put in jail."

"Well, we won't let him be put in jail unless we think that he deserves it," promised Uncle Reddy, but we must stop him before he runs into the drifts in the pass. Come, get on your snowshoes, we can make better time than Woofer can." They started out, and every moment it snowed harder and harder.

TICKLETAIL SAT DOWN ON THE FLOOR OF THE CABIN, TIRED FROM HIS WALK THROUGH THE SNOW.

Tickletail and Uncle Reddy struggled on through the storm. "I am glad that Woofer ate all those bananas," said Tickletail, "because he isn't as liable to get hungry." However, Uncle Reddy couldn't hear him, because the wind was blowing so hard and the snow was falling faster at every step they took.

Tickletail was walking with his eyes on the ground so that the snow would not blind him and all of a sudden he saw funny tracks in the snow. They looked just as though someone had been dancing a jig, and Tickletail knew that they were on the right track. Because Woofer had told him that he always danced instead of walked and that the animals could trace him because his footprints were different from those of anyone else. As the Crown Prince could not make Uncle Reddy hear what he was saying, he pulled at his arm and made him look down at the ground. Uncle Reddy nodded his head to show that he understood.

The storm seemed to be growing worse and worse until Uncle Reddy began to be sorry that he had brought Tickletail with him. But he knew that at any time when Tickletail could no longer walk he could pick him up and carry him. Suddenly Redfur stumbled. He would have fallen to the ground but his hand touched something and clung to it. He cleared the snow away from his eyes to see what the dark object in front of him might be. He found himself standing in front of a log cabin, which he didn't remember ever having seen before on his way to the pass. In a moment he found the door, opened it and he and Tickletail stepped inside out of the raging storm. Tickletail sat right down on the floor to rest. As soon as Uncle Reddy could see clearly he discovered that someone else had reached the cabin before them because he could just make out a dark shape in the corner.

Uncle Reddy moved toward the dark object in the far corner of the cabin, but as he did so it disappeared right under his eyes! However, he stumbled against wood that had been piled up by the woodsman who had evidently abandoned the cabin and made a roaring fire in the fireplace. As he and Tickletail sat there warming themselves, Uncle Reddy could not resist glancing every now and then in the direction where he had seen that dark form. He felt very uneasy and once he could have sworn that he saw bright eyes looking at him out of the darkness.

From a little waterproof pack which he carried Uncle Reddy took out some sandwiches and a thermos bottle of milk, so he and Tickletail had quite a feast and every moment the cabin grew more comfortable from the heat of the fire. The storm had been growing worse and Uncle Reddy decided that they had better not start out again.

"I don't like to think of Woofer being caught in the drifts in the pass," said Tickletail. "Do you suppose he will be all right, Uncle Reddy?" "Perhaps he knows the way," said Uncle Reddy, "and it won't do us any good to worry, Tickletail. If he hadn't have jumped out of the window, he might have found that I might have been his friend." Redfur was worried about keeping Tickletail out for such a length of time, because the king and queen would have no way of knowing that he was safe and warm.

After a while the warmth of the fire made Tickletail and Uncle Reddy feel very sleepy. There was a bed in the corner of the room and they put the mattress on the floor in front of the fire and stretched out with their coats over them. Just as Uncle Reddy was dropping off to sleep he heard something moving. It seemed to be under him in the floor and he was certain that he heard someone mumbling. How on earth could anyone be under the floor of that cabin? Uncle Reddy arose carefully, so as not to awaken Tickletail.

BOB MANLEY AT LAKEVIEW

A Story of Prep School and the Football Field

BY JACK GIHON

Author of "Prince Erik of Glaagsbaden," "The City of the Deep," "The Head Hunters of San Blas," etc.

SYNOPSIS.

When Bob Manley won a place on Lakeview's regular football team, he incurred the unfounded jealous enmity of "Dude" Rimley, a junior who had failed to make the team. Coach Dale and "Uncle Joe" Thomas, the trainer, have their boys perfected, near the end of an undefeated season, for the Thanksgiving game against Blenton, a neighboring school and an old rival. On Saturday night preceding Thanksgiving is the annual class rush, in which members of the various classes try to put their insignia atop a flagpole in the quadrangle. Bob Manley is about to reach his goal for the sophomores, when "Dude," in front of him, is apparently badly injured. Bob stops to aid the boy, and Steve Waters, football captain, wins for the seniors.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT IV.

For half an hour, the boys stayed on the campus, waiting for news, wondering what had happened. "I didn't see anybody touch Dude," said Bob. "He was right beside me. Suddenly he crumpled up, and

"You will consider yourself suspended until we have had a formal investigation."

screamed."

He was interrupted by one of the professors, calling. "Is Bob Manley there?"

"Here, sir," answered Bob.

The professor advanced. "The dean wishes to speak to you at once—in his private office," he said.

Bob presumed that he wanted to know what he had seen in regard to the accident. But there was a cold note in the professor's voice. It seemed like contempt, Bob thought. And on the way to the dean's office he wondered.

The dean sat at his desk in his private office, and looked up and frowned as Bob entered. He began with what he had to say at once.

"We've thought a good deal of you at Lakeview, Manley."

"Thank you, sir," answered Bob.

The dean cleared his throat. "And yet," he said, "what you've done tonight is hardly in keeping with good sportsmanship, and is a shame and a sorrow to this school."

"What I've done tonight!" said Bob, aghast. "But I haven't done anything—that I know of."

"You might call it that," said the dean. "Yet during the class rush, which is an honored and loved tradition of our boys, you brutally assaulted young Rimley—hit him in the stomach with all your force, and when he collapsed stamped on him with your feet. Do you call that 'not doing anything?'"

Bob was so astounded that he was speechless for a moment. "But I didn't touch Rimley," he finally protested.

The dean cleared his throat again. "I am sorry you cannot be man enough to be truthful, Manley," he said. "Rimley himself, speaking with the greatest pain, probably internally injured, has told us about it."

"He must be delirious," said Bob. "I swear sir, that I didn't touch him."

"Unfortunately," said the dean, "two other boys—his roommates, as a matter of fact—saw you also, and have testified. They would have no reason to do so, if it were not so. It is the word of these three against yours. I am sorry," he cleared his throat again, "but I am forced to take this action. You will remain on the campus—under surveillance. You will consider yourself suspended, until we have had a formal investigation. It is possible that the police may wish to take a hand."

And so Bob, with tears in his eyes from the unjustness of the accusation, found himself on the campus again. He made his way to his room, almost blindly, and locked himself in. What could it mean—what could it mean? As he buried his head in the pillow, not even undressing, great sobs shook him.

"I tell ye, 'taint true, Rickey—he's a good 'un if ever was one," Joe Thomas was saying.

"I can't believe it myself," said Coach Dale. "I'd swear by Bob Manley. He's a sport, all the way through. And yet—"

"Ye needn't say it," said Thomas. "Ye're going to say 'three words agin one,' as the dean did. 'Well, 'taint so, or I'm a fiddler! And I'm going to learn the truth, I am."

It seemed strange that on Thanksgiving, the day of the Blenton game, the football coach and trainer should be occupying themselves with thoughts of Bob Manley, when there were so many other things to consider in preparing the team for the game. Already the grandstands—for the game was played at Lakeview stadium this year—were filling with students and alumni from both schools. There was a holiday atmosphere. Cheers rent the air; flashes of color were seen all over the field. Bands were playing; choruses sang the songs of both schools.

The student body of Lakeview had grieved over Bob—some for, some against him. It was brutal, bad sportsmanship. And there were the words of three against his alone. Meanwhile, Bob paced the floor of his room, silent and proud, but hurt all over. He should be with his team now, but instead he was alone, branded a brute.

And frankly, in the excitement of this day, Bob was very nearly forgotten. Speculation on the field was rife over the outcome of the game. Both teams were in the pink of condition; as they trotted out on the field, they moved like clockwork.

A coin spun in the air, a piece of gleaming silver. Blenton won the toss, and elected to receive the ball at the south goal. The officials—referees, umpires, linesmen—scampered over the field in their white clothes. A whistle blew . . . the game was on.

It was a memorable struggle. Through the first half, the ball stayed close to the center of the field. One—two—three downs, and Blenton punts. One—two—three downs—Lakeview punts. One—two—three—fourth down—ball goes over for a first down. It was a mighty struggle, brawn against brawn, two splendid machines, evenly matched, determined to win.

"We need a man who can find the holes—who can make gains with the ball," observed Coach Dale from the sidelines. "We need—Manley."

"Ay, and we do, and by golly, we're a-goin' to have him, or I'm a fiddler," answered Joe Thomas. "Somebody lied about that boy—and I'm going to find the one that did it!" And with that he was off, leaving the field, turning his back to the most exciting game of the year.

To Be Concluded Next Week.

FILLING THE BAG.

When Benjamin Franklin was publishing his famous "Poor Richard's Almanac," he once wrote that "an empty bag won't stand on end."

When we are born, in regard to our minds, we are just so many empty bags. We cannot "stand on end."

And it depends on ourselves — on the stuff we fill the bags with—as to how well we'll be able to stand, how well we'll be able to take care of ourselves, in the years later on.

A new session of school has started. Most boys and girls have been raised a grade. They are going to have new lessons, new subjects to study.

School's the place to fill the empty bag that an untutored mind is. It rests with you, for your own sake in the years to come, to fill it as full of worth-while things as you can.

—J. G.

Here Are Rules For Flag Game

Perhaps some of you boys and girls have forgotten the directions for playing the Flag Guessing Game, printed here several weeks ago. For your benefit these directions are reprinted below.

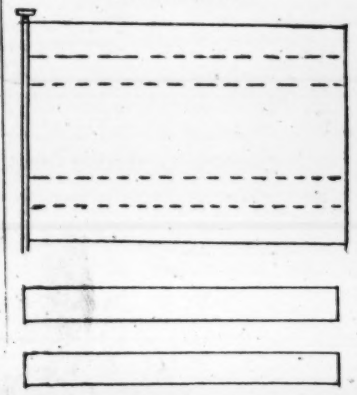

Cut out the flags each week as they are printed in this page. Find out which flag each is, and color it in its proper colors. Then, with these flags and the questiones printed below them, you are ready for the game.

Hand a flag to the first guesser (the person who is playing the game), keeping the questions covered by the hand or a piece of paper. If the guesser is able to name the country by merely looking at the flag, the next question is produced and no points are scored against him. If, however, he cannot name the country by merely looking at the flag he is permitted to look at the first question.

If, with the aid of merely the first question, he is able to guess the right country, one point is scored against him, but if he must look at two questions before guessing right, two points are scored against him. If it takes three questions, he gets three points, if it takes four, he gets four points. If it takes all five questions before he is able to guess, he has five points scored against him. Should the guesser be unable to name the country with the aid of the flag and all five questions he must them "give up" and ten points are scored against him.

A good guesser, familiar with the flags of the different nations, should be able to play the game with no points at all scored against him. After all flags have passed before each guesser, the one with the lowest score wins the game.

Flag Number 5

WHAT COUNTRY:

1. Lost the Rock of Gibraltar to Great Britain in 1704?
2. Is the setting for the story of "Don Quixote?"
3. Leads as a producer of olives?
4. Was the United States at war with in 1898?
5. Lost its famous Armada in 1588?

DIRECTIONS:

After making them the correct colors paste the stripes upon the flag as indicated by the dotted lines.

If you save these flags each week you will soon have a complete set with which to play the game.

What's the Matter?

Answer will be found elsewhere on this page.
